SENATE PREPARES FOR HEARINGS ON BIG REVENUE BILL EARLY THIS WEEK

G. O. P. Leaders Agree With Garner Measure Can Be Passed in Time to Adjourn for Party Conventions in June.

IMPORT LEVIES BOB UP AGAIN

Oil, Copper and Lumber Interests Active — Mills Gives Qualified Indorsement to House Action—Doubts Savings Figures.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 2.—Secretary of the Treasury Mills gave qualified indorsement today to the billion-dollar revenue measure approved by the House. He said there were some "serious defects and discriminations" in the legislation but indorsed it as a victory for sound financial principles. He challenged the assertion of the Democratic House leaders that a [illegible]00,000,000 saving in Government expenditures next year could be made by Congress. This saving is counted on by the House to balance the budget with the aid of the revenue bill.

Senate Republican leaders did agree today, however, with Speaker Garner that a determined effort could put through the fiscal program in time to permit final adjournment of Congress before the June political conventions.

Tax Bill Hearings First.

A triple attack on the Treasury deficit will begin next week in the Senate. It involves enactment of the revenue-raising bill, a slash in appropriations and Government reorganization.

The tax bill has first call. Returning from the White House today Chairman Smoot of the Finance Committee declared that hearings on the bill should begin probably next Wednesday.

He agreed with Mills that the 1933 budget would not quite be balanced by the revenue measure passed by the House but had no suggestion regarding new taxes.

Secretary Mills and Treasury experts will be the first witnesses heard by the Senate Finance Committee. Meanwhile Senate opinion on the House measure has not crystallized but there is every evidence that the legislation will be favorably received.

General Sales Tax Seems Doomed.

The general sales tax so decisively rejected by the House, seems doomed. There is talk of an effort to revive it in the Senate but Watson of Indiana, the Republican leader, predicted little success for the move.

Because of the contention of the administration that the House measure will not balance the budget, new fields of taxation probably will be explored in the Senate.

Declaring that President Hoover cut the Government budget for next year by $370,000,000 in the estimates he submitted to Congress, Secretary Mills said: "There is little farther room for large economies through administration changes alone." He said any real reduction beyond this would have to be done by reorganization and suspension of certain activities during the period of the emergency."

Mills challenged House assertions that cuts in appropriations made there already would bring about a saving of $113,000,000.

"As a matter of fact," he said, "only $[illegible]7,000,000 of the reductions can fairly be said to represent actual savings. The balance, in all human probability, merely represents deferred appropriations.

Wants Budget Really Balanced.

"When the Treasury Department talks of a balanced budget, it means a balanced budget—not one balanced on paper. When it talks of reduced expenditures, it means an actual reduction in the cost of government, not a postponement of an appropriation for a few months.

"There can be no question as to the willingness of the Treasury Department and other departments of the Government to co-operate with Congress in the development of a non-partisan basis of a real program looking to genuine reductions in the cost of government. As a matter of fact, the departments and independent establishments have already submitted suggestions to the appropriate committees for effecting substantial reductions."

Mills said the House, in passing the tax bill, had recognized and

How to Figure Income Tax Under the New Revenue Bill

Married Man Earning $5000 a Year, After Basic Deductions, Would Pay $37.50 on $1875.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 2.—How much will a married man with no dependents have to pay the Government under the income taxes imposed in the new House revenue bill? Here is how you figure it:

Suppose a citizen makes a return on $5000 earned income. All of that isn't taxed, for, first, he subtracts the $2500 allowance permitted married persons. That leaves a taxable $2500.

Next, he receives a fixed deduction of 12½ per cent of the $5000, or $625, for earned income. All incomes of $5000 are allowed this deduction. It also is applicable to those above $5000 but with the provision that no more than $12,000 may be considered earned income. This deduction on the $5000 income would leave $1875 of taxable income.

The $1875 is the figure on which the citizen pays his tax. The rate on the first $4000 of taxable income is 2 per cent, so he pays the Government 2 per cent of $1875 or $37.50.

No matter how high the citizen's income may be, he always may subtract $2500 for being married. But if his earned income is $13,000 or more, he may apply the fixed deduction of 12½ to only $12,000. That is the maximum the bill permits in making this subtraction except when the income comes from corporation dividends. Then the 12½ per cent deduction is allowed against not more than $5000.

Here's an unofficial table of how much cash a citizen will pay Uncle Sam, assuming that the fixed 12½ per cent deduction can be applied against $12,000 (the normal income tax rates are 2 per cent on the first $4000; 4 per cent on the next $4000 and 7 per cent above that. The surtaxes begin with 1 per cent above $6000 and are graduated up to 40 per cent above $100,000):

Income.	Tax Payable.

10,000	210.00

TWO SAVED AFTER CLINGING 45 MINUTES TO UPSET CANOE

They Had Drifted About Mile in Mississippi When Taken Aboard Ferry Boat.

Edward Dohrmann, 908 Dover place, and William Hallau, 4444 Grace avenue, were rescued from the Mississippi River yesterday afternoon after their canoe had overturned. They had started from the Century Boat Club landing. They clung to the overturned craft 45 minutes, buffeted about by the high wind.

Persons at the boat club saw the accident and notified police, who went up the river on the Davis street ferryboat and rescued the two youths with the aid of Harry Zeller, operator of the ferry boat. A rowboat was launched from the ferry to take Dohrmann and Hallau from the water. They had drifted about a mile. At City Hospital it was said they were suffering from exposure.

RAILROAD ASKS FOR 'DRASTIC' RATE REDUCTIONS ON AUTOS

Northern Pacific Seeks to "Win This Class of Business Back From Trucks and Dealers."

By the Associated Press.

ST. PAUL, Minn., April 2.—The Northern Pacific Railway today announced it had asked the Interstate Commerce Commission permission to make "drastic" reductions in freight rates on automobiles.

The decreases, which would be effective from Duluth, Superior and the twin cities to points several hundred miles distant, are sought in an effort to "win this class of business back from trucks and country dealers who are driving new cars to interior communities." In some instances reduction by more than half is asked.

DR. WILSON FOR DRY POLL EVERY 10 YEARS

M. E. Leader Says He Is Certain Prohibitionists Would Win Each Referendum.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 2.—Dr. Clarence True Wilson, general secretary of the Board of Temperance and Public Morals, told the New York conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church today that he was willing to have a referendum on prohibition every 10 years if the people wanted it. He expressed confidence the prohibition forces would always win in such referendums.

Referring to the recent vote in Congress on a prohibition referendum, Wilson said the wets forgot that 52 of the 187 representatives who voted for a referendum "are strong for prohibition."

INQUIRY INTO $26,000 BONDS FOUND ON PAIR SEIZED HERE

Securities Believed to Be Counterfeit Obligations of Wichita, Kan., School Board.

Two men who describe themselves as a Kansas City attorney and a Chicago contractor, formerly of St. Louis, are held by police while an investigation is being made of their possession of $26,000 in bonds believed to be counterfeit obligations of the Wichita, Kan., School Board.

The men were arrested yesterday afternoon shortly after they had registered at a downtown hotel. Detectives Mitchell and Cliff, who were in the lobby, became suspicious of their actions and followed them to their room to question them. The bonds were found beneath a mattress. The attorney refused to make a statement, telling police "they would have to dig for information," but the contractor said the bonds were genuine and had been acquired in a business deal.

Police are still holding $6000 in similar bonds taken from four men who were arrested Jan. 27. The men have been released as Kansas authorities made no move to prosecute, but only asked that the bonds be marked as counterfeit. An attorney for one of the men has insisted the bonds are genuine and should be returned to his client.

PRINCE GEORGE A BOOK CRITIC

Denounces Modern Novels With Emphasis on Sex.

By the Associated Press.

I have read dozens of famous novels, many of which should have been operated upon for gangrene at a point approximately two-thirds of the way through."

P. S. CO. FIGHTING $147,406 CLAIM FOR INCOME TAX

This Is Item in $430,000 Which Its Annual Report Says It Will Be Liable for If U. S. Wins.

SOME DEDUCTIONS ARE DISALLOWED

One Is for Damage Payments Under Receivership — Depreciation Allowance Held Too High.

WASHINGTON, April 2.—The appeal of the St. Louis Public Service Co. from the Government's assessment against it of an additional income tax of $147,406 for the year 1928 is pending before the Federal Tax Appeals Board. No date has been set for a hearing.

This is one of the disputed items making up the $430,000 mentioned in the company's annual report for 1931, just issued, as the amount for which the company will be liable for the four-year period 1928-1931 if the Government's contentions are upheld.

The Internal Revenue Commissioner on Feb. 14, 1931, notified the company, which operates the street railway system in St. Louis, that it had been assessed additional taxes of $18,145. The company appealed to the Tax Board and filed a counter claim for a refund of $55,761. The Government Sept. 16 asserted its claim for $129,261 more, making a total of $147,406 alleged to be still due for the year 1928.

Damage Deduction Rejected

The additional item of $129,261 resulted from the commissioner's disallowance as a deduction from income, of money paid out in 1928 for injuries and damages due to operation of the United Railways Co.

That operation was under a receiver, and was prior to acquisition of the property by the Public Service Co. on Dec. 1, 1927. Satisfaction of claims of this description took $987,061 and an additional $90,115 for salaries and expenses of the claims department. In its return the Public Service Co. deducted these items from income which was taxable at 12 per cent.

The Government takes the view that the company may deduct only the amounts paid out on account of its own operations. Its theory is that the obligation assumed by the Public Service Co. for injuries and damages incurred under the receiver's operation was part of the purchase price of the property, or in other words, a capital investment.

The Government rejects the company's claim of $1,453,682 deductible as depreciation on its property at the rate of 3¼ per cent of $44,728,693, and asserts that only $1,200,000 should be allowed for this item. The Missouri Public Service Commission has allowed the company to make an operating charge of $800,000 a year for depreciation, but the company has continued to claim an average of about $1,500,000 annually.

Other Items Not Allowed.

Other items for which the company made deductions in its 1928 report now disallowed by the Internal Revenue Commissioner include: Net loss of $410,837 suffered by the receiver for the United Railways in the taxable period of Jan. 1 to Nov. 30, 1927; losses of $98,220 on real estate sold; contribution of $2500 to the St. Louis Industrial Club; losses of St. Louis Bus Co., a United Railways subsidiary, amounting to $112,322 in 1926 and $114,950 in 1927, and depreciation of busses, $15,648.

If the Government wins in the pending case, it will no doubt assert claims for additional taxes for subsequent years.

The company's attorney in the tax cases is Bernhard Knollenberg of New York City.

Contingent Federal Tax Liability Mentioned in Annual Report.

The statement in the Public Service Co.'s annual report with reference to a contingent Federal tax liability, referred to in the foregoing dispatch, is as follows:

"Additional Federal taxes have been asserted by the Treasury Department for the years 1928 and 1929, and are now in litigation. The issues in dispute, if ultimately determined adversely, would involve total liability for taxes and interest of approximately $430,000 for the four-year period, 1928 to 1931, inclusive."

At the office of the Public Service Co. it was said that if the Government were upheld in its disallowance of injury and damage payments due to the receiver's operations, the cost to the company in additional taxes for the four years

EVIDENCE THAT NEW ISTHMUS IS FORMING IN WEST INDIES

Geologists Think It Will Connect North and South America.

By the Associated Press.

PRINCETON, N. J., April 2.—Another isthmus connecting North and South America, by way of the West Indies, may result from movements of the earth's crust in the Caribbean, say scientists of Princeton University.

An expedition from the university found that the islands forming a curving chain from Haiti to South America are gradually being pushed higher above the sea.

Dr. Richard F. Field of the department of geology, who directed the expedition, said: "The results seem to show that the structure of the West Indies is the result primarily of mountain-building processes that have extended through a long period of the earth's history.

Another conclusion of the expedition was that two recent earthquakes that centered about Santiago, Cuba, probably were due to fundamental differences between the geologic structure of Cuba and the land southeast of it.

Republican "Iron Front" Plans 10,000 Mass Meetings; Election Week Away.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, April 2.—Former Crown Prince Friedrich Wilhelm today pledged his support to Adolf Hitler, presidential candidate of the National Socialists, who would repudiate the treaty of Versailles.

Friedrich Wilhelm, hitherto more closely allied with the Nationalist party than with the Hitlerites, announced his position as all political Germany was preparing for a week of strenuous campaigning for the run-off election a week from tomorrow, in which the chief contenders are Hitler and President Paul von Hindenburg.

The Republican "iron front," supporting the President for re-election, is ready for a vigorous campaign. Ten thousand mass meetings will be held. Fleets of motor trucks and airplanes will spread throughout Germany countless handbills urging the voters to make the Von Hindenburg turnout so impressive that Hitler will be decisively smashed. Here is the "Iron Front" appeal: "Hitler means: Inflation, war, distress, hunger and misery for the whole nation."

LINDBERGH BABY NEGOTIATOR OFF ON ANOTHER TRIP

John H. Curtis "On Business for the Case," Says Admiral Burrage, Spokesman for Men.

NO DETAILS GIVEN OUT ON MISSION

New Jersey State Police Reiterate That They Attach No Significance to Activities.

By the Associated Press.

NORFOLK, Va., April 2.—John Hughes Curtis, one of three negotiators for the return of the kidnaped Lindbergh child, slipped away from Norfolk today on a mission announced by the intermediaries to be in the interest of the negotiations.

Rear Admiral Guy H. Burrage, retired, spokesman for the three men, said that Curtis, a Norfolk boat builder, was "off on business for the case," but he refused to comment further on the matter.

Curtis, whose negotiations for the return of the infant son of Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh, has twice before carried him away on mysterious trips, presumably left the city this morning. At his home it was reported that he had left the house about 7:30 or 8 o'clock.

One week ago, Curtis suddenly left the city on a two-day trip in connection with efforts of the Norfolk men to negotiate the return of the Lindbergh baby. On his return he said that he was encouraged with the results of his trip and that the negotiations had reached a "semi-final" stage.

The day after Curtis made his trip, Dean Dobson-Peacock, one of his associates, journeyed by plane and motor to Hopewell N. J., to confer with Col. Charles A. Lindbergh. On his return he announced the flyer had requested the Norfolk intermediaries to carry on with their work.

It first became known that negotiations were under way here for the return of the baby, kidnaped more than a month ago, after the three intermediaries visited Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh on March 22.

In his 9 p. m. bulletin, Schwarzkopf said "the Coast Guard has not reported any of its activities to these headquarters and we have no report that the Lindbergh baby is being held on a small boat beyond the 12-mile limit."

He said the police were following "definite leads which have not proven negative at this time," but added that their nature could not now be divulged.

He said no reduction had been made or contemplated in "the number of investigators attached to these headquarters."

State Police Say They See No Significance in Activities.

By the Associated Press.

HOPEWELL, N. J., April 2.—State police reiterated today that neither they nor Col. Charles A. Lindbergh saw any significance in the activities of three Norfolk (Va.) citizens who are trying to bring about the return of the kidnaped Lindbergh baby.

A dispatch from Norfolk saying the three had announced a new development in their purported negotiations with the abductors brought the statement from Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, State police head.

In answer to a question as to whether Salvatore Spital and Irving Bitz, underworld go-betweens named by Col. Lindbergh, had reported failure in their attempt to trace the kidnapers, Schwarzkopf replied he had received no information from them.

The United States Coast Guard and immigration officials scoffed at a report that they had information the baby was being held on board a yacht at sea and that a transfer from one boat to another was to be made.

TELLS SENATORS OF AL CAPONE CASE

GEORGE E. Q. JOHNSON.

SAYS SEER WROTE MRS. BORDLEY'S 'QUEEN' LETTER

Mrs. J. W. Tatum Testifies Vision of Mary, Scotch Monarch, Was Dictated by Psychic.

The "Mary, Queen of Scots letter" of Mrs. Blanche Bordley, describing a vision of the hapless monarch in two sojourns in the flesh, was identified yesterday as merely the account of a "psychic" seer who needed money and was getting it by having trances for her acquaintances.

Such was the testimony of Mrs. J. Warren Tatum of Los Angeles, wife of a nephew of Mrs. Bordley, who was a witness in Circuit Judge Rutledge's court in defense of Mrs. Bordley's will. Mrs. Bordley's sister, Mrs. Adele L. Tatum of Los Angeles, is contesting the will on the ground that Mrs. Bordley was of unsound mind when she left the larger part of a $1,000,000 estate for incurables.

The account of the vision, which told of the unhappy Queen, Mary, weeping on top of a tower as she thought over an evil deed in a previous life, was written by Mrs. Bordley after it had been detailed to her by the "psychic," Mrs. Tatum related. Asked to define a "psychic," she said, "When you are a psychic, you think you know a lot about things you don't."

Learned of 'Letter' in 1923.

The witness said she first had learned of the existence of the "letter" when she breakfasted with Mrs. Bordley at her Los Angeles apartment in 1923, along with Mrs. Adele Donovan Chambers, a niece of Mrs. Bordley.

"After breakfast, Mrs. Bordley and Adele (Mrs. Chambers) went ahead with some work they were doing," the witness said. "Adele was teaching and lecturing on Rosicrucian beliefs and was getting a lecture ready at the time. One or the other brought up the name of Lelia Parker, a woman who had interested Adele in Rosicrucian work.

"I said to Mrs. Bordley, 'What do you know about Lelia Parker?' and she said, 'What do you know?' I told her I knew a lot, that Lelia Parker had read my son's horoscope for me and had scared me out of a year's growth. Lelia was financially embarrassed at the time and I had paid $5 for the horoscope because Adele asked me to help her. Lelia was not licensed to tell fortunes or anything like that so I sent the money by Adele.

Vision Dictated by 'Psychic.'

"I asked Mrs. Bordley, 'What has she done for you?' She told me she and Adele had been to see her and that Lelia, after taking a bracelet or some trinket of Mrs. Bordley's, rubbed it over her forehead and went into a trance. That was when she had the vision and Mrs. Bordley wrote it down.

"'What did she tell you?' I asked. 'Oh, I am a highborn lady!' she said, and we both laughed about it. I said, 'That's better than being a Pekinese dog, isn't it?' Adele was highly displeased at the way Mrs. Bordley scoffed at her friend."

Mrs. Tatum related that Mrs. Bordley referred to making a copy of the "vision" which she had packed in a trunk, but told her, "I'll show it to you sometime." When the witness, who had identified the handwriting in

PROSECUTOR TELLS OF HIS COMPROMISE WITH CAPONE

District Attorney G. E. Q. Johnson Before Senate Group Says Wilkerson Approved Recommendation for Short Term.

ATTORNEY GENERAL WAS KEPT ADVISED

Jurist's Unexpected Decision to Force Gangster to Stand Trial Laid to Wide Publicity Given Sentence Agreed Upon.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 2.—District Attorney George E. Q. Johnson of Chicago, recently told the Senate Judiciary Committee in executive session the story of the negotiations with "Scarface" Al Capone and his brother Ralph which preceded their convictions in income tax fraud cases.

Johnson's testimony was given at a hearing on the nomination of Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson of Chicago to be Judge of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals. The story of how the Government trapped the Capone brothers and other gangsters was told in detail to the committee. This has just been made public.

Johnson's story of building the case against Capone follows closely the story told by a Post-Dispatch correspondent at Chicago in the editions of June 7, 1931.

Johnson gave details of the much publicized "compromise" under which Capone was to plead guilty and receive a comparatively short term.

When Judge Wilkerson rejected the agreement with Capone, the gang chief stood trial, was convicted and sentenced to 11 years at Leavenworth.

Capone's attorney came to him, Johnson said, about May, 1931 and said the gangster knew he had been indicted and wanted to know if the District Attorney would consider a plea of guilty with a recommendation.

"I told him," Johnson testified. "I could not tell at that time as it was a case of great public interest.

Made Trip to Washington.

"About the middle of May I came to Washington on official business. We had subpenaed a great number of witnesses and our grand jury testimony developed when they were questioned after they had testified, they had gone back and talked to Capone, so Capone was well advised what was going on through these people themselves and they were people of very low order, prostitutes, gunmen, killers and dozens of gamblers, all people living outside the law.

"I reported the matter briefly to the Attorney-General and asked him whether I should proceed on my own initiative as I had always done, or whether I should report because of the great public interest in the case. The upshot was he directed me then to keep Assistant Attorney-General Youngquist advised."

After that, Johnson said, he frequently called Youngquist on the telephone to keep him advised of developments and "once or twice" conferred with him in Chicago.

He said he also had a "number" of conferences with Capone's counsel.

"There were a great number of problems in the case that made me think it was advisable to make a recommendation," Johnson testified. He pointed out some of their evidence was in a letter, the purpose of which was to offer a compromise and that presented "legal problems."

Conferred With Judge.

Johnson then told of his conferences with Judge Wilkerson over the compromise plan, which the Judge finally rejected.

Pointing out that the pleas of guilty were entered about June 16, he said:

"Very early in June I first went to see Judge Wilkerson. I told him about the difficulties we were encountering before the grand jury. I told him about the things we feared and I did explain to him my very great anxiety and I want to say that my great objective was to get Al Capone in the penitentiary, because my experience had always been that once these leaders have been imprisoned they never amounted to anything.

"Judge Wilkerson then, I do not know what consideration he gave it—but he said: 'You had better think that over carefully.' It was

FOUR ARRESTED FREED ON BOND

They Are Charles Spicuzza, Sam Cooperman, J. J. O'Brien and J. P. Kent—Grand Jury to Reconvene

With the trail of the stolen Hannibal bonds leading to a dead man, St. Louis police and the Marion County prosecutor, aided by Chicago investigators, are trying to reach persons now living who were guiltily involved in marketing the loot, and the actual perpetrators of the $140,000 Hannibal bank robbery of last October.

At the time when the inquiry shifted back to St. Louis yesterday, after a three-day grand jury session in Hannibal, the chief weight of accusation lay against Abe Cooperman, killed more than two months ago. He appears as the primary "fence" in placing on the market the nearly $100,000 of bonds taken by the robbers.

Of those concerned in handling the bonds, all now agree in placing the responsibility on Cooperman. Charles Spicuzza, who gave an $18,000 block of the bonds to Howard Sidener, former Circuit Attorney, to sell, says he got the bonds from Cooperman as security for a $4000 loan. Eugene Epstein, who sold $7500 of the bonds to a St. Louis purchaser, says Cooperman made him a cat's-paw in the matter, and that this caused him to shoot and kill Cooperman Jan. 26. Harry Sodini, St. Louis and Chicago hotel proprietor, says he got from Cooperman the $5000 of bonds which he posted as collateral for a loan, but had no knowledge that they were stolen.

Four Placed Under Bond.

Four men were placed under bond in Hannibal yesterday, following the issuance of informations against them by Prosecuting Attorney Rendlen Friday evening. The informations, charging the four with receiving stolen property, were based on the statements made to Rendlen by Sidener, Cooperman's widow, and other witnesses. These statements were heard also by the grand jury, which has returned no indictments so far in the case, but will reconvene within a few days.

Spicuzza, St. Louis fruit dealer and gangsters' bondsman, named in one of the informations, was placed under $25,000 bond, with Joe Cusumano of St. Louis as bondsman. The same bond was required of Sam Cooperman, brother of the deceased Abe, who received from Abe's widow a package said to contain bonds, and who says he destroyed the package. Jack Levy of St. Louis signed his bond.

Joseph J. O'Brien of Chicago, previously charged in a warrant with participation in the robbery, was named in an information on the stolen property charge, and is under $10,000 bond, signed by Levy. The fourth man named, James P. Kent, bond salesman, who went to Decatur, Ill., and found a purchaser for the bonds marketed by Sidener, was permitted to sign his own $5000 bond.

Two other informations, making the technical charge of conspiracy, were issued against Mrs. Abe Cooperman and Herman Cooperman, a brother of the late Abe. They were permitted to sign their own $2000 bonds, and the procedure was intended chiefly to insure their attendance as witnesses if they are wanted further. Another brother, Albert Cooperman, has been finally excused as a witness.

Former Circuit Attorney Sidener, chief witness in the inquiry at Hannibal from Wednesday to Friday, said in his first statement that he had heard that Spicuzza, before getting him to handle the bonds which he sold in Decatur, had endeavored to get another man to handle the bonds, but that the first man had refused.

Spicuzza confirmed this when he said, in his statement Friday evening, that he first asked his lawyer, Albert Johnson, to sell the bonds, but that Johnson declined. This was verified and further explained by D. Arthur Bowman, St. Louis bond dealer, who told the Hannibal prosecutor that Johnson gave him a list of bonds, and asked him whether they were desirable purchases. Bowman says he supposed Johnson was thinking of buying the bonds.

"Hold" Order Against Bonds.

Bowman said he looked up the bonds, and found a "hold" order recorded against them. Such an order means not necessarily that bonds were stolen, but that there is some reason for special inquiry before purchase. "I told Johnson he would better not buy them," Bowman said. Bowman was not required to appear before the grand jury, the prosecutor being satisfied that the facts were as stated by him.

On other points, the stories of Spicuzza and Sidener differ widely. Sidener said Spicuzza owed him $800, and that he took out that amount from the $5000 that he got at a St. Louis bank by cashing the draft given him by Leo Bailey of Decatur as first payment on the bonds. Spicuzza says he did not owe Sidener a dime, and that the close friendship, which Sidener charges him with betraying, never existed. He signed bonds for some of Sidener's clients in the criminal courts, he said, and had thrown some business in Sidener's direction, but had never been hunting or fishing with him, as Sidener seemed to suggest when he spoke of their common tastes in sportsmanship.

Spicuzza said he took $4200 and let Sidener have the $800, though he considered it too much, as he only expected to get for himself a little more than the $4000 he had lent Cooperman on the bonds. While, according to Sidener and Bailey, an additional $7000 or more was to be paid later, Spicuzza said he knew nothing of this, and that if he had received any more, he would have sent it to Cooperman's widow.

Spicuzza Contradicts Sidener.

Sidener said Spicuzza told him, in their talk last month, that the bonds were picked up by him at a bargain from an estate which had been settled "in the East." Spicuzza said Cooperman told him something about getting the bonds from an estate, and that probably he had repeated this to Sidener, but that, to the best of his recollection, he told Sidener that he got the bonds from Cooperman.

The fact that Cooperman handled stolen bonds from the Hannibal bank was made generally known by the circumstances of his death, at Epstein's hands, in January.

"Sidener was at my home last Tuesday night," Spicuzza said yesterday. "When he said he was not able to get in touch with me he's not telling the truth. He told me he was going to Hannibal, and I said, 'I guess I better go up there, too.'

"He said, 'No, you won't be needed.' I'd have been there right from the start if it hadn't been for that fellow." Spicuzza surrendered at Hannibal Friday noon, while St. Louis police were looking for him.

Sidener has announced that he will pay the Decatur bank, on which Bailey's draft was drawn, the $800 received by him, and Spicuzza's lawyer, Johnson, says Spicuzza will pay in the $4200, though Spicuzza protests that this will leave him without remuneration for the $4000 which he says he lent the deceased Cooperman.

In the grand jury inquiry at Hannibal, Emory Smith, Assistant Attorney-General of Illinois, and counsel for the Bankers' Association of that State, took an important part. He questioned the witnesses before they gave their testimony to the grand jury, and was in close touch with Prosecuting Attorney Rendlen throughout. He will be back at Hannibal when the inquiry is resumed. Detective-Sergeant Furst of Chicago, on the staff of Pat Roche, investigator for the State's Attorney's office, was with him.

The Hannibal inquiry is one of several which Smith and Furst are directing, into the disposal of bonds stolen in several robberies. Smith announces that about $50,000 of the stolen Hannibal bonds have been recovered, including the $30,500 accounted for by the Cooperman-Epstein, Cooperman-Sodini, and Spicuzza-Sidener incidents. Smith, Furst and Prosecutor Rendlen conferred with Circuit Attorney Miller here Friday night.

SENATE PREPARES FOR TAX HEARINGS EARLY THIS WEEK

affirmed the necessity of balancing the budget, from which principle there could be no turning back. He added that he hoped the defects in the bill would be corrected in the Senate and the amendments concurred in by the House.

In preparing the bill, Mills said, neither the Ways and Means Committee nor the House had before it a concrete program for definite reduction in expenditures and that such a concrete program was imperatively necessary.

Plans Cut in Appropriations.

Chairman Jones called the Senate Appropriations Committee to meet Monday to begin rewriting the appropriation bills for the Interior, State, Justice, Commerce and Labor Departments to comply with the Senate's order for 10 per cent cuts in these funds. "We can make the 10 per cent cuts all right, but I am beginning to wonder whether more damage will be done than is accomplished in savings," Jones said. He expressed grave doubt that Congress would be able to pare down next year's appropriations by much more than $100,000,000.

Import Levies Planned.

Import levies to be sought in the revenue bill to aid the lumber, oil and copper states, again will return tariff debate to the Senate, which has just put approval on the Democratic tariff program.

Spokesmen for the producing states, most of them west of the Mississippi, have given notice they will campaign for taxes on foreign products, contending this is the way to help the domestc industry.

Party lines are split on this issue, with some Republicans officially on record for import taxes and Senator Hayden (Dem.), Arizona, ready to fight for a levy on copper.

Senator Vandenberg (Rep.), Michigan, has notified the Senate he felt a copper tariff was necessary to prevent the destruction of the American producers.

For Tax on Oil Imports.

Senator Shortridge (Rep.), California, plans to attempt to increase the House levy of 42 cents a barrel on petroleum imports to $1 and says if he cannot get $1 he will demand a tax of 2 cents a gallon, or 84 cents a barrel.

Senator Thomas (Dem.), Oklahoma, long a campaigner for an oil tariff, disagrees with the Californian, giving this explanation: "The revenue bill should be framed to get the maximum revenue; to that end it should encourage imports to add to revenues. This is not a tariff bill and should not be treated as one."

Senator Jones (Rep.) Washington, says he will fight for wood pulp and lumber import taxes, along with a levy on shingles. Support is expected for this move from the other Senators of the producing states, including Maine.

Hopeful of Finish by June.

Speaker Garner today expressed the opinion that, with the tax bill disposed of by the House, Congress would adjourn by June 10 at the latest if the Senate showed the same speed as the House had shown. The Republican convention opens June 14 at Chicago, and the Democratic convention June 27.

"Ninety per cent of the House is in favor of adjournment before the conventions," Garner said. "I have canvassed both sides of the House and both Democrats and Republicans are anxious to complete business by the first of June."

Although Garner said that "we are being rushed for time," he added he felt there was no necessity for Congress to come back during the summer after a recess for the conventions because all the work could be done by June 10.

SAYS SEER WROTE MRS. BORDLEY'S 'QUEEN' LETTER

the "letter," added, "That's the copy she made!" her statement was ruled out because she indicated she had not seen the document previously.

Questioned about $1000 pairs of shoes supposedly bought in keeping with the elderly widow's queenly delusions, Mrs. Tatum corroborated other defense testimony that the shoes were part of a treatment for fallen arches and bunions.

"Once before we went on a mountain trip, Mrs. Bordley took the shoes off to rest her feet, and my husband sad, 'Why I could put those one!' Mrs. Tatum recounted. "Mrs. Bordley shouted to him, 'Keep your feet out of them! They're big enough already.' There were three pairs of the shoes and they not only had arch supports but actual casts in them. She paid $1000 and thought she had been beaten at that."

Mrs. Tatum testified that her husband's brother, Robert Tatum, had obtained $10,000 from Mrs. Bordley on one occasion because of despondency over business difficulties. Later, according to the witness, Robert Tatum's wife went to Mrs. Bordley weeping and asked for $8000 more on the same pretext.

"I saw Mrs. Bordley shortly after that occasion," Mrs. Tatum said, "and she told me she was never more infuriated in her life. After she had given Robert's wife, Margaret, $1000, she went down on the elevator and found Robert was waiting on the sidewalk outside for the money. She said, 'I'm through with him. I'm tired of his actions.'"

Mrs. Bordley Liked Biography.

Mrs. Bordley was fond of reading biography, disliked two books which pried into the private lives of George Washington and President Harding, and had in her possession two volumes called "Getting the Best of Your Nerves" and "Glimpses of Light," according to Mrs. Tatum.

The witness said she never had seen Mrs. Edna Percy of Los Angeles, who told of Mrs. Bordley's supposed occult adventures, in Mrs. Bordley's company. She referred to Mrs. Percy as an "amateur elocutionist."

An evaluation of the Tatum family by Mrs. Bordley was read to the jury in the deposition of Mrs. Anne H. Effinger of New York City, who was Mrs. Bordley's traveling companion for the last five years of her life.

Mrs. Effinger said Mrs. Bordley called the Tatums "a very curious family."

Clifford Tatum was described as "quite a success, although irritable and highly extravagant." Warren was a "godson and favorite, with such a nice disposition." Robert was "very dissipated and had never amounted to anything." Frank "had a bright mind, but had had an unfortunate break with the family. Eugene was "not fully developed."

Clifford, Robert and Warren Tatum were in the courtroom when the deposition was read and sat in stolid silence.

Discussing the will, in which Mrs. Bordley left $315,000 to relatives, friends and employes and various charities, Mrs. Effinger said the widow had told her she did not feel called upon to leave a great amount of money to the Tatums.

Forecasts Will's Provisions.

"She said Mr. Bordley (Daniel C. Bordley, a tobacco manufacturer) had worked hard for the money and that she would leave most of it to charity as they had agreed," Mrs. Effinger testified. "She said the disposal of the money was a terrible responsibility and that she was going to establish a trust fund for chronic invalids because she had seen so many turned away from hospitals.

Relating that Mrs. Bordley in extensive travels over the world always had insisted on a motto of "spend well and leave well," Mrs. Effinger said she had increased the principal of estate by her savings, made shrewd business deals and checked her expenditures closely. "She always made quite a to-do when she was overcharged," the witness said.

Testimony, which has been underway for more than two weeks, will be resumed tomorrow. Court attaches say that it is the first case in the history of the St. Louis Circuit Court which has been carried over from one term of court to the next. A stipulation for that purpose was agreed on by attorneys before the start of the case.

Echoes of House Tax Fight; Missourians in Spotlight, Garner's Prestige Suffers

Dyer Does Double About Face—La Guardia Emerges as Strongest Figure—The Administration Coup That Failed.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 2.

THE colorful struggle over the tax bill, in addition to providing the most excitng spectacle which the House has produced since wartime, is likely to have important political echoes. For example, it will be interesting to watch what happens next November, if anything, to St. Louis' two Republican Congressmen, Dyer and Niedringhaus, for voting for the tremendously unpopular and now discredited sales tax. Dyer's course was extraordinary. Four days before the committee of the whole voted on the proposal he told this writer he would vote for it because there was "nothing else to do." The morning after the vote was taken he told another Post-Dispatch correspondent he was absent during the ballot but would have voted against the tax if he had been there, adding that he was "always against such a tax." Finally when the House had a record vote on the tax Dyer voted for it.

Even more diverting was the performance given by Dyer and Niedringhaus in connection with the provision to tax malt, wort, grape concentrate, coal, coke and gasoline. This section was of especial interest in St. Louis, because if finally adopted it will produce large increases in the prices of materials used in making home brew. The gasoline and oil taxes—in reality tariffs—would permit producers to exact more than $150,000,000 a year from the consuming public, it was said during the debate. Their adoption was the result of a log-rolling trade among members from oil-producing and coal-producing states. On the final roll call Dyer and Niedringhaus voted for all these taxes and tariffs. But when the roll call was finished, and the count showed that their votes were not needed to keep that section in the bill, they asked and obtained permission from the Speaker to change over and be recorded as voting against the taxes.

MISSOURI Representatives played unusually conspicuous parts throughout the battle. Cochran of St. Louis, Lozier, Cannon Nelson and Johnson, all Democrats, joined vigorously in the attack on the sales tax, and contended strenuously for increased taxes on wealth. Cochran coined the catchy phrase that the sales tax would hit "almost everything except Bibles, pig knuckles and admissions to the breadline." Johnson offered the proposal to deprive American corporations of the right to deduct from their Federal taxes the taxes they pay to foreign Governments, and succeeded once in having it passed, although it was knocked out later. Cannon made a hard but futile fight to repeal the provision which enables affiliated corporations to make a "consolidated return," under which they subtract the losses of one company from the profits of another. The House did make the rate slightly higher on consolidated returns. Lozier delivered one of the most effective speeches made against the sales tax. All the Democrats in the Missouri delegation with the exception of Milligan, voted against that proposal. All four Missouri Republicans, including Hopkins and Manlove, voted for it.

During the uprising which came to a climax in the rejection of the sales tax, the insurgent coalition wrote into the bill substantial increases in the taxes on large inheritances. All these increases were retained except one, on which the House in its final vote reversed the committee of the whole. The people to benefit from that reversal are persons with net incomes of more than $100,000 a year. Under the Swing amendment the rates would have ranged upward until income above $5,000,000 would have paid 65 per cent. Under the rates finally adopted by the House, income above $100,000 a year will pay a flat 40 per cent. Here again Dyer, Niedringhaus, Manlove and Milligan voted for the lower taxes on incomes of more than $100,000 a year, while the remainder of the Missouir members voted for the higher rates. Observers here will be surprised if the Senate does not restore the higher rates to the bill.

A PECLIAR phose of the fight over tse surtax rates consisted of the failure to get reliable estimates from the Treasury Department of the additional revenue which the Swing rates would yield. Secretary Mills' figures not only fell far short of those calculated by other experts, but his own estimates conflicted with one another. From sources which have been found reliable in the past, it was stated that the expected increase would be about $95,000,000 a year, as contrasted with Mills' statement it would not exceed $30,000,000. Two curious and contradictory arguments were offered against high surtaxes. One was that they would produce very little revenue because the big incomes "are no longer there," and the other was that they would take so much money from large taxpayers that they would take their capital out of industry and invest it in tax-exempt securities. In contending that high surtaxes would prompt the people who own the country's industry to sell

Police Expect Arrest of Three Abductors — Physician Denies Any Money Was Paid for Freedom.

Chief of Police Thomas McCann said the attorney, in his confession, said he had no knowledge of the kidnapers until last Monday when Betson came to him and asked him to carry on negotiations with the Parker family.

Pursifull, who filed for the office of State's Attorney this spring but withdrew, said his agency fee was to have been 10 per cent of the ransom. Sergt. Oliver Kempster of the State police said no ransom had been paid. The attorney, in his confession, said he had intended to return his fee to the Parker family.

The physician was released by his abductors, police think, after the kidnapers learned authorities were closing in on them.

The capture of three kidnapers of Dr. Parker was anticipated tonight by Chief of Police McCann. Kidnaping for ransom is punishable by death in Illinois.

Chief McCann was left in full charge of the investigation tonight with the withdrawal of agents of Chicago's "Secret Six" from the case. Alexander Jamie, chief investigator for the Chicago agency, left for his home, stating the matter was purely local and could be handled by the police.

Both prisoners maintained through hours of questioning that they had no part in the abduction.

Dr. Parker remained in seclusion at his home, and his son, James W. Parker Jr., said the physician was very weak from his ordeal, his eyes under particular strain because of the long periods he was forced to be blindfolded. Part of the time he was allowed to read magazines.

The Parker family made known that it would give all possible aid in the capture of the kidnapers, to whom no ransom was paid. No attempt was made to take Dr. Parker in search of the house where he was held, but the police said they had information which they expected would lead to arrests.

USES CANE ON WINDSHIELD OF HIS WIFE'S AUTOMOBILE

Herman L. Weiss Says Man He Saw in Car With Her Fled.

Herman L. Weiss, 6222 Greer avenue, St. Louis County, an insurance agent, was taken to police headquarters yesterday after he had used his walking cane to smash the windshield and windows of a parked automobile occupied by his wife, and his 17-year-old daughter, in front of 1114 Locust street.

His wife, Mrs. Goldie Weiss, and the daughter, Hermene, were taken to the City Hospital for treatment for cuts. Weiss was released when his wife declined to prosecute him.

Weiss said that passing on a street car he saw his wife, daughter and a man in the automobile which he had presented to his wife two years ago. He left the car at the next stop and started toward the automobile. He said he was so enraged when he saw the man flee that he began beating the windows of the automobile with his cane.

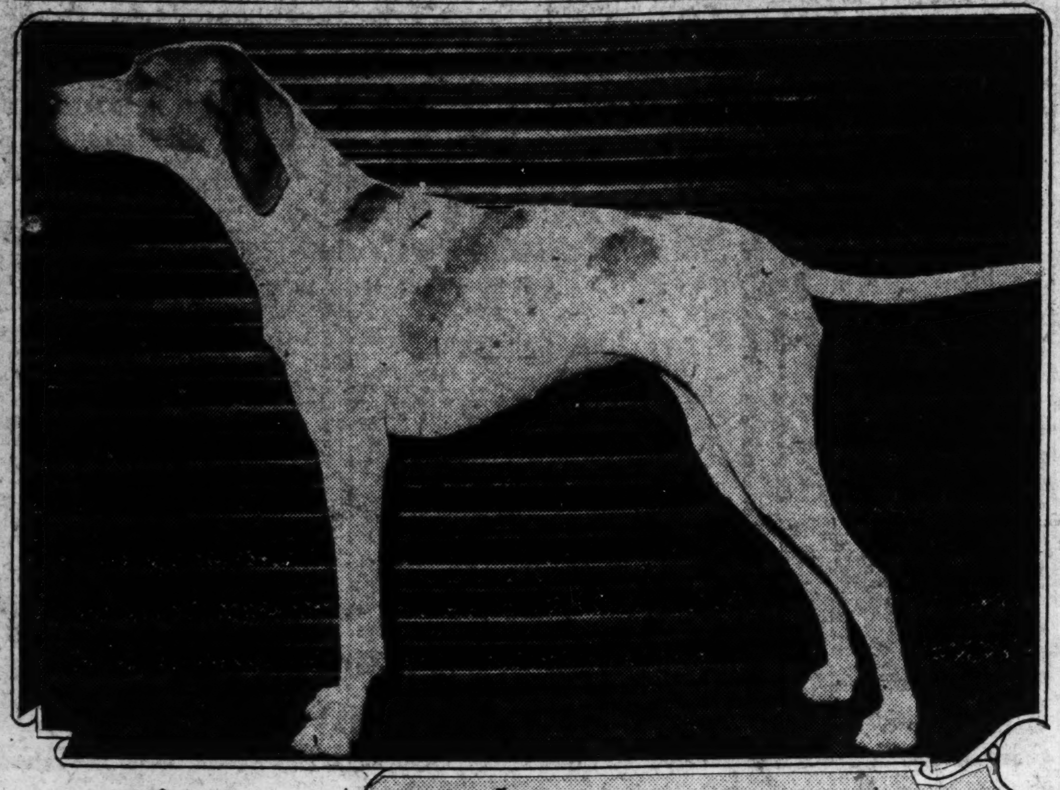
Best of Breeds at the Dog Show



TWO of the champions of yesterday's dog show. Nancolleth Beryl of Giralda, imported English pointer of Mrs. Geraldine Rockfeller Dodge, was adjudged best pointer in the show, making her ninth championship out of 11 shows. Below, Emson's Joe, selected as the best wire-haired pointing Griffon in the show, owned by S. J. Kipping, 5351 Arsenal street.

FINEST DOG IN SHOW TO BE PICKED TONIGHT

Final Event of Exhibition With Choice to Be Made from 611.

The last of the dogs in the Mississippi Valley Kennel Club show will be walked before their judges this forenoon in the east exhibition building of The Arena and tonight the annual exhibition will close with the selection of the best dog in the show, blue ribbon event of the year to scores of fanciers.

Intent spectators were packed five deep about the three judging rings yesterday as the judges observed all of the numerous points which go to make a champion. To most of the spectators no difference could be discerned between some of the dogs but to the judges even a tiny twist of an ear might mean the losing point in a championship tally.

Their task tonight — that of choosing the best of the 611 entries, from all over the country—will be especially delicate since some of the breed champions already named have been pronounced exceptional even among champions. Selection of the champion of the show is scheduled to take place at 9:15 p. m. The honor carries with it the President's Cup.

Best Pointer in England.

One of the outstanding entrants who is surrounded always by visitors is Nancolleth Beryl, imported English pointer of Mrs. Geraldine Rockefeller Dodge. This dog was adjudged the best pointer in England last November and has won the championship of nine out of 11 shows in this country, being defeated once by a brother. It occupies a hotel room at night with McClure Halley, secretary to Mrs. Dodge who maintains kennels on a 7000-acre New Jersey estate.

"Lucky Boy," the dog rescued recently from an ice floe in the Mississippi River, found a home last night. The Humane Society of Missouri presented him to Mr. and Mrs. George Warren, Florissant, Mo. who saw the dog's plight and notified the society.

The entertainment program, including high jumping dogs, will be held at 2:15 and at 8:15 p. m. The night program will include the finals in the high jump contest.

Cecil West, who acts as a fugitive in the trained police dog act, suffered an accidental bite over the left eye yesterday afternoon when he exposed his face as Baron von Weiland, German shepherd, owned by Henry F. Owen, 6738 Raymond avenue, sprang on his heavily padded body. The wound was cauterized. West had assisted in training the dog for five years.

Judging of Boston terrier, Pekingese, St. Bernards, Russian wolfhounds, bull terriers, and English springer spaniels will begin at 10:30 o'clock this morning.

Included in yesterday's awards were the following champions:

SUING TO RECOVER $104,000 ADVANCED TO TROLLEY LINE

Suits for an aggregate of $104,000 for money advanced to cover losses of the East St. Louis, Columbia and Waterloo Railway Co. since 1930, were filed in Circuit Court at Belleville yesterday by the principal owners of this short trolley line.

The plaintiffs are Edward W. Foristel, St. Louis lawyer and politician; Charles A. Lemp, St. Louis banker and politician, and Mrs. Marte Donk Finch.

Foristel and Lemp, who have owned nearly all the stock since 1923, each claim $50,000 and Mrs. Finch $4000, averring the company has not paid its promissory notes. Their counsel, Josiah Whitnel, East St. Louis, said they desired to obtain judgment on the notes and that the company might be reorganized. There is no mortgage on the road, he added.

The company plans to apply to the Illinois Commerce Commission next Tuesday for permission to abandon its unprofitable passenger service between East St. Louis and Waterloo, Ill., but it wants to retain freight service between East St. Louis and Waterloo.

PROMISED CREDITORS PAY FROM FRANK WILL

Dr. Hansel Testifies He and Wife Told Debtors She Expected to Share in Estate.

Some creditors of Dr. and Mrs. French K. Hansel were told they expected to settle with money coming to her from the Nathan Frank estate, according to depositions taken yesterday in Mrs. Hansel's $44,000 claim representing, she alleges, a $5000 real estate commission and $39,000 she gave Frank to invest for her.

Many of those bills have since been paid, said Dr. Hansel, a throat specialist, but, under questioning of Randolph Laughlin of counsel for the estate, he listed creditors in the amount of nearly $4000 to whom he or Mrs. Hansel had promised payment from those funds.

In connection with a $326 bill for office decorations in 1929, two years before Frank's death, he said his recollection was that he told the collector he "expected interest on securties from Mr. Frank." At another point in his testimony he explained, "We always bunched my income with the interest and paid them out together."

Laughlin, checking off a list of those to whom Dr. Hansel said he had mentioned the expected funds, asked if the promise was still in effect, and Dr. Hansel replied with vigor, "Yes; of course it still stands."

He said that he had repeated it to some of them since last June. Frank died last April, and Mrs. Hansel's claim was not filed until November. Among the debts which Dr. Hansel said he and Mrs. Hansel had agreed to pay with money coming to her were $1200 apartment rent, $400 or $500 office rent, $300 to a fellow-physician, $200 to $300 to a club, "probably more than $1000" to a relative, and $800 to a bank.

He gave his deposition following that of Walter N. Barnett of 7045 Northmoor drive, University City, who said he had been retained to collect the $326 bill for decorations in 1929. Barnett, who is 82 years old, related that he was co-pilot on the Natchez in the historic race with the Robert E. Lee.

Dr. Hansel "always claimed his wife was going to inherit a big sum of money from her uncle," Capt. Barnett asserted.

"Did he say Mrs. Hansel was a niece of Nathan Frank?" asked Victor Packman of estate counsel, and he replied, "So he led me to believe."

"Never Told of Sum on Deposit."

Capt. Barnett said that after $50 was paid, Packman had written to him saying the Hansels had turned over the bill to him, and Packman arranged that it be paid off in $25 monthly notes.

"How often did you talk with Dr. Hansel?" "Well," asserted the old riverman, "every month a check would come back and I'd go out there and see him."

He said that the physician never told him Mrs. Hansel had a large sum on deposit. When he consulted Mrs. Hansel she would say, "See the Doctor," he related, and never told him that she had, as Packman phrased it, "$39,000 or even $3000 deposited." In response to a question by James R. Claiborne, her attorney, he said the bill had been pail in full with $30 interest.

Special Guards for Murder Trial of Mrs. Fortescue

She and Three Naval Men to Be Arraigned Tomorrow at Honolulu—Public Excluded From Courtroom

By the Associated Press.

HONOLULU, April 2.—In a temple of justice guarded by armed policemen, Mrs. Granville R. Fortescue, society matron, and three men of the United States navy will go on trial here Monday for the murder of young Hawaiian.

Although whatever racial feeling may have existed over the case apparently has subsided, and there has been no hint of disturbance, the police guard was ordered to go on duty during the sessions of the court.

Accused of the abduction and killing last Jan. 8 of Joseph Kahahawai, one of five men held on charges of attacking Mrs. Fortescue's daughter, the society matron and her co-defendants, Lieut. Thomas H. Massie, and E. J. Lord and Albert O. Jones, enlisted men, are represented by an array of counsel headed by Clarence Darrow. The noted Chicago attorney came out of retirement to lead the defense.

Public to Be Excluded.

The public will be excluded from the little courtroom in which the four, indicted on a charge of second degree murder, will be tried. Circuit Judge Charles S. Davis announced standing would not be permitted. Holders of passes already issued will require all the seats available. Crowds will not be permitted to gather around the building.

Reinforcing Darrow on the defense are George S. Leisure of Chicago, Lieut. L. H. C. Johnson of the navy, and Montgomery Winn and Frank Thompson, Honolulu attorneys. John C. Welley, newly named Public Prosecutor, and Barry S. Ulrich, acting as assistant, will prosecute.

Because of the interest exhibited in the states, special preparations have been made to "cover" the trial for the newspapers. Radio equipment has been installed linking the courtroom directly with press association offices in San Francisco. Judge Davis ruled photographers would not be permitted to enter the courtroom and must not bring cameras into the judiciary building.

Both sides were wary of disclosing their plan. Defense counsel indicated they would wait until the prosecution had outlined its case before drafting their line of defense.

Three Caught With Body.

Charged with attacking Mrs. Thalia Massie, daughter of Mrs. Fortescue and wife of Lieut. Massie, Kahahawai and four others were tried once, but the jury disagreed. They were awaiting retrial when Kahahawai was lured out of this same judiciary building by a ruse and allegedly taken to the home of Mrs. Fortescue and shot to death.

Mrs. Fortescue, Lieut. Massie and Lord, in a speeding automobile containing the body of Kahahawai, were captured by the police while headed for the ocean—prosecuting officers shortly afterward said they had made statements but had said nothing directly incriminating.

The attack and subsequent lynching, together with numerous attacks upon women caused an outburst of public feeling which resulted in a governmental reorganization and several investigations.

In deference to Darrow, who will be 75 years old April 18, Judge Davis announced the court's sessions would be limited to three hours daily, beginning at 9 a. m. and ending at noon (1:30 p. m. to 4:30 p. m. central standard time).

would be about $264,000, and that should the Government be sustained on the depreciation item the additional tax liability would be $140,000. Victory of the Government on the item of real estate losses would cost the company about $16,000, it was said. These items total $420,000.

The company's attorney expected to defeat the Government's claims, it was said.

As to the payments for injuries and damages the company takes the view that its succession to ownership and operation of the property was through reorganization and not purchase and sale and that therefore it is a continuing entity antedating the time of transfer and is entitled to make such deductions.

This view applies also to the claim made for deduction of losses suffered by the receiver in 1927. Having incurred a net loss in 1927 the old company, then in receivership, had no Federal tax to pay, but the present company asserts that as a continuing entity it may deduct prior losses.

On real estate sales the company reported as profit or loss the difference between sale price and fair appraised value at the time it took over the property. The Government asserted the difference reported should be that between sale price and value as of 1913. The company asserts the Government's stand here is contradictory to that taken in the case of injury and damage payments.

Taylor has been separated from his wife since August. In his pockets was a letter addressed to her, written Monday. It read:

"I will make an effort to see you tomorrow. If I fail, you will be informed of what has happened. Know that my parting thoughts were of you, that the loneliness I suffered after we parted had a great bearing on this climax. Inevitable, however, owing to financial obligations, etc. In my 32 years I have learned that life isn't worth a damn."

BROWNING, KING & CO., CLOTHIERS, IN RECEIVERSHIP

Corporation Consents to Appointment; Assets $2,538,500; Liabilities $1,427,000.

NEW YORK, April 2.—Federal Judge William Bondy today appointed Howard Osterhout, an attorney, and John C. Niemeyer, industrial engineer, equity receivers for Browning, King & Co., clothiers.

The appointment was made on application of William Browning, who set forth that $486,611 lent by him to the corporation is due and unpaid. According to the papers liabilities total $1,427,000 and assets $2,538,000.

The corporation consented to the appointment.

The manager of Browning, King & Co.'s St. Louis store, 916 Olive street, said the local store had no official notification of the receivership action in New York. He said the corporation's stores throughout the United States are each incorporated in the states in which they do business, but are under the general supervisory management of the New York organization.

ECHOES OF THE HOUSE FIGHT OVER THE REVENUE MEASURE

out, nobody ever explained whom they would sell it to, although the question was repeatedly asked. Cochran once inquired facetiously whether the proprietors of the banks, factories, railroads and utilities would sell out on credit to the present occupants of the breadline.

Aside from the astounding manner in which three-fourths of the Democrats and a third of the Republicans flatly refused to follow their accepted leaders on the sales tax and the taxes on wealth, perhaps the most picturesque development of the entire struggle was the emergence of Fiorello La Guardia as the most influential individual member in the House. La Guardia is an uncompromising Progressive from the Harlem District of New York City, and at one time was listed in the Congressional directory as a Socialist, although at the last election of Mayor in New York he was the regular Republican candidate. La Guardia is of Italian descent, and is short, swarthy and plump. During the World War he was a Major commanding an aviation section—a fact apparently unknown to one newspaper editor who denounced him during the tax debate for having "an alien mind." The charge had an ironic aspect, because the sales tax which the editor was defending never has been adopted in the United States, and was repeatedly described by its advocates as being of foreign origin. La Guardia is a dynamo of energy, and thinks like lightning on his feet. His gestures are quick and vigorous, and he speaks in a loud, piercing voice. Once during the debate an advocate of the sales tax taunted Democratic members for following a New York Republican. Glover of Arkansas—dubbed "short line" by the press gallery because he looks at his notes like the conductor of a short line railroad inspecting tickets—retorted in a sagebrush drawl that "if we have to follow a New York Republican we would rather follow Maj. La Guardia than Oggie Mills."

ONE fact which should not be overlooked is that the uprising which resulted in the rejection of the sales tax and the increased taxes on wealth was made possible only by the new liberalized rules adopted by the Democratic majority when they organized the House at the start of the session. Indeed, Republican leader, declared that if Democratic leaders with this fact during the debate, and Snell, the Republica leader, declared that if the Republicans were in control and operating under the old "gag rule" they would have brought the bill into the chamber, limited the debate to 40 minutes a side, allowed no amendments, and jammed it through before the rank and file could learn what was in it. It is evident that Speaker Garner and Democratic Leader Rainey suffered great loss of prestige, although Garner made a dramatic attempt to regain some when appeared on the floor and implored the House to pass a bill that would erase the Treasury deficit, regardless of what taxes it resorted to. His initial advocacy of the sales tax, which he had always opposed heretofore, is regarded here as his first major political blunder during a term of 30 years in the House and it is charged to ambition. William Randolph Hearst has long advocated a sales tax, because it would relieve him of heavy income taxes, and Hearst is the original "Garner for President" man.

But probably the most important influence in inducing the Democratic leaders to declare for a sales tax and for mild taxes on wealth, was that exercised by National Chairman John J. Raskob and Bernard Baruch, the largest contributors of Democratic campaign funds. They lobbied strenuously, and Baruch is even known to have approached Democratic Senators on the subject while the bill was still in the House. Both are heavy income tax payers. Executive Secretary Shouse of the Democratic National Committee, who is employed and paid by Raskob, lobbied incessantly for the original proposals, and at one critical juncture delivered a speech over a national radio network in which he criticized Democratic Congressmen for voting for the higher taxes on wealth. In these efforts he had the energetic assistance of Walter Newton was able to carry his cam-President Hoover—illustrating how easily party lines may be forgotten when pocketbooks are affected. Newton was able to carry his mapaign into the chamber and cloakrooms of the House by virtue of being an ex-member of Congress.

One of the last actions of the House on the measure was full of grim humor. Democratic leaders received a "tip" Thursday that the administration was preparing to let the House pass the bill, and then issue a statement declaring that "the Democrats have failed to balance the budget." Accordingly they called on Secretary Mills to present at once his estimate of the revenue that could be exepcted from the taxes adopted. Mills made his reply public Friday morning, and, as apprehended, his figures appeared to show that the new taxes would not be sufficient to meet the deficit. Many of his estimates were substantially lower than those which he had previously given. Thereupon, pursuant to a prearranged plan, the Democratic leaders slapped on the bill an amendment making normal income tax rates apply to income derived from corporation dividends. It would be difficult to imagine a tax more obnoxious to the wealthy class represented by Mills. La Guardia, grinning from ear to ear, confided to this writer that if he had proposed such a tax he "would be called a bolshevik the rest of my life." The Republican Old Guard howled bloody murder and made the chamber resound with frenzied cries about "destroying capital,' but the tax stayed in the bill. It was the underdog's day.

Automobile manufacturers have made the greatest efforts in the history of this industry to develop new designs and new mechanical betterments. And they have produced the greatest values in the history of the industry. They priced their products on an anticipated and hoped for volume which the industry has not realized. Therefore in our opinion many manufacturers will probably raise prices. No matter what make of car you intend to buy, you can save money by buying now. Not only save money by buying before prices are advanced by manufacturers, but in addition you can probably save a Federal sales tax on all motor cars.

M'GURN SENTENCE UPHELD

Gangster Must Go to Prison for Mann Act Violation.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 2.—The Mann act conviction of "Machine-Gun" Jack McGurn, gangster, and Louise Rolfs, now his wife, was upheld today by a 2-to-1 decision of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals. McGurn was sentenced by Federal Judge Walter C. Lindley last July to serve two years in Leavenworth penitentiary because he traveled about the country with Miss Rolfs. Her punishment was fixed at four months in the county jail.

McGurn's wife divorced him and McGurn, whose real name is Vincent Gebardi, married Miss Rolfs. The Government contended they married to avoid the Mann act prosecution.

Flyer Drops $30,000,000 Contract.

NEW YORK, April 2.—Clyde Pangborn, trans-Pacific flyer, piloted an airplane over the outbound steamer Reliance today to drop a $30,000,000 Venezuelan oil pipe line contract which was not ready when the ship sailed. Aboard, to carry the contract to South America, was Carl O. Hoffmann, New York engineer. He held up the steamer's sailing for 10 minutes until assured that Pangborn and a plane would solve the problem.

HERE'S PAR ON HANDS IN BRIDGE "OLYMPIC"

Winners of Trophy Will Not Be Determined for About Three Months.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 2.—Ely Culbertson today announced the pars for 16 bridge hands which were played by some 30,000 players last night in the "world bridge Olympics," as follows:

Hand No. 1—North-South par: 4 spades bid and made.

Hand No. 2—East-West par; 6 spades bid and made.

Hand No. 3—North-South par: 5 diamonds bid and made, or opponents set 1 at 5 spades. East-West par: 4 spades bid and made or down 1 at 5 spades.

Hand No. 4—East-West par: 4 spades bid, 5 made, or North-South set 2 at 5 clubs, doubled.

Hand No. 5—North-South par: 6 hearts bid and made.

Hand No. 6—North-South par: 5 clubs bid and made.

Hand No. 7—East-West par; 6 spades bid and made.

Hand No. 8—North-South par: Opponents set 4 tricks at 1 spade, doubled.

Hand No. 9—East-West par: 3 odd at spades for opponents. North-South par: 4 spades bid regardless of outcome.

Hand No. 10—North-South par: 7 clubs bid and made or opponents set 6 tricks at 7 diamonds doubled. East-West par: Down 6 tricks or less at diamonds.

Hand No. 11—North-South par: 3 no-trump bid, either set one or mde 4-odd. East-West par: Opponents set 1 or more at 3 no-trump or opponents make 4-odd at clubs.

Hand No. 12—North-South par: 4 hearts bid and made.

Hand No. 13—East-West par: 5 diamonds bid and made.

Hand No. 14—East-West par: 4 spades bid and made.

Hand No. 15—North-South par: 4 spades bid and made or down 1 at 5 spades. East-West par: 4 or 5 hearts bid and made or opponents set 1 at 5 spades doubled.

Hand No. 14—East-West par: 4 spades bid and made.

Hand No. 15—North-South par: 4 spades bid and made or down 1 at 5 spades. East-West par: 4 or 5 hearts bid and made or opponents set 1 at 5 spades doubled.

Hand No. 16—East-West par: Any score playing the hand at hearts. North-South par: 7 no-trump bid and made in case West overcalls immediately with 7 hearts. If West does not bid 7 hearts immediately, par for North-South is 7 hearts doubled and made by opponents.

Trophies will be given to the North-South and East-West winners as soon as they are determined, which probably will be in about three months.

Hand 16, in which West held all the hearts, was productive of the greatest variety of bidding. The main influence necessary for par playing by North and South was that against a no-trump contract, bid by North, East, having no hearts, could not put his partner in, and therefore a grand slam in no-trump was possible. Here is the hand:

Culbertson tonight replied to criticism leveled at the use of the word "Olympic" in connection with the event.

"The word 'Olympic,'" said he in reply to a letter from Avery Brundage, president of the American Olympic Committee, "probably was copyrighted by Homer in his Iliad, and I don't see what harm could come to sports by the use of 'Olympic' as applied to an intellectual game like bridge."

CHICAGO PROSECUTOR TELLS OF COMPROMISE WITH AL CAPONE

some remark like that, and 'You can see me again.'

"We were very informal. I talked to him along those lines probably a couple of times until finally, after the indictments were returned or about the time they were returned, I told him that I felt by reason of the great difficulties that confronted us, that I wanted to make a recommendation.

"There had been many conferences with Capone's counsel. Naturally they wanted as light a recommendation as they could get and I wanted as heavy a recommendation as I could get and the thing was open all the way through. They knew about it in Washington and my staff knew about it and there never was any mystery about it."

Finally Johnson said, Wilkerson told him he could make a recommendation.

Question by Borah.

"As I understand it," Chairman Borah said, "Judge Wilkerson indorsed the recommendation?"

"He approved of the making of the recommendation," Johnson replied, "and of course here is the understanding I think all prosecutors have when a Court says to the prosecutor that he may make a recommendation. No Judge can bind himself.

"Of course, that is a rule of law that I am familiar with and I knew the Court could not bind himself, but there is a sort of unwritten understanding that if a prosecutor has correctly presented the facts or that he himself has not been misled or something does not come up in court that neither the Court nor the prosecutor knew, there is a sort of tacit understanding that a court will follow the recommendation of that kind. Of course, I assumed in this case that there was no mystery about it."

Replying to questions from Borah, Johnson said that Wilkerson knew he was planning to recommend a sentence of two and one-half years.

Johnson then read Wilkerson's statement in open court announcing he would not be bound by any agreement, which led to Capone's withdrawal of his plea of guilty.

"The defendant (Capone) is a man of unbelievable arrogance," Johnson said.

"He knew this plea of guilty involved a penitentiary sentence. The first thing that happened to my utter astonishment was this. I had never stated publicly what this recommendation would be, nor had any of my assistants or the agents of the Government, who were very trustworthy and I am sure they observed this confidence.

"On the very afternoon that the pleas of guilty were entered, an afternoon newspaper published in headlines, not what the District Attorney's recommendation would be, but what the judgment of the Court would be and that brought comment from all over the country."

Capone's Love of Publicity.

Johnson told how Capone set about to attract attention to himself by attending the races in a box out front where everyone could see him, going to baseball games and shaking hands with famous ball players.

"Now all these things were blazoned in the newspapers constantly during that time and Judge Wilkerson called this to the attention of the officers of the court and asked them to consider whether it would not be advisable to deprive him of liberty and take him into custody.

"I never discussed this with Judge Wilkerson but it seemed an affront to the Court. I was right curious about how this information got out about what my recommendation would be. The defendant himself, I am informed by newspaper men, disclosed that information, so he brought this upon himself clearly by his conduct."

Attitude of Judge.

Borah said he did not understand why Wilkerson did not carry out the agreement.

"Are we to understand in all probability that if these things had not happened the Judge would have carried out your recommendation?" he asked.

"I draw this conclusion from the record after studying it closely," Johnson replied. "I think this point is the one that stands out all over the record that the thing he made up his mind to do was to drive home to this defendant that he himself could not announce the judgment that was to be imposed on him."

"Were you in any way embarrassed or surprised by reason of the fact that Judge Wilkerson did not carry out your recommendation."

"I was embarrassed," Johnson answered, "because the press took the position the United States Attorney had made a bargain."

Johnson testified that Capone secured a list of the 100 veniremen from which his jury was to be selected. As a result, he testified, Judge Wilkerson switched the list.

"During the progress of the trial," he continued, "very many of the jurors were intimidated. We had under-cover men in the lobby of the hotel and in the halls. Many attempts were made to communicate."

When the case opened before the court, Johnson said, Capone's attorney claimed he had an agreement that the gangster would not be questioned. Johnson said he had entered no such agreement and when the Judge insisted on hearing some evidence Capone withdrew his guilty plea and the case went to trial.

Previously, he said, he had told the Court he had the Attorney-General's authority to make the recommendation and the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury in charge of revenue had concurred.

Telling of checking the many bank accounts maintained by the gangster leaders Johnson said: "Take the matter of violence. In the Ralph Capone case which may be used as an illustration because it is a typical gangster case of the type we have prosecuted under the income-tax laws the agents discovered bank accounts. There were eight or 10 and the peculiar thing about it was about every three months one account was closed James Carter, James Brown and so on. It was rather odd that each first name began with 'James.'

Banker Was Frightened.

"I subpenaed the bankers. It was a small bank with not more than $3,000,000 in deposits and I personally conducted those examinations before the grand jury, and the cashier of the bank was frightened to death. I did not know why."

"I was pressing him as to wh owned these accounts," he continued, "and I thought he must know because the bank was small and in one of these three months' period—usually the account shifted in three months—in one instance there was an overdraft of $4000 and another overdraft of $6000, which they permitted, and in this small bank the cashier said he did not know who owned the account.

"Later he was very much broken down and I was very severe with him and he wept. Later his counsel told me every night when he came home some gangster was there and threatened him.

"Eventually we got the information. Generally, in dealing in these cases, in the difficult cases we encountered terrific violence."

Describing the difficulties of obtaining witnesses to testify against gangsters, Johnson said the "stock phrase" of those called was "If you want to send me to prison, all right, but I will not talk, because you know I will be taken for a ride."

"That is true," Johnson told the committee. "I had a rather painful experience when we convicted a man by the name of Basile. He was about to go to prison. He had been associated with the Juliano mob.

"They had 62 murders there in five years and Basile gave evidence he was a partner of Juliano, that he had quarreled with Juliano and Juliano had paid $5000 to a gunman by the name of Schemer Drucci to kill him. And Drucci was shot and killed by a policeman before he could execute the murder.

"Basile gave evidence which was very helpful to the Government, and just before Christmas in 1929 I took him before the grand jury and talked to him, about 11 o'clock. We were getting ready to return an indictment, but that night he was murdered before 9 o'clock. I have had many experiences of that kind."

Johnson told of a conspiracy indictment against 21 defendants in which six of them were murdered before the case came to trial. He added that eight of their associates also were murdered, including some witnesses.

Describing the Al Capone case, Johnson said:

"We had ascertained who Capone's partners were. There was a very dangerous underworld character by the name of Jack Guzik. I live in a quiet neighborhood, where there are homes and home-loving people, and he established himself in a very nice home just around the corner from me, and nearly all the gangsters, strange to say, are married and bring up families. He is the conniver and the corrupter of this crowd.

"Al Capone represents the force and the spectacular leadership. To make the story short, we had discovered these partners. First we convicted Ralph Capone, then Frank Nitti, who was a partner in these gambling enterprises. Ralph Capone's work was in prostitution and in selling beer and in gambling. Nitti was on the alcohol side of the racket.

"I might add their overturn was very large. We traced about $700,000 to Nitti, nearly $2,000,000 to Ralph Capone. In the Jack Guzik case we proved over $1,000,000.

"Of course it is the money that gives these people the power. These cases all resulted in convictions and appeals were allowed and all cases were affirmed and they were denied certiorari, and the last ones I think are going to the penitentiary this week. That is, Jack Guzik and Gene Oliver.

"Lawrence O'Brien is there and Sam Guzik, Jack's brother, is there. A man by the name of Jack McGurn who is said to be a machine gunner and one of the big killers for the mob, has been convicted. He is the man who in that St. Valentine's day massacre is said to have killed seven men at one stroke of the machine gun.

"This process of breaking down these partners was a plan to reach Al Capone. In every case we prosecuted we got some lead and some evidence.

"We were confronted with this kind of a situation—that Al Capone was very shrewd in one way. He kept no bank account. We never could find a bank account. He kept no books. He signed no checks. In all our investigation we had one check he endorsed.

"He never did anything first hand. He was always two or three removed from what happened and it was nearly impossible to complete the chain leading to him.

"The agents kept at work on gathering evidence and a special squad was organized, known as the District Attorney's squad. I may add the gangs had spies everywhere. It is inconceivable the information they get. They have an intelligence system that is remarkable. Sometimes I thought they would find out what I was thinking. It is baffling.

"Then our purpose of finally reaching Al Capone had been the objective we sought after for the last three years. He had one syndicate that was in the beer violations. You might add the source of income to these gangsters comes from gambling and beer, distribution of alcohol being in small amounts but dealing with beer, they deal with bulk. They must have understandings with the police in order to distribute that."

$77,773 CLAIM ON GUARANTEE OF BANK DEPOSITS UPHELD

Supreme Bench Rules Dunklin County Court Can Recover From Officers of Closed Depository.

JEFFERSON CITY, April 2.—The Dunklin County Court is entitled to recover $77,773 from officers and directors of the defunct Citizens Savings Bank of Kennett, Mo., who signed a bond guaranteeing safekeeping of county deposits in the bank, Division No. 1 of the Missouri Supreme Court ruled today in affirming the judgment of the lower court.

The bank, which was one of three depositories for Dunklin County funds, was closed July 16, 1926 and is in liquidation. Its officers and directors signed a bond for $100,000 to guarantee county deposits in the bank. After the bank closed some of the signers of the bond contested its validity, asserting changes had been made in its provisions after they had signed it. These objections are overruled in the decision today, writen by Commissioner Laurance M. Hyde.

The suit to recover on the bond was directed against John T. McKay, president of the bank, T. Paul King, M. W. Lloyd, W. A. Southern, J. W. Karsten and executors of the estates of W. R. Roberts, John W. Bailey and W. H. Wallace.

COURT TO RULE ON REQUEST TO WITHDRAW GUILTY PLEA

Circuit Judge McElhinney will rule tomorrow at Clayton on the request of James W. Kellar, slayer of Mrs. Etta Sauer, that he be permited to withdraw his plea of guilty to a charge of first degree murder. When Kellar pleaded guilty two weeks ago Judge McElhinney said he would assess the death penalty and fixed tomorrow as the date for passing sentence.

Kellar's attorney, James S. McClellan, said that no Judge in St. Louis County had ever sentenced a man to death on a plea of guilty. He said he had advised his client to plead guilty, on the assumption that Judge McElhinney would observe that precedent. Herbert Ziercher, Assistant Prosecuting Attorney, opposed Kellar's request. McClellan, he said, had been notified that the State would not recommend clemency.

Kellar, known also as Campbell, was formerly employed in a machine shop owned by Louis Sauer, husband of the murdered woman. Kellar admitted he went to the home of his former employer at 3104 Walter avenue, Maplewood, Jan. 4 and beat Mrs. Sauer to death with an iron pipe. He went there, he said, to ask her for money and to discuss his family difficulties with her.

FOOT INFECTION FATAL TO DR. L. J. WOLFORT

Inquest Held to Determine Cause of Death of Hospital Head.

The death of Dr. Louis J. Wolfort, superintendent of Josephine Hospital, was due to an infection commonly konwn as "athlete's foot," it became known yesterday at the Coroner's inquest.

An autopsy performer by Dr. E. F. Vitt revealed the immediate cause was streptococcus cellulitis, a form of blood poisoning. Dr. Paul R. Fletcher, 3856 Russell boulevard, testified this condition was brought about by the foot infection spreading through the system.

When Dr. Wolfort became ill Wednesday he thought himself suffering from hernia and at his request an opeation was performed Thursday, but that condition was not found. He died Friday at the hospital, 1630 South Grand boulevard.

An office associate, Dr. Leon A. Feinstein, said Dr. Wolfort had suffered from the foot infection for several years and that it had been particularly painful for several days before his death. Dr. Wolforth, he said, did not know how he acquired the infection.

Funeral services for Dr. Wolfort will be held at 11 o'clock this morning at the home of his sister, Mrs. Blanche Beck, 6906 Amherst avenue, University City. Burial will be in Mount Sinai Cemetery. Three brothers, David, Ben and Jesse Wolfort, also survive. Dr. Wolfort never married.

A graduate of Missouri Medical College in the class of 1895, Dr. Wolfort completed his studies in Berlin and Vienna and returned to St. Louis to practice. About 15 years ago he became superintendent of the hospital.

HOBBY OF CHAUNCEY OLCOTT

He Had a Large Collection of Cigar Store Indians.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 2.—Cigar store Indians, standing at the Saratoga place of the late Chauncey Olcott, are monuments to his strange hobby. Olcott, who died March 18 at Monaco, was buried today from St. Patrick's Cathedral. He had a large collection of them.

A quarter of a century ago these wooden Red Men were commonplaces. They stood on heavy pedestals just outside the door; and, though they carried no inscriptions, every lad knew that the Indian meant a tobacco store was behind him.

Persons from all walks of life crowded St. Patrick's Cathedral for the funeral. Former Gov. Alfred E. Smith and Mayor James J. Walker headed the list of honorary pallbearers. Burial took place in Woodlawn Cemetery.

$40,000 LUMBER YARD FIRE AT EDWARDSVILLE

Blaze Fanned by Wind Threatened Business Area for Time; Volunteer Hurt.

Five frame buildings of the Hotz Lumber Co. of Edwardsville were destroyed yesterday afternoon by a fire, which, fanned by a high wind, threatened the adjoining business district for nearly an hour. The damage was estimated at more than $40,000.

The blaze, of undetermined origin, was discovered at 4:45 p. m. by a passerby. The Collinsville Fire Department, 15 miles away, came to the aid of the Edwardsville department and Edwardsville volunteers joined in the fight. Frank Zika, Edwardsville volunteer, was slightly burned.

The buildings contained millwork and hardwood flooring. Five trucks were badly damaged. The office, on Main street at the front of the property, was not damaged. Residents on Kansas street, to the windward side of the lumber yard at the rear, moved furniture from their homes as the wind fanned the flames toward them.

The lumber yard occupies part of a city block on Main street near St. Louis street. W. H. Hotz, president, said the loss was insured. The lumber company's property was almost entirely destroyed by fire in 1904.

$55,000 Fire at Home Recently Completed in County.

The recently completed home of John G. Fleck, on Midland boulevard near Chaucer avenue, opposite Midland Valley Country Club, was partly destroyed yesterday by fire, which caused damage estimated at $55,000. The cause was not determined.

The loss, covered by insurance, was estimated by W. F. Stewart, chief of the West Overland Fire Department, after consulting Fleck, president of Fleck, Baumann & Miller, Inc., wholesale furniture concern at 1708 Washington avenue.

The blaze was discovered about 3:40 a. m. by a neighbor who aroused Mr. and Mrs. Fleck. Fire departments of Overland and West Overland were summoned and laid hose lines to a lake about 800 feet away on the country club grounds. Only the walls of the large brick residence were left intact.

MISSOURI BARRED FROM TAXING ESTATE OF NEW JERSEY MAN

Three-Judge U. S. Court Holds Collecting of $107,204 Would Be Double Levy.

The State of Missouri has no right to $107,204 claimed in taxes against the estate of James M. Jarvie, railroad magnate of Montclair, N. J., the United States District Court held in an opinion filed here yesterday.

The opinion was reached by three Judges, Faris and Davis of the District Court and Stone of the Circuit Court of Appeals, sitting as a single court in conformity with the law covering such suits.

The opinion took definite force in an interlocutory injunction issued by the Court forbidding the State of Missouri from collecting its claim.

Counsel for the State had contended it was entitled to inheritance taxes on stock of the estate in the Missouri Pacific and Frisco Railroads and the Kansas City Public Service Co., Missouri corporations. The Court, however, sustained the contention of defense counsel that this could constitute double taxation in violation of the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution.

BOY 3, FATALLY BURNED BY UPSETTING LYE SOLUTION

Charles, 3-year-old son of Loy Lee, Chinese, who operates a laundry at 1921 South Broadway, died yesterday at City Hospital from burns suffered when he upset a bucket containing a lye solution.

The child was playing in the laundry about 11 a. m. and stumbled against the bucket. He died five hours later.

MISSOURI U. CURTAILS SCHOOL OF MEDICINE

Clinical Years of Study Will Be Suspended Until Financial Situation Improves.

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBIA, Mo., April 2.—The clinical years of study at the school of medicine of the University of Missouri will be suspended beginning Aug. 31 until such time as the university finances permit, President Walter Williams announces here today. The third and fourth years of study were re-established a year ago last fall by the board of curators after having been discontinued since 1910.

During the present academic year about a dozen students have been enrolled in the third year, while the fourth year curriculum was to have been put into effect next fall. Provision has been made, Williams said, to transfer the advanced students to other institutions, and arrangements may be made whereby they will receive their degrees from the university here after the completion of their course elsewhere.

Just how many faculty members the suspension will effect or the amount of the saving to the university was not made public.

"This suspension is temporary in character and is due entirely to the shortage in State funds," Williams said. "The establishment and maintenance of the third and fourth years in medicine at Columbia have been amply justified. The clinical facilities provided have been more than sufficient in practically all branches for modern medical education.

"The discontinuance recommended is not because of any lack of clinical facilities or in teaching, but because the State's financial condition does not permit at present the maintenance. * * * I hope the time will speedily come when the four years may be given at the university in the interest of the State."

Movie Actress Sues for Divorce.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., April 2.—A suit for divorce charging cruelty was filed today by Dorothy Appleby, movie actress, against Morgan H. Galloway, motion picture actor. She charges he called her a failure as an actress and describes Galloway as a "man of brutal temperament."

CITY MUST FIND NEW WAY TO MEET $600,000 PLEDGE

After Defeat of Amusement Tax, Alternative Is to Break Promise in Crisis Campaign.

The Board of Estimate and Apportionment will consider Tuesday the situation created by the defeat in the Board of Aldermen Friday of the administration bill for a city amusement tax to help raise the $600,000 pledged by the city in the recent Crisis campaign for public relief.

Mayor Miller and Comptroller Nolte declared yesterday that it did not appear possible to appropriate all the city had promised for the fund, without the amusement tax, unless some new special tax should be proposed and adopted.

The Mayor, the Comptroller and President Neun of the Board of Aldermen comprise the Board of Estimate. Neun was one of the 22 members of the Board of Aldermen voting against the amusement tax, although it had been supposed he would support it. Only six Aldermen voted for the bill.

Whether the city will have to go back on its promise to give a full $600,000 to the Crisis fund, or whether some way to make up the difference can be found will be the question before the Board of Estimate, which directs the city's fiscal policies.

Comptroller Nolte made the unequivocal declaration that the income from the amusement tax could not be supplanted from general revenue and that the city could contribute to the fund only whatever is raised through the special tax program. He said: "I am very much disappointed that the Board of Aldermen did not keep faith with the Crisis Committee. I will not recommend any appropriation beyond what the special taxes produce." The Comptroller has a large voice in determining municipal expenditures.

Mayor Miller also expressed disappointment at the aldermanic action, adding: "In view of the serious financial condition of the city caused by the recent 10 per cent cut in the realty assessment, I don't see how we can appropriate for relief anything beyond what is raised by the special taxes."

The crisis campaign called for $1,200,000, of which helf, or $600,000, was pledged by the city. However, the people contributed about $1,200,000, and so far the city has appropriated $100,000 of its share. The administration proposed the of the city gasoline tax, to raise about $200,000 a year; an increase of the citty gasoline tax, to raihe about $300,000 a year; a tax on parking lots, to raise about $40,000, and a tax on sgoft-drink establishments. The latter was killed by the Board of Aldermen, but the parking lot tax and gasoline tax increase were passed. A suit against the parking lot charge is pending in Circuit Court. It has been arranged for trustees to hold the expected balance in the crisis fund for future emergencies.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 2.—Influenced more by sheer discouragement than anything of severely grave import in the news, the stock market sank through its lower resistance levels of the past four months to a brand new bottom for the bear market this week.

Wall Street generally was inclined to blame Washington for much of its woes, but it was acknowledged in many quarters that the fresh sinking spell in security prices was due to a combination of influences, of which the continued low level of business activity was the basic factor.

Developments in the Federal tax measure kept Wall street in the anxious seat all the week. The financial district's urgent plea for a balanced budget proved something of a boomerang, with the House's approval of an unprecedently high tax on security transfers.

The disturbing effects of the taxation developments robbed the new stock exchange regulation on loaning stocks to shorts of any potency to bolster prices. The problem of adapting operations to the new rule requiring that marginal stock be loaned only with customers, permissions proved to be largely a mechanical one of rearranging the loans.

While some of the week's selling was presumably for short account, real liquidation was apparent in selling of a number of preferred issues and bonds in which bear operations are necessarily negligible. Reports from some brokers were to effect that they were receiving stock certificates for transfers that had not changed hands since 1912 or earlier.

Selling Not in Volume.

At no time was selling in great volume. The rails and utilities bore the brunt of pressure, with a number of the leading industrials holding up fairly well. Price averages indicated that the market generally had slipped to the lowest general level since about 1921. Utilities which have held at more resistance levels than other major groups, fell to the lowest since 1926. Averages based on leading industrials go back only to comparatively recent times, or to 1924. But the rails have again ventured into average levels not seen since the 1890's.

Fundamentally, the improvement in the financial situation has been maintained. The banking mortality record was the best in March since the palmy days of 1929, and currency has continued to return from hiding, gold stocks to increase, and credit rates have been inclined to sag.

In bonds the taxation developments kept up a good demand for tax-exempt issues. Corporate issues, as measured by the price index of 60, lost 3.2 points during the week, reaching a new low for 1932 at 71, but holding above the low of 68.5 reached in the heavy selling of 1931. The standard Statistics Co.' price index of 90 stocks receded 4.1 points to a new low for this tabulation, started in 1926, at 56.4.

Rails Lowest Since Nineties.

Security prices maintained their downward course today.

Except in rails, a few specialties and numerous preferreds, losses of stocks were rather moderate, even before short covering coincident with wheat's strength reduced declines. But the carrier issues, breaking to the lowest level since the nineties, provided an unfavorable technical indication which doubtless added to the speculative fraternity's depressed state of mind. Taxes seemed to be uppermost in the market's thoughts.

Extreme losses in rails ranged from a fraction to 4 points. Union Pacific had the maximum break, although its drop was just halved by the late recovery. Santa Fe was down 2¾ at the worst. New York Central, which had been holding well above 24½, the old low, dipped to 22½ and finished at 23¾, off 1¾. Lackawanna, Southern Pacific, Missouri Pacific preferred, New Haven and Baltimore & Ohio showed net losses of a point or so.

Telephone Under 110.

American Telephone sold under 110, but was down only a small fraction for the day. American Can, Allied Chemical, Union Carbide, North American, Standard Gas, Corn Products, Consolidated Gas and Loew's closed about unchanged, while net losses in United States Steel, Bethlehem, General Electric, Westinghouse, American Tobacco "B" and General Motors were more moderate. Wrigley, Case, General Railway Signal, National Lead, Bethlehem preferred, American Smelting 7 per cent preferred and American Can preferred yielded 2 to nearly 4. Eastman and Coca Cola steadied after yesterday's weakness. Sales totaled ,045,520 shares.

The New York Reserve Bank's monthly report revealed that member borrowings, outside of New York City, had been reduced by $180,000,000 in March, which reflects in part the shrinkage in currency circulation.

The steel and motor car industries are still marking time. It will probably be a fortnight or so before the automobile makers can get a line on the public's attitude toward their new offerings and make their plans accordingly; and just at present the steel companies are depending on automotive demand to start an upward movement in production schedules. Youngstown district mills will start work next week at 25 per cent of capacity, unchanged.

Steel Concern Election.

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, O., April 2.—The Corrigan-McKinney Steel Co., announced today the election of William G. Mather as chairman of the board, and of Donald B. Gillies as president.

Mather had been president since March, 1930, when the controlling interest in the firm was purchased by the Cleveland Cliffs Iron Co. Gillies has been senior active vice president.

COTTON LOSES GREATER PART OF PREVIOUS DAY'S UPTURN

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 2.—The greater part of yesterday's rally in cotton was lost today under a renewal of the recent selling movement.

After selling off to 6.10 for May or about 8 points net lower and within 8 points of the low price touched on the decline of last Thursday, however, offerings decreased and there were slight rallies in the late trading on week-end covering. May closed at 6.14 with the general market closing steady at net losses of 4 to 8 points.

The opening was steady at a decline of 1 to 6 points under moderate offerings which included Southern and Far Eastern selling as well as further liquidation. The contracts were absorbed by trade buying and covering, while there was also a little buying believed to be for Liverpool account.

Selling increased somewhat following the opening decline in the stock market and the recession extended to 6.49 for October, making the general list about 8 to 9 points below Friday's closing quotations.

The market turned steady later with slight rallies encouraged by the development of better tone in the stock market and firmness in grain. Closing quotations were about 3 to 4 points up from the lowest on the more active positions.

Liverpool cables barely met the New York rally of late Friday and the decline in sterling. Private advices, however, reported trade calling and covering with a cessation of selling pressure in that market and said there was an improved demand for cotton cloth from India.

The weather map was considered more favorable and may have been a factor in the early decline, but the attention of the trade still centered on the Washington news and the action of the stock and grain markets.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 191,000 bales, against 115,000 last year and 102,000 two years ago. Reports that plans for a reduction in current print cloth production were being discussed in the cotton goods trade, stirred interest among brokers.

WEEK'S METAL REVIEW

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 2.—Copper continued quiet but steady, a sharp break in London attributed to weakness in tin, having no apparent effect on sellers' ideas here. Although domestic buying is at a minimum and export sales are in small volume, it is reported that shipments to consumers have improved somewhat, so that trade predictions are heard of possible decreases in stocks. Electrolytic continued at 6c delivered in the Connecticut valley.

Tin eased sharply, reflecting acute weakness in London, where heavy foreign selling was reported. The decline which carried prices here down to the lowest levels since 1898 caused buyers to lose confidence in values and business was restricted. Statistics on world supplies and deliveries for March practically balanced.

Somewhat better buying of lead developed early in the week as consumers filled part of their April requirements, but this demand tapered off later. Prices held steady at the recent decline, with smelters experiencing less competition from second-hand sources.

Zinc became steadier as moderate offerings at slight concessions were absorbed and other sellers held firm. Buying, however, was moderate. Reports of curtailed ore production, while thus far without effect on metal supplies, acts as a stabilizing influence.

Antimony was dull with nominal prices unchanged in the absence of business.

New York Sugar.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 2.—Raw sugar made another new all time low record today under further offerings of nearby duty frees. Prices declined 2 points to the basis of 2.66 for spots with sales at this level confirmed of about 54,000 bags of Philippines nearby, to local refiners while an outport refiner bought 14,000 bags of Porto Rican for prompt shipment at 2.68.

Reflecting the further decline in the spot market futures were easier, with May closing net unchanged and other positions 1 to 2 points lower.

The market opened unchanged to 1 point lower and later showed net losses of 2 to 3 points under liquidation and selling by producing connections, promoted by the continued liberal offerings in the spot market and the disappointing showing of the London market. May contracts declined to .70 a new low record for the season, while December sold down to .88, or back to the previous low, but around these levels, offerings tapered off and there were partial recoveries with final prices a little above the lowest. Sales 7650 tons. May closed .72, July .77, September .83 Decmbr .90, January. .93, March .98.

Refined sugar was quiet and unchanged at 4.00 for fine granulated.

Freight Requirement Estimates.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 2.—Shippers of the country, through estimates just submitted to the Shippers' Regional Advisory Boards and made public today by the boards, anticipate that carload shipments of the 29 principal commodities in the second quarter of 1932 (the months of April May and June) will be approximately 5,082,198 cars, a reduction of 756,374 cars or 13 pe rcent, below the actual loadings during the same quarter of 1931.

All of the 13 Shippers' Advisory Boards according to the estimates, anticipate a reduction in transportation requirements for the second quarter of the year 1932 compared with the same period last year.

1931 Canned and Dried Fruit and Vegetable Pack.

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 2.—The canned and dried fruit and vegetable pack of the Pacific Coast and Hawaiian Islands for 1931 was given an estimated value of $140,000,000, considerably below previous years, by the Western Canner and Packer today.

The decrease, it was estimated, was due to substantial progress in adjusting production to match reduced consumption.

The fruit pack, the survey added, was the smallest since 1924, the vegetable pack the smallest since 1922 and the dried fruit pack was almost 60,000 tons less than the previous year.

Bank Suspensions Still at Low Rate

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 2.—Bank suspensions during the past week held at the low rate established in recent weeks, and March ended with only 40 closings, the lowest monthly figure since the 1929 stock market crash, says the "American Banker."

Eight closings together with one voluntary liquidation, in which depositors will get 100 per cent, were reported for the week. Three banks reopened, according to this publication. With last week's figures, bank suspensions are brought up to 540 for the year to date.

Industrial and Financial Briefs

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 2.—Most of the larger stock holdings of Western Union Telegraph Co. remained intact throughout 1931, the list as of Dec. 31 last discloses. Morgan, Turner & Co., bankers, were again the largest holders with 24,744 shares, against 28,072 shares at the end of 1930. Kugler & Co. of New York increased their holdings from 17,100 to 24,074 shares. Johnston & Co. of New York held third place with 20,000 shares, compared with 20,025 a year ago.

A plan for the reorganization of the International Combustion Tar Chemical Corporation, it was announced today, is to be submitted soon whereby creditors of that company will receive in cash an amount estimated at approximately 50 per cent of their allowed claims.

March loadings of the Santa Fe Railroad were off 19 per cent from a year ago, a larger percentage decrease than in February and almost as large as in January, said William E. Storey, president of the road, today. Mr. Storey declined to express any opinion regarding what action might be taken on the dividend at next Tuesday's meeting of the board.

The same influences which operated during the week to depress financial markets had an equally unfavorable effect on most commodity markets. Cotton, rubber, silk, hides and sugar all felt the weight of selling. Cocoa, coffee and wheat markets made a relatively good showing.

Statistics of the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association covering the week ended March 26 register another gain in shipments and orders over production. The cut for the week was 113,457,000 feet, with shipments exceeding it by 26 per cent and orders by 34 per cent.

Consumption of sugar in the United States in February, as reported by B. W. Dyer & Co., sugar economists and brokers, amounted to 383,800 long tons, compared with 379,970 for the corresponding month of 1931.

State and municipal financing next week will aggregate $22,239,223, compared with this week's total of $17,200,739. The largest issue will be that of the State of Tennessee with a block of $9,000,000 refunding bonds with interest not exceeding 6 per cent. Other issues range all the way from Sacramento County, Cal., to Providence, R. I.

The Chrysler Export Corporation's report of operations for 1931, just compiled, shows that the company shipped last year a larger percentage of the automobile industry's total exports than it did in 1930. Last year the corporation exported 16.82 per cent of all automobiles shipped abroad from the United States, as against 14.28 exported in 1930.

The Utilities Power and Light Corporation reports that, while final figures have not yet been received from its English subsidiaries for 1931, present indications are that the last year will show a net profit of around $4,500,000, equal, after preferred dividends, to about $2 per share on 1,610,000 shares of Class "A" stock outstanding, and would compare with $7,236,840 or $4.08 a share on each of the 1,495,407 Class "A" shares outstanding in 1930.

Average operations at 25 per cent are expected in the Youngstown steel industry during the coming week unchanged from the past week.

WHEAT "CROP SCARE" MARKE ON THE CHICAGO BOAR

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 2.—Rapid widening the areas of crop damage complaints, gether with broader export demand hois wheat prices quickly today and led flurried general buying.

A maximum jump of 3 cents a bus for wheat ensued, with the market cl ing at the day's tiptop figures. Givi special impetus to the upward flight values was a further increase of French import quota to 45 per cent.

Wheat closed buoyant, 2⅝@3c hig than yesterday's finish, corn ⅝@1c u oats ¼¾½c advanced, and provisi unchanged to 15 cents down.

Estimates of North American wheat port business ranged as high as 1,50 000 bushels, including a good-sized sh of wheat grown in the United States. increase of the wheat import allowa in France was the eighth such increa sinc Feb. 7. At first, however, the u ward trend of cereal markets today w more or less impeded by weakness securities. Corn especially was influen by bearish sentiment in this respect a at one stage dropped to 34½c for M contracts, a new low price record for t season.

Then came assertions about Ka wheat crop. From this juncture on during the remainder of the day a ty crop scare market was in evidence. Cl observers of pit operators said the bulli stampede was the liveliest that had be witnessed in a considerable time, but th should good general rains come within t next few days a setback in prices wou be natural.

Corn and oats were rallied by whe strength. Rural offerings of corn lack volume, but Eastern demand was distin ly slow.

Provisions sagged, owing to unsatisfa tory demand for meats.

NEW LOWS FOR YEAR SHOWN IN BOND LIST

Railways and Utilities Are Center of Attacking Forces at Week End.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 2.—The bond market closed the week on a low and doleful note today, with prices of numerous corporate issues descending to new depth records for the year.

Even the United States Government list, which had been swimming strongly against the downward current, reacted moderately near the close of the short session, and the majority of Liberties and Treasuries finished fractionally lower.

The railways and utilities, however, were the center of the attacking forces and the averages for the principal mortgages of both these groups slipped to the lowest for 1932. The industrials, while sagging, gave a better account of themselves.

Declines in the rails extended all the way from fractions to around 9 points, Nickel Plate issues being the hardest hit, with those of St. Louis Southwestern running a close second. Also especial weakness was displayed by bonds of Baltimore & Ohio, Chesapeake Corporation, Burlington, Chicago Great Western, St. Paul, Chicago & Northwestern, Rock Island, Erie, Great Northern, Missouri Pacific, Northern Pacific, Pennsylvania, Frisco, Southern Pacific and Wabash.

Among the utilities, American & Foreign Power 5s dropped 3¼ points and Columbia Gas & Electric 5s, International Telephone debenture 4½s, Utilities Power & Light 5s and Western Unions were heavy. On theother hand, American Telephone and Consolidated Gas liens were steady. International Match 5s and Kreuger & Toll 5s eased, as did Shell Union and Sinclair Oil mortgages.

While the foreign section was relatively steady, the Argentine Government obligations continued to advance, gaining as much as 4¼ points in one issue. The Germans were slightly lower, but British and Japanese loans firmed.

Sales totaled $5,275,000, par value.

SELLING PRESSURE RELAXES AFTER NEW LOWS ON CURB

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 2.—Selling pressure against curb market shares relaxed somewhat today, but not until more new lows had been registered.

The utility issues still bore the brunt of selling. The day's turnover of 130,000 shares was a duplication of the volume of the previous Saturday.

Electric Bond & Share sagged to 15½, then recovered to 16, where it was off only ⅛. American Gas & Electric reacted a couple of points to a new minimum, then regained half its loss. Public Service of Northern Illinois declined another 5 points to 65, in a small turnover. New England Telephone made one of its occasional appearances in this market, selling at 100, off 2 points.

Aluminum Co. again was a soft spot, receding 2⅛ points to a new bottom at 33½. Parker Rustproof slipped off 5 to 32 in a thin market. Newmont Mining encountered buying, rising a point to 10, and closing at 9¼.

Oils generally held up well, although Indiana sagged a fraction.

Other countries may strive to inculcate pacific tendencies in their youth, but to the casual observer, the Fascists appear to have no intention, or desire, of giving up their glorification of war, or repudiating the doctrine that might makes right. The New Italy of Mussolini is not surrendering a single nationalistic aspiration; it apparently only awaits "tomorrow" for the opportunity of consolidating its foreign policy. If the present educational trend, espoused and encouraged by the Fascist Government is continued, the next generation of Italians will be steeped in militarism and the credo of "Italia ueber alles" far more than was the Germany of pre-war days.

Enrolling Italy's Youth.

Italian foreign policy at Geneva and Fascism's internal program are absolute contradictions. At Geneva, Dina Grandi, Foreign Minister, advocates extension of the armament truce, "humanization of war, abolition of battleships, etc. Beyond the Alps Mussolini is quoted officially as having declared:

"Fascist Italy has a fundamental duty, namely; to prepare herself fully on land, sea and in the air. We must be ready, at a given moment, to mobilize 5,000,000 men and to equip them; we should reinforce our fleet and our airplanes should be so numerous and so powerful that the roar of their motors will drown all other sounds and their wings will cloud the sun. Then at the given moment, when Europe's history reaches its critical stage—between 1935 and 1940—we will make our voices heard and our rights recognized. This preparation will require still several more years. . . ."

Since Mussolini uttered those words, Italy has practically doubled her potential military forces through the formation of her Fascist Militia, which, according to the Finance Minister, is intended "to furnish the Fascist Government, during its hard task of reconstruction, with a trustworthy body of volunteers, trained and ready for any emergency."

In addition to the Militia, Fascism has created, through its Ministry of Public Instruction, four organizations known as the "Balilla," "Avanguardisti," the "Piccole Italiane" and the "Giovani Italiane." The most recent report of M. Renato Ricci, Undersecretary of State for Education, available, gives the enrollment in these groups as:

Balilla (8 to 14 years old)	941,277
Avanguardisti (14 to 18 years)	389,450
Little Italians (8 to 14 years)	641,311
Young Italians (14 to 18 years)	99,991

These children — totaling 2,072,029 fifteen months ago—are being trained by 35,350 officers from the army and militia, and according to M. Mussolini Rattling the Sword at Home as Other Nations Plan Ways to Promote World Peace

Military Training of Children and Dictator's Insistence on Large Army, Navy and Air Forces in Contrast to Aims of Conference at Geneva.

By ALBIN E. JOHNSON.

MILAN, Italy.

DISARMAMENT, more or less seriously sought for at Geneva by some fifty nations, is not intended to envisage world peace in the eyes of Fascist Italy. Nor is the movement for moral disarmament much more than empty words—(words, in the opinion of Premier Mussolini, "are beautiful things, but rifles, machine guns, battleships, airplanes and cannon are much more beautiful")— to those who are moulding the minds of Italy's children.

Other countries may strive to inculcate pacific tendencies in their youth, but to the casual observer, the Fascists appear to have no intention, or desire, of giving up their glorification of war, or repudiating the doctrine that might makes right. The New Italy of Mussolini is not surrendering a single nationalistic aspiration; it apparently only awaits "tomorrow" for the opportunity of consolidating its foreign policy. Then at the given moment, when Europe's history reaches its critical stage—between 1935 and 1940—we will make our voices heard and our rights recognized. This preparation will require still several more years. . . ."

Since Mussolini uttered those words, Italy has practically doubled her potential military forces through the formation of her Fascist Militia, which, according to the Finance Minister, is intended "to furnish the Fascist Government, during its hard task of reconstruction, with a trustworthy body of volunteers, trained and ready for any emergency."

In addition to the Militia, Fascism has created, through its Ministery of Public Instruction, four organizations known as the "Balilla," "Avanguardisti," the "Piccole Italiane" and the "Giovani Italiane." The most recent report of M. Renato Ricci, Undersecretary of State for Education, available, gives the enrollment in these groups as:

Value of Pacifist Interlude.

Fascism in Italy, after a decade in which to consolidate itself, continues to be a rampant militarism. Out of what was once Blackshirt Terrorism, there appears to be emerging a militant nationalism. Mussolini still preaches, though not so loudly that it is heard across the frontiers as was the case two years ago, that another European War is inevitable. The Duce's "new policy" of advocating international disarmament at Geneva is neither in conformity with Fascism's program of the past, its present material preparation for war, or the cultural and spiritual training being given to Italian children to prepare them for the future.

The truth of the matter appears to be that Italy, having found itself in a tight financial and economic predicament because of the world crisis, has abandoned for the time being its ambitious military and naval program. Instead, the leaders are devoting their efforts to create a pacifist interlude which will enhance the feeling of security in Europe. Progressive disarmament of their neighbors is in effect equivalent to increased armaments for themselves.

Despite the publicity which has been attendant upon the Italian "Armaments Holiday" proposal at Geneva, Rome's military strength has not been weakened. Nor have the Fascists surrendered a single claim to equality with France in naval matters. In fact, a recent statement by Mussolini was to the effect that:

"Not only does Italy maintain integrally her right to naval parity with France, but she claims this right vis-a-vis the strongest naval power in the world. It is only because of her limited financial and economic posibilities that Italy refrains from emphasizing her right to naval parity with Great Britain."

In another discourse Mussolini, according to the Official Record, said:

"It is true that our military expenses, which before the war were 650,000,000 lire have now passed five billions, and that since 1922 (when the Fascists came into power) they have increased by two billions of lire."

Message to Future Mothers.

Even women are being "mobilized" in the Fascist drive for military perfection. Girls have been enrolled in classes taught to use firearms. In addressing the Young Italians at their annual reunion in Rome, M. Augusto Turati, secretary of the Fascist Party, said:

"You may be only those good mothers who know that they must give their sons, not only to the family, but to the country. And, if one day to these sons you must give a rifle, you will do it without whimpering, in a noble gesture of pride."

Premier Mussolini, himself, addressing the "Young Fascisti" on Sept. 21, 1930, is quoted in the Italian newspapers as saying: "Love the rifle, adore the machine gun, and in this gamut of sentiments, do not forget the dagger."

In preparing "human material for the next war" Mussolini announced that "the schoolbook and the rifle make perfect Fascists." The schools in Fascist Italy have become an adjunct of the military barracks.

In 1925 (Dec. 11) Mussolini declared: "I consider that the Italian

De Valera Himself, Says Lloyd George, Helped Draft the Oath of Allegiance He Now Asks Ireland to Repudiate

Former British Premier Writes of Negotiations He Conducted With Irish Free State in 1921, and Explains Gravity of Situation Which Has Suddenly Arisen.

By DAVID LLOYD GEORGE,
Former Prime Minister of Britain.

LONDON, April 2.

AS if there were not trouble enough in the world already, Mr. de Valera is stirring up fresh mischief where there was comparative peace.

He is not fishing in troubled waters for the Irish pond was as tranquil as any pool on earth today. He is one of those who deliberately trouble waters in the hope of catching something bright and finny. He may angle for a salmon, but, unless I am mistaken, he will have to be satisfied with a stickleback.

The Irish people have thrown aside Mr. Cosgrave under whose presidency they enjoyed a strong, efficient and business-like government because the younger spirits among them wearied of the tedium of so much good order and yearned for the thrills and uncertainties of a more reckless rule.

We now know something of the policy and purpose of the new regime, and what has so far been revealed is not reassuring. The new Government means to start by wantonly picking up the quarrel with Ireland's nearest neighbor and best customer—Great Britain.

Best Concord in 700 Years.

Not for 700 years had the relations between the two islands been friendlier than they have been since signing of the treaty. President de Valera seems to have set himself the task of provoking fresh causes of ill will and friction in lieu of those which had been buried by treaty.

It is ominous that the first two proposals he has made are calculated to dishonor the good faith of Ireland. He seems to be bent on emulating the perfidy of the Limerick Treaty.

He has signalized his entry into power by the declaration that he will abolish the oath of allegiance to the British Imperial Crown and will retain land annuities which are due the British exchequer.

The first proposal is in itself, and apart from its possible further implications, substantially a gesture of sulky and provocative defiance; the second would be a shameless act of embezzlement. Neither of them is calculated to advance the honor or ultimate prosperity of his country.

Retention of the land annuities might be regarded by those who pride themselves on being political realists as the more important concrete proposal. These annuities amount to about £3,000,000 sterling a year, and, if they are not forthcoming from Ireland, the British exchequer is liable to make good the loss.

It may be as well to explain briefly what these annuities are for. There can be no better illustration of a genuine effort made by Britain to redress the grievous wrongs inflicted by English rule in the past on the Celtic population of Ireland.

Many Efforts to Aid Tenants.

Between 1881 and 1909 there were no fewer than six Irish land-purchase acts, designed to enable tenants of land in Ireland to purchase their holdings and become owners of the soil they cultivated. Three-fourths of the farmers of Britain are still yearly tenants, liable to eviction from their homes by 12 months notice to quit, and, as for the remaining fourth, they received no help from the State to purchase their holdings. A large number of them are paying 5 per cent interest on the mortgages from the money they borrowed to pay for the purchase of the freehold.

Contrast this with the generosity of the terms given to the Irish peasant by the British Government. The Government advanced the whole of the purchase money and the former tenant, now become owner, had to pay an annuity to meet interest and sinking fund charges for this price.

The terms were very favorable since the average purchase price of the land was less than £10 sterling per acre and the interest charges on the money advanced were in most cases 2 3-4 per cent to 3 per cent per annum, plus 1 1-2 per cent for the sinking fund; so that the tenant became a freehold owner of his farm and instead of rent had to pay for a term of years a sum equal to from 3 1-4 per cent to 3 1-2 per cent of its price.

In addition, the British exchequer to facilitate agreement by landlords paid them a bonus averaging 12 per cent of the purchase price, which was a free gift from this country to grease the wheels of the scheme.

Altogether, the British exchequer had advanced prior to formation of the Irish Free State some £89,500,000 sterling for the land purchase and has paid nearly £10,000,000 in bonuses. Sinking fund repayments to date amount to about £13,500,000, so that about £76,000,000 are still outstanding.

Dishonest to Keep Annuities.

If President de Valera pockets the annuities paid by Irish land purchasers to the British exchequer he will have to make good interest payments to holders of land bonds with which these estates were purchased and ultimately also the capital sum of £76,000,000 still outstanding.

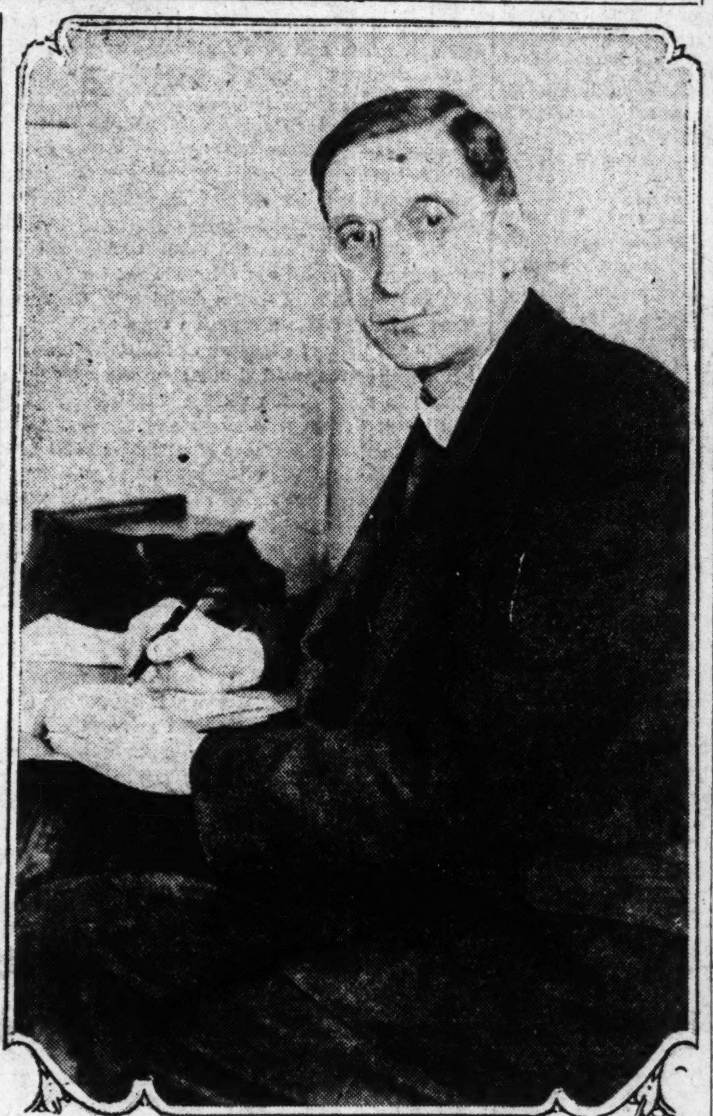
This advance by the British Government was not blown away in powder smoke—it represents substantial assets now enjoyed by the Irish peasantry. If the Irish Free State Government continues to collect annuities from the Irish peasantry and retains them for its own use, we shall be witnessing a remarkably cynical and dishonest act of repudiation that can have only the worst possible effect on relations of the two islands.

I ought to point out that Britain has already forgiven Ireland every penny of her share of the gigantic war debts under which the taxpayers of the neighboring island are bending. There was no just reason why this concession should have been made, for Irish representatives, siting in the Parliament of the United Kingdom quite unanimously voted in favor of our entry into the war.

As to the abolition of the oath of allegiance: it may be argued that this is a matter of words only and that in any case an oath sworn by an unwilling party who openly declares he does not hold himself bound by it is of very uncertain value. But against that view there are certain quite practical considerations to be urged.

Meaning of Allegiance Oath.

In the first place, it is just these immaterial foundations upon which the whole fabric of the British commonwealth of nations rests. Although some progress has recently been made in defining by written agreements the relations and mutual responsibilities existing among its constituent members the one permanent and essential characteristic of all is their common allegiance to the British crown. Remove that and they would fall apart into independent sovereign states disconnected from each other and their motherland.



The President of Ireland, Eamon De Valera

It is by virtue alone of that common allegiance that the free and self-governing dominions can claim as their right the protection of the imperial forces for their defense, the weight of British diplomacy for their interests, and, under recent legislation, preference for their products in British markets.

It is foolish and shortsighted to undervalue ideal and imponderable elements in human affairs. They may not be heavy and glittering like gold, but their purchasing power over human actions is far greater.

The common allegiance of the various members of the British Commonwealth is symbolized and expressed in the oath of allegiance take by their legislators and the officers of state. To dispense with it is like dispensing with the marriage ceremony. It leaves the parties without legal status or binding contract.

Secondly, the oath of allegiance is an integral and essential feature in the treaty by virtue of which the Irish Free State enjoys its present independence of status. Not only is it set outside in an article of that treaty; but when the treaty negotiations were proceeding it was then the item over which the fiercest controversies raged. Had there been no agreement ultimately reached as to this oath, the Irish Free State in its present form would not today be in existence.

Oath's Origin in Treaty.

In my long, drawn-out discussions with Mr. de Valera and his colleagues throughout 1921, which culminated happily in signing of the treaty, the issue on which I felt it necessary to be adamantine was maintenance of Ireland's allegiance to the British Crown and membership therewith in the British Commonwealth.

Without that no treaty would have been possible, for even if the British Government had agreed to omit this solemn recognition of Ireland's retention inside the Empire, the British Parliament would have refused to sanction such an agreement.

In every letter defining the basis of our discussions I have made this point clear. For example, in my letter of the 17th of September, 1921, I said:

"We cannot consent to any abandonment, however informal, of the principle of allegiance to the King upon which the whole fabric of the Empire and every constitution within it are based.

"It is fatal to that principle that your delegates in the conference should be there as the representatives of an independent and sovereign state. While you insist on claiming that, a conference between us is impossible."

When negotiations of the treaty were finally in progress, the Irish plenipotentiaries paid a special visit to Dublin to consult with Mr. de Valera about the oath, and he himself gave the following draft of the kind of oath which Ireland would accept:

I ——— do swear to bear true faith and allegiance to the Constitution of Ireland and the treaty of association of Ireland with the British Commonwealth of Nations and to recognize the King of Great Britain as head of the associated states.

De Valera's Draft Legalized.

That draft formed the basis of the oath eventually incorporated in the treaty which puts the same substance into legal language without adding any fresh pledges to those already implicit in Mr. de Valera's own suggestion. It was worded as follows:

I ——— do solemnly swear true faith and allegiance to the Constitution of the Irish Free State as by law established, and that I will be faithful to His Majesty King George, Fifth, his heirs and successors by law, in virtue of the common citizenship of Ireland with Great Britain and her adherence to and membership of the group of na-

Double Taxation Grows Apace As Expense of Government Runs Far Ahead of Population Growth

Federal and State Authorities Now Dipping Into Same Sources of Revenue — Taxpayers' Burdens Thrice the Increase in Their Earnings.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 2.

THE problem of levying taxes equitably is difficult enough at best; it becomes increasingly difficult in times of depression, like the present; and in the United States it is always attended with peculiar complications because of the existence, side by side, of two distinct sovereignties—the State Government and the Federal Government. A writer on economics quoted by Sir Josiah Stamp in his book, "The Principles of Taxation," has said that double taxation prevails to a greater extent in the United States than in any other part of the civilized world, and there is no reason to doubt the accuracy of this statement.

There is double, and sometimes multiple, taxation among the states, due to the ignoring of interstate comity in the use of the taxing power, and there is also double taxation of the same property by a state government and the Federal Government. With both the states and the nation reaching out for new sources of revenue, this latter phase of the problem has become especially acute.

As between the states and the nation, the difficulty arises from the lack of legally defined spheres of operation. Either authority may go poaching on the preserves that the other has come to regard as its own. Practically the only restraint is that of comity between governments, and comity, in times of stress, tends to break down. To paraphrase an observation by Sir Josiah Stamp, when coequal jurisdictions exist in one economic sphere and each of them needs money, we are likely to see taxation by each on the Donnybrook Fair principle of "See a head, hit it."

He was speaking of the relations between the British Government and the Dominions, but the remark is even more applicable to the relations between the United States Government and the states.

Broad Scope of Tax Laws.

We have lately, for example, seen the states, more and more, "invading" the field of tobacco taxation and the Federal Government giving serious thought to a tax on gasoline. The Federal Government for a long time had enjoyed a virtual monopoly of tobacco taxation, while the states, through prior occupancy of the gasoline-tax field and the exclusive use of it to date, had built up a sort of squatter's right against encroachments by Uncle Sam. Constitutionally, there is nothing to prevent the United States from adding its own tax on gasoline to a state tax, just as there is nothing to prevent the states from taxing tobacco.

Very little is said by the Constitution about taxation, but the scope of what is said is extremely broad. Congress is expressly given the power "to lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts and excises," with the proviso that they "shall be uniform throughout the United States." There are only two stated exceptions. "No tax or duty shall be laid on articles exported from any state," and "No capitation or other direct tax shall be laid, unless in proportion to the census or enumeration herein before directed to be taken." The inhibtion in this second clause was removed by the Sixteenth (Income Tax) Amendment of 1913, which conferred upon Congress the power "to levy and collect taxes on incomes, from whatever source derived, without apportionment among the several states and without regard to any census or enumeration." As generally interpreted, the income tax amendment did not extend the taxing power to a new subject, but simply removed whatever occasion may have existed for an apportionment among the states of taxes laid on income.

Reason for Tax-Free Bonds.

By implication, though not in terms, the Constitution prohibits the taxation of an instrumentality of the Federal Government by a state or of a state instrumentality by the Federal Government. Hence the issuance of tax-free bonds—a condition which, it is generally held, can only be altered by the adoption of some such constitutional amendment as was proposed by the Treasury some years ago.

Within the limitations noted, Congress has the power to lay and collect taxes of all kinds without restraint. As the Constitution has been interpreted by the Supreme Court, nothing in the Fifth or Tenth Amendments takes away any of this power. The right of Congress to tax being unrestrained, except as specifically limited by the Constitution, it is within the authority of Congress to select the objects upon which excises may be laid. It follows, according to the Court, that in the use of this power no want of due process can result.

How far-reaching is the power of taxation is indicated by an early decision of the Court in one of the leading cases under the taxation clause of the Constitution (Loan Association vs. Topeka). The Court said:

Supreme Court's View.

"Of all the powers conferred upon Government that of taxation is most liable to abuse. Given a purpose or object for which taxation may be lawfully used, and the extent of its exercise is in its very nature unlimited. It is true that express limitations on the amount of tax to be levied or the things to be taxed may be imposed by Constitution or statute, but in most instances for which taxes are levied, as the support of Government, the prosecution of war, the national defense, any limitation is unsafe. The entire resources of the people should in most instances be at the disposal of the Government. The power to tax is, therefore, the strongest, the most pervading of all the powers of Government, reaching directly or indirectly to all classes of the people."

As for the states, it has been held in numerous decisions of the Supreme Court that they have the right, so long as they do not trench upon the Constitution, to tax all persons, property and business within their jurisdiction or reach.

In the last two decades, the total tax burden in the United States, owing to the mounting expenditures of all the governmental divisions, local, state and national, has increased, in terms of actual dollars, about three and two-thirds times.

Huge Collections.

Figures running back to 1890 are available in the compilations of the National Industrial Conference Board. In that fiscal year, the combined tax collections of all the governmental divisions were $875,000,000. In 1913, they had grown to $2,187,000,000; in 1925, to $7,884,000,000, and in 1929, to $9,792,000,000. The total for 1929 represented an increase of 4.8 per cent over that for the previous year.

A few other figures will suffice to show how the tax burden has grown. In 1890, the total per capita tax was $13.88; in 1913, it was $22.66; in 1925, $68.64, and in 1929, $80.58.

Within recent years the greatest increases have been in state and local taxes. Comparing 1925 with 1929, we find that whereas Federal tax collections per capita increased only from $25.82 to

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

The Glass Bill.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

THE Federal Reserve Board and its advisory council, in criticising the Glass bill, maintain that bank financing of security flotations has enabled the building up of our large enterprises, which have contributed so much to the progress of industrial development in this country. This no doubt is essentially correct. But this building up process has been accompanied by alternating waves of reckless prosperity and despondent depression, while the severity of the latter phase has become progressively greater.

It is entirely probable that these booms followed by precipitate deflation have been aided and abetted by over-expansion of industry through the process of bank financing. A capital investment unjustified by an increase in consuming power has taken place, lured on by the lust for ever greater profits. While this sort of expansion can no doubt be financed by other means if the banks' connection with it is restricted, yet exerting control where it can most easily be applied should have some beneficial results. At least, it would prevent speculation from being based upon the funds of the depositor, which are theoretically, at least, to be used to finance commercial transactions.

The board declares that section 14 of the bill will interfere with financing real estate transactions. When it is realized that the great proportion of the credit expansion preceding the 1929 panic was due to increases in real estate mortgages, perhaps it will be agreed that this type of credit could well be restricted.

It seems obvious that our present difficulties are due to previous excesses. While the Glass bill may seek to employ dubious means for effecting necessary remedies, statements that such remedies are not called for indicate a lack of proper appreciation of some of the basic factors which lead to economic unstability. Nevertheless, the reserve board, and especially the members of the advisory council, who are bankers, are loath to foreswear sources of income which have been so remunerative in the past.

EDWIN ASHLEY LAMKE.

Will Vote for Man, Not Party.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I AM sorry to say I am a Hoover farmer and am down to solid rock. Only two men can break that rock, and they are Jim Reed and G. W. Norris. I have always voted the Democratic ticket, but from now on I am voting for the man, let him be Democrat or Republican. Some so-called Democratic leaders are no better than Hoover.

Bloomsdale, Mo. J. E. REDMON.

Mr. Hearst Points to Russia.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

SOME of our great editors endeavor to impress us with the idea that Russia has a great share in shaping our history. In past years any one with temerity enough to stand up and speak for the general welfare of the masses was called a Red, an anarchist and other vile names. In this group was one of our past Presidents, Theodore Roosevelt.

W. R. Hearst has branded the Congressmen responsible for the defeat of the sales tax as being disciples of Lenin and Stalin. If these men are guilty as charged by Mr. Hearst, we should send a rush order to Mr. Stalin for a few more La Guardias.

Mr. Hearst fears he and his like are about to be forced to bear their just share of taxation, which has heretofore been kept to a minimum.

After warning the people of the Communistic movement in Congress, Mr. Hearst should come to Kentucky and help save our State. Incidentally, he might uncover some of the money hoarded by the overpaid miners in the prosperous Eastern coal mining districts.

Fulton, Ky. R. W. COPELAND.

Query.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

HAS it ever occurred to any of our statesmen, who are now seeking every available object upon which to place a tax to pay our topheavy governmental obligations, that taxing labor-saving machinery is feasible?

FELIX P. LAWRENCE.

Big and Little Hoarders.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

WE READ much about people keeping their savings in a tin can or in the well-known sock. We are told to put this money to work, to buy Government bonds, which is fine, or to deposit it in our banks. The big banks now have more money than they can use or will use. In my opinion, the banks are wholesale hoarders of the American dollar. We will not have good times until capital is available for solvent borrowers. Take the owner of good real estate. Today he often finds it difficult to borrow a dollar from the banks. I am told that mortgages on real estate are not liquid, and still the wealth of our country is principally real estate. With the exception of Government bonds, what is more secure than real estate mortgages which are made on the proper basis?

Get after the wholesale hoarders of money and the small individual hoarders will come to the front quickly enough.

FRED W. PEPPING.

The People Rise Again

Something truly significant is happening in American politics. Fresh winds are blowing across the country. The observer who views the scene with even a short perspective is conscious that an unmistakable change is under way. New hands have taken hold. They have made their grip felt throughout the length and breadth of the land. They have given an indication of what may be expected of them and the hands that will rise to join them in the onrushing months of the future.

Proof lies in what is going on in Washington at the present. The revolt against a general sales tax, a revolt which in its essence was a mandate from the representatives of the people that the rank and file should not be forced to bear a disproportionate share of the financial burden of the Government, is a reminder that at intervals the popular will makes itself known in unmistakable terms. This salutary exhibition of popular interest during recent weeks calls to mind a similar manifestation a century ago, and raises the question whether another such awakening of the people is not under way.

On every hand the indications are that the transformation has already begun. The signs of the times point to another rise of him whom the historians call "the common man." They appear to presage another hearing of his interests, another period during which his welfare will be the prime consideration in matters of state—another such era as that which come into existence in the years leading up to Andrew Jackson's election and gained full sweep during his two terms as President.

For if the differences between the American scene in 1832 and 1932 are striking, no less striking are the things they have in common. The period leading up to Jackson may be said to have begun with the ending of the second war with England; the present period may be said to have begun with the ending of the World War. From 1815 to 1828 the forces of change were busily at work. The ideas and habits of an old order were being forced back by the advance of new ideas and practices that were to become new habits, and were to set the fashion for the years to the Civil War.

Similar considerations hold true for the period since the World War. While on the surface it has been made up of the years of Harding, Coolidge and Hoover, in reality it has been composed of years in which discontent with things as they are has steadily grown. Normalcy and the false prosperity which followed in its wake only raised the curtain on the economic breakdown which the more perceiving members of our society knew all the while was impending.

Prior to the elevation of the frontiersman, Jackson, to the White House, the Atlantic seaboard had been in undisputed control of national public affairs. The "Virginian dynasty" and the "succession of the secretaries" were common terms. The Adamses, father and son, had been born in Massachusetts, all the other Presidents in Virginia. The epoch-making election of Jackson changed all this. By the ballot box, the people deliberately turned their backs on the established leadership of the day. It was a startling performance, and it gave Virginia and New England deep concern. The rough and ready hero of the battle of New Orleans was to them an unfit man. He was what, 100 years later, was to be called "a son of the wild jackass."

In similar fashion, the present finds the people pledging themselves to new leaders. In the Senate, for example, the Lodges, the Penroses and the Knoxes were only temporarily succeeded by their kind, such men as George H. Moses and other supporters of the status quo from the Northeast. Today, the outstanding leaders are from the Middle West and the West—men such as Norris of Nebraska and Borah of Idaho, Walsh of Montana and Costigan of Colorado. Like Jackson, who left his native North Carolina to cross the Appalachian Mountains into the new territory of the Tennessee frontier, so these leaders of today left Ohio, Illinois, Wisconsin and Virginia to help in the rounding out of the country. Like Jackson, they are closer to the people because they are part of a society that is new in its building. Their feet, so to speak, touch soil still fertile and capable of great productivity.

Similarities between Jackson's time and our own increase when the periods are compared. There was the famous "tariff of abominations" of 1828; there is the even more abominable Hawley-Smoot tariff of our own day. There was the reaction against the former and its subsequent modification in 1832; there is the increasing protest in all quarters against the present restrainer of trade, with the certainty that in the near future its bonds will be cut so that general trade may again flow freely through normal channels.

As the period of Jackson revealed an awakening in popular interest in matters of politics and government, so likewise does our own. Wherever the people have newspapers which faithfully report the course of the fight over the tax bill and the balancing of the budget, keenly interested readers are following the proceedings in Washington with hardly less interest than the spectators who crowd the galleries of Congress day after day.

The sales tax revolt was led by a bi-partisan group of insurgents who broke from the leadership of their parties. In similar fashion was constituted the movement that vaulted Jackson to the highest office. No less a historian than Carl Russell Fish of the University of Wisconsin is authority for the conclusion that Jackson was not elected by a party, but instead by a cohesion of elements which had kicked over the traces in every part of the country, notably in the rising West. What is so evident in politics today, namely, that various branches of a political party may be farther apart than certain sections of "opposing" parties, was also true in the earlier period. The rising sectionalism that presaged the day of Webster and Benton, Calhoun and Clay, is matched by the wet and dry, urban and rural, cleavages of the present.

As a change has come over the Supreme Court in recent months, owing to an impress of public opinion, so, too, was that body feeling the force of the new winds of Jackson's time. Indeed, so keenly did Jackson feel about the relation between the Supreme Court and the people that he made his inauguration the occasion for a resounding challenge to the highest bench. John Marshall, the aging Chief Justice who administered the oath of office, heard the gaunt man of the people declare that a decision by the Supreme Court did not settle a question once and for all, but that, in the light of changing circumstances, any question might be reopened at any time and a new answer written in place of the verdict which had previously been handed down with grave and solemn authority.

Much as the people have shown a renewed interest in the character of appointments to the Supreme Court in recent years, so the followers of Jackson began to look upon the men and the work of that bench with critical eyes 100 years ago. As for the lower courts, the new democracy felt that in a measure they had come to stand between the citizen and the rights he was meant to enjoy under the Constitution. So, too, has persisted a similar view in our own day, until the feeling so manifested itself that Congress at last has enacted a law limiting the use of injunctions in labor disputes and declaring a national policy against employment contracts which bind workers not to join labor organizations.

Perhaps in no way is the resemblance greater between the present and the period with which we have been comparing the present than in the sober realization of each time that eras of wild speculation only result in financial ruin. Writing in Alton almost a century ago, Elijah P. Lovejoy used these words: "For the last three or four years the people of this nation have been pursuing after wealth, as their chief good, and with an eagerness unknown before in our history. * * * Our 'visions by night' have been of railroads, canals, bank stock, sections and quarter-sections of land and town lots. Speculation had become a perfect mania and we had become a nation of gamblers. * * * But the bubble has burst—and all our hopes of universal wealth are dissipated into thin air. We find ourselves a nation of bankrupts instead of a nation of Croesuses." What Lovejoy wrote in 1837 might have been written in 1930.

In one outstanding respect, the periods under discussion differ politically. No such leader as Jackson looms on the horizon to unite the rising elements. The followers of Jackson were not so clear as to the issues, but they were positive about their leader. Issues are clearer today. It is the leader who will join the various elements and carry them into effective expression that remains hidden to view. This is not to say that there are not men as able as Jackson in the country today. It is to say that the enlarged nation and its wide diversity of interests make it increasingly difficult for such leaders to come to the fore.

But, though the immediate presence of such an unmistakable leader is lacking, fresh winds are blowing in American politics. A definite movement is under way. What its outcome will be no one can say, but the past gives us ample reason to believe that the people have nothing to fear. That the Government is theirs and that it is safe in their hands is the fundamental concept of the republic.

Where the Money Went

Messrs. Cortez, Pizarro and other historic plunderers, from their vantage point on the Styx houseboat, must regard with envy their modern counterparts, the gentlemen whose field has been the United States. Aztec treasure and Inca gold represented a good enough haul for the sixteenth century, but, in the light of the plunder this country has furnished, they are a mere bagatelle.

We had occasion to refer recently to the real estate bond racket, one of the most fruitful forms of extracting money from the populace. Some 10 billions of dollars, a figure greater than half of our entire national debt, is now outstanding in this type of security. According to a committee of the Investment Bankers' Association, only four billions of this enormous investment may be considered safe or comparatively so. Holders of the remaining six billions may expect losses of from 10 to 100 per cent. Averaging the committee's estimates, it appears that losses of $2,112,000,000 have already been sustained. This is a capital loss and does not include the loss of interest on investment due to defaults.

It was brought out by Senator Johnson recently that American bondholders paid $1,667,562,000 for securities of 16 European countries. Their market value today is $925,559,000, representing a loss of $742,003,000. Securities of 14 Latin American countries, purchased in this country, amount to $1,597,575,900. Their market value is $422,007,868, representing a loss of $1,175,568,032. In addition to these shrinkages of capital values, investors have suffered loss of interest on defaulted bonds. Bonds, in the face value of $500,051,530, were defaulted in 1931, and defaults for 1932 have been announced for bonds to the face value of $315,287,340.

Of course, the losses taken by investors in the stock market were colossal. In September, 1929, at the peak of the Coolidge-Mellon boom, stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange had a quoted value of $89,670,000,000. As of Feb. 1, 1932, they had shrunk to $26,377,647,814, a loss of $63,292,352,186. This figure does not include stocks on other exchanges, or stocks, such as investment trust securities, sold over the counter. It is difficult to envision these huge sums. However, it may be of aid to point out that the latest figures available estimate the total wealth of the United States—realty, agricultural stock, manufactures, railroads and motor vehicles—at $320,803,862,000. Roughly, shrinkage in security values on the New York Stock Exchange amounts to 20 per cent of our national wealth.

There are millions of Americans who were not able to buy stocks and bonds in the era just closed, but the device of the tariff was used to plunder them. H. E. Miles, head of the Fair Tariff League, says that the Hawley-Smoot tariff takes from American consumers in tariff "graft" upwards of two billion dollars annually, and he has the concurrence of other tariff experts. This money goes from the pockets of the many into the pockets of the few. It is estimated that 500,000 stockholders in protected industries are the principal beneficiaries of the tariff.

In the past two years a shameful record of bank failures has been compiled. In 1930, 1345 banks gave up the ghost, while last year 2302 closed their doors. Deposits approximating two billion dollars are tied up and a large part of this sum is irrevocably lost. Yet those who, alarmed at the turn of events, withdraw their savings from banks, are denounced as hoarders.

It is not possible to arrive at exact figures of the wealth drained from our citizenry, but the aid of public accountants is not needed to discover that it is of gargantuan proportions. The country has been picked clean, but it has learned a great many valuable lessons in the process.

THOUGHTS BEHIND THE BLINDFOLD.

U. S.-Japanese Rivalry in China

Present Far Eastern strife is another phase in capitalist exploitation of China; Japan, wishing to sell goods, opposes industrialization of neighbor, and took armed action to hold market; U. S., because of distance, sends capital to finance Chinese industry; two nations thus stand opposed in economic and political motives there.

Wilhelm Tietgens in the Abend, Berlin Official Socialist Daily; (Reprinted from Living Age).

CHINA offers a very interesting sociological spectacle in that the capitalist economic and social system has created a situation that will finally lead to its own destruction. Capitalism penetrated China in order to exploit the great Chinese people and their national wealth. But the immediate result of this exploitation was that the economic and social forms of capitalism began to develop in a feudalistic peasant society.

Through close contact with foreigners, the Chinese came to recognize that their own economic and political weaknesses were due to defective science and technique. Therefore many Chinese students began going to Europe and America to equip themselves with European weapons. Japan had proved that in two generations a feudal society could undergo a tremendous transformation and be made into a modern, capitalistic, industrial state.

China's modern generation of intellectuals assimilated European science and technique. A Chinese middle class came into existence that was frankly nationalistic and that utterly repudiated ancient Chinese ideas. The economic interests of this middle class and its opposition to the economic imperialism of foreign nations brought forth a nationalistic ideology, a feeling of hostility to foreigners.

Because China's own imperial house, which was a foreign dynasty and not really Chinese, had laid itself out to capitulate to the foreign powers, the Chinese middle classes did not want a monarchy but a republic. To them the overthrow of the Manchu dynasty meant declaring war on foreign exploitation and constructing a Chinese economic system under their own control.

The victorious revolution of 1912 was the first defeat that the foreign capitalists in China suffered. Since that time the bourgeois, national state has developed in stormy fashion. China has been industrialized under the leadership of the Chinese middle class and of the national, bourgeois government known as the Kuomintang. This process was hastened by the World War.

Industrialization is making China economically independent and the influence of foreign capital is on the wane. Every new Chinese factory means one more defeat for the foreigner, who is gradually beginning to lose his influence. But not all foreign nations are losing at the same rate of speed. While the economic position of Europe, and England in particular, is rapidly weakening, Japan has entered on a new period of colonial exploitation.

Up to 1905, England's share of China's foreign trade had been declining, but it increased again after the World War, whereas Japan's share increased steadily. Japan penetrated China by way of Korea and Manchuria, and through the port of Shanghai it reached out into Central China. In Manchuria, Japan found the coal and metal that it needed for its industry, and it exported to Shanghai finished goods to be sold on the Chinese market.

The exploitation methods of the Japanese capitalists were even more infuriating to their yellow brothers on the mainland than the methods of the white capitalists. Japan was undergoing an economic transformation at unprecedented speed. It needed raw materials and enormous markets, both of which it seized with the brutality of a nation in the early phase of capitalist development.

Japan was thus brought into sharp conflict with the Chinese middle class. The hatred of the Chinese for Japan became a symbol of their hatred for all foreigners, especially since the Japanese took advantage of the World War to subdue China completely. However, this attempt failed because the European Powers resumed their profitable policy of expansion in China as soon as the war ended.

At the Washington conference, which dealt with the problem of China, along with other matters, Japan was forced to sign the Nine-Power Pact, which has been frequently referred to in the present crisis. This pact gave back the Europeans their old markets and checked Japan's activities in China. This conference was followed by a terrific economic war in and about China. The Chinese middle classes were supported by America in their efforts to build up native industry, because America wanted to invest its capital profitably.

No great amount of goods could be exchanged between China and America because the countries are too far apart. It was therefore more profitable for American capital to finance Chinese industries that could use the rich raw materials of the country and its cheap labor power to make goods to be sold on the enormous Chinese market. It was much easier to invest American capital in China and send the profits back home than to ship raw materials all the way to the United States and then send manufactured goods back to China. Since the end of the war, some three billion dollars of American capital have been invested in China.

American interest in China explains the sharp conflict between American and Japanese policies. The Japanese are compelled in defense of their own interests to prevent the development of Chinese industry. They have tried to do this by more or less concealed support of civil war, which is constantly making new difficulties for the Chinese Government. Nevertheless, the industrialization of the country continues.

Under these circumstances, the economic and financial difficulties of Europe arising from the world crisis gave Japan a favorable opportunity to make a new attack. Japan's military operations in Manchuria, undertaken on the pretext of suppressing Chinese bandits, were really a kind of trial balloon to test how much the other powers were wrapped up in domestic difficulties and how far they would allow Japan to go. Japanese capital already controlled Manchuria completely and did not need any military conquest. There was, however, immediate danger that the whole Chinese market would be lost to Japan, and a military attack was the only way that Japan's capitalistic interests could be protected.

Too Much Government

From the Kansas City Times.

THE facts about the multiplying functions and agencies of the Department of Agriculture, laid before the House Economy Committee by Secretary Hyde, furnish another example of overproduction in government. The Secretary has done well to recommend to Congress that a number of these functions and agencies be abolished or turned over to the states.

The growth and expansion of the services supplied by this department are out of all proportion to the need or demand for them. They represent the aspirations of government rather than the needs of agriculture, which is true of all other departments. It is an inevitable phenomenon of bureaucracy, which propagates itself, growing by what it feeds on.

The importance of the great agricultural industry of the United States cannot be overestimated; the propriety and necessity of the Government to aid and encourage it never has been called in question. So well established is this principle, indeed, that it has become the convenient and unsuspected cloak behind which bureaucracy has chosen to operate.

To aid agriculture, a market news service was established. That was proper and legitimate; but it is not proper and legitimate that this service should have been expanded until there are 69 such market news service offices scattered throughout the country. The service itself is for agriculture; the operation of the service is in the interest of bureaucracy. It is proper and legitimate that the department should have field stations and laboratories for the benefit of agriculture; it is not proper nor legitimate that it should have 775 such stations, doing duplicate work. The expansion was not for agriculture, but for bureaucracy.

Agriculture, like all other business and industry, can best be served by a vigorous trimming of government. The country is being smothered by government services. It is being kissed to death. Many of these services are altogether unnecessary, others are a duplication of those furnished by the states and others, and, if they are proper at all, should be supplied wholly by the states. Some of them, indeed, should not be furnished by either the Federal Government or by the states, but by the homes, if they are required at all.

In that class of service may be lumped all those by which government now seeks to instruct the American housewife in how to make lemon pies and rompers. How those problems were met by the wives and mothers of America before the Department of Agriculture was established, a little more than 60 years ago, nobody now knows, but in some way the Civil War was carried on and the Western wilderness and deserts subdued without the Bureau of Home Economics.

In reducing government to a size where it can be put into the clothes provided for it by the Constitution, Congress should observe the simple rule that government is the servant of the people of the United States and not their master. Its function is to serve the people and not itself. When it gets out of bounds, as it now is, and assumes to build itself up for its own benefit at the cost of the people whose welfare it is supposed to promote, it should be put back in its place, and with no gentle hand.

R. HELLER CALLS EDUCATION TODAY OO EXPERIMENTAL

Needs Guidance of Immutable Principles, Not Transitory Fashions, He Tells Midwest Conference Here.

HAS FAILED TO LIFT MORAL STANDARDS'

ys Modern Teaching Has Fallen Short of Immunizing Youth Against Worst Environment.

e abrupt change in methods education from the ways of experience to the ways of experiment s been one cause of the disturbnces of our social order, Dean tto Heller of Washington University's Graduate School said yesrday at the fifth annual Mid-West ducational Conference at the unirsity.

He spoke on the need for ideas d ideals in education at a forum which other speakers dealt with ts and science. "We are prone, said, to forget the fallibility and n-finality of many things which enthusiast hails too readily as ts, and in the long run education be guided not by transitory ions, but by immutable principles.

Modern education, he continued, neither upset nor perceptibly ated the moral status of society, it has failed to counteract colteral influences of a ruinous sort "failed signally to immunize uth against the worst effects of environment." That, he said, is e best that can be said for modn education, and its worst indictment.

Criticises Wickersham Report.

Dr. Heller "noted with wonder" the Wickersham Commission d not seen a possibility of a conction between the declining orthiness of our conditions and e prevailing system of education. "Especially does it strike me as d," he said, "that their report uches not at all on the strange ntrast between the enormous velopment of education on the e hand, and on the other, the s of cultivated taste and a sentional moral deterioration. For, the irony of events, the ascendy of the 'new education,' has chronized in a curious fashion th the spread of vulgarity and e advent of the so-called crime ve which threatens to wash our ilization overboard.

"I am not fool enough to raise ccusing finger at the school as irect agency of crime, vice and garity. For that office we have e movies. I do submit that the sy conversion of teaching from art to a science, has had somehing to do with the social derangent from which we suffer.

"Progress has been made. Teachs are more efficient and illiteracy s been almost stamped out, but e has been done to correct the unterpart of illiteracy on the ane of culture; that is, gross unrituality. If we look only for stic progress, our education s been a marked success. If we greatly concerned about the inlcation of fine ideas and high eals in the adolescent generation, less optimistic judgment is suggested."

Speaks on Child Development.

Dr. Lois Meek of the child development institute of Columbia University spoke of the scientific tudy of pre-school children as aluable in making possible a better selection of courses of instruction later. Measurements of mental development had shown, she aid, that changes in children from irth to the age of six are tremenously rapid. It seemed, however, within that period the fact of e child's age is more important s intellectual development than e method of teaching.

Dean Melvin E. Haggerty of the ollege of Education of the Unirsity of Minnesota, spoke of the eed for facts in educational thinking. "There is much loose talk, he id, about "mass production" ethods of education in large hools. As a matter of fact, he id, the number of faculty memrs per pupil in the large schools now larger than formerly.

He referred to investigations ade to determine what relation ay exist between the high school cord of an applicant for admisn to college in his prospective ccess in college work. There emed to be some relation between e quality of high school work and ccess in college, he said, but the urse of studies pursued in high hool seemed to have little effect determining whether a student uld do well in college.

Taxation Grows Faster Than U. S. Population Increases

$27.39, state collections went from $9.64 to $13.42 and local collections from $33.18 to $39.77.

Of the total tax burden in 1929, Federal collections were $3,328,000,000; state collections, $1,631,000,000, and local collections, $4,833,000,000. Federal collections were 34 per cent of the total; state, 16.7 per cent, and local, 49.3 per cent.

Taxed, Then Taxed Again.

Double taxation as between the states and the Federal Government is especially noticeable in the field of income taxation. Though the states, nominally, were the first in this field, Delaware and Massachusetts having had a tax similar to the general income tax at the end of the eighteenth century, the tax came to be looked upon, after the adoption of the income tax amendment in 1913, as primarily a prerogative of the Federal Government. It is now the backbone of the Federal tax system.

Notwithstanding the rate reductions after the war, the proportion of Federal income taxes to total Federal taxes for the fiscal year 1930 reached the high mark of 66.4 per cent—a higher percentage than for any other of the 10 fiscal years from 1921 to 1930. It is the heavy shrinkage of returns from the income tax since 1930, due to the business depression, that is now causing Congress not only to propose higher income tax rates, but to look about frantically for new sources of revenue.

But the new Federal income tax rates will be imposed in a field upon which there has been, in recent years, a steady encroachment by the states. As late as 1924, only 12 of the states were levying income taxes. Today, 28 of them, or more than one-half, have income taxes of some kind. In the majority of cases the maximum rate of tax is fairly low, but the tax in general has a broader base than the present Federal tax.

States More Lenient.

The maximum usually is about 5 per cent on net income of over $15,000; this contrasts with a Federal scale in which the surtaxes run up to 20 per cent of net income in excess of $100,000.

The state income taxes, in most cases, reach down to single persons with a net income of about $1000 and to married persons with a net income of about $2000. Under the present Federal law, the exemptions are respectively $1500 and $3500, but these are about to be reduced.

It is not unlikely that the income tax rates in various states, like the Federal rates, will be increased in the near future. For the fiscal year 1928, state income taxes yielded $56,000,000.

In all except two of the states, Alabama and Nevada, there is double taxation, state and national, on inheritances; but in this field the Federal law provides an arrangement whereby a definite division of receipts between the states and the Federal Government is possible.

Inheritances have been a general subject of state taxation for about 40 years. The Federal Government did not enter the field, except for war emergency purposes, until 1916. A long period of controversy over the respective prerogatives of the states and the national Government ensued. It was held by the states, in general, that the taxation of inheritances was peculiarly a state rather than a Federal function because of the transmission of estates under state laws. Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, who consistently supported this position, came out in 1925 with a definite appeal for the abandonment of the Federal estate tax. On the other hand, there was strong support, as there is today, for the theory that the Federal Government should use the tax in increasing measure, not only for its revenue-producing possibilities, but also as a social weapon for breaking up great accumulations of capital.

Congress declined to follow Mellon, but it did, in the act of 1926, yield up most of the benefits of the tax to the states. It provided in this act that a credit up to 80 per cent should be allowed against the Federal estate tax on account of any estate or inheritance taxes paid to a state. This is the present law. The effect is, if the state levy is equal to 80 per cent of the total tax as computed by the Federal Government, to give the State 80 per cent of the receipts and the Federal Government 20 per cent. If a state has inheritance tax rates which do not equal 80 per cent of the Federal taxes, that state loses revenue which it might have had without imposing any additional burden on its decedents.

Giving States Their Share.

Though the arrangement was criticised at the time as an effort on the part of Congress to dictate the fiscal policies of the States, the majority of them have since adjusted their rates so as to get the full benefit of the 80 per cent credit. Even Florida, which sought to make itself attractive to millionaires by the adoption in 1924 of a constitutional amendment prohibiting inheritance taxes, fell into line last year by lifting the ban and passing a law to absorb the full 80 per cent credit.

The extent to which the States have adjusted their laws to make them dovetail with the Federal law is indicated by the fact that state credits on estate taxes assessed during the calendar year 1929 amounted to 73.4 per cent. The current yield to the States is estimated at about $100,000,000. So successfully has the estate tax law worked in producing revenue for the States, on a uniform basis, that some of the farm organization leaders have urged the Federal Government to devise a similar arrangement for the division of revenues from income taxes.

The Ramseyer amendment to the pending tax bill would not disturb the existing scheme of division of estate tax proceeds with the States. It would impose a sort of supertax on estates for the sole benefit of the Federal Government, with the States continuing to get the amounts to which they would be entitled under the present law.

Gasoline a Rich Source.

If the Federal Government, under the pressure of its dire need for new money, should decide to put a tax on gasoline, it might point by way of extenuation to the rush of the states into the domain of tobacco taxation. Federal tobacco taxes, 80 per cent of which are from cigarettes, have become in recent years an increasingly important factor in the Government's total receipts. Last year they amounted to more than $450,000,000—a greater sum than is now being yielded by the customs duties. The tobacco taxes in 1930 accounted for more than 95 per cent of all the Government's receipts from sumptuary taxes.

Thirteen states, some of them, as Ohio, very recently, have entered this field, and others apparently are planning to do so at an early date. As in the case of the Federal tax, cigarettes provide the bulk of the revenue from the State tobacco levies. They furnish an outstanding example of double taxation. On top of the 6 cents which the Federal Government takes out of the standard price of 15 cents for 20 cigarettes, Arkansas levies a tax of 5 cents, Tennessee 4 cents, Georgia, Mississippi, North Dakota, South Carolina, South Dakota and Texas, 3 cents; Iowa, Kansas, Ohio and Utah, 2 cents. Alabama exacts a cigarette tax amounting to 15 per cent of the wholesale price.

Taxes and Reduced Sales.

Representatives of the tobacco industry, appearing before the House Ways and Means Committee in opposition to the Treasury's suggestion that the Federal tax on cigarettes be increased by 1 cent a package, said the continued piling up of taxes on this commodity would presently bring into play the "law of diminishing returns," if, indeed, it had not done so already. Not merely the depression, they said, but also the imposition of new state sales taxes was to blame for a loss of Federal revenue from cigarettes amounting to $18,500,000 for the first six months of the fiscal year 1932. Cigarette sales in the states having a cigarette tax, the tobacco men said, dropped in 1930 to less than half the average per capita sales in the United States as a whole. The Ways and Means Committee after hearing arguments pro and con decided against increasing the Federal levy.

The Treasury's proposal of a 1-cent tax on gasoline (which also, for the time being, has been laid on the shelf) would have put the Federal Government into a field which the states have found increasingly productive. Oregon was the first state to levy the tax, in 1919. Today there is a gasoline tax in every State of the Union and the District of Columbia. One state, Florida, imposes a tax of 7 cents; five states, 6 cents; nine states, 5 cents; 17 states, 4 cents; one state, 5½ cents; 11 states, 3 cents; four states and the District of Columbia, 2 cents.

Incomes Lag Behind Expenses.

In Alabama the state tax of 5 cents is built up in some instances by county and municipal levies to a total of 8 cents. Mississippi counties along the Gulf Coast supplement the state tax of 5½ cents with local levies of 2 or 3 cents a gallon. Missouri has a state tax of 2 cents, fixed by a constitutional provision which also permits municipalities to levy a tax of 1 cent. For all the states the average tax on gasoline is now 4.06 cents, as compared with an average of 3.55 a year ago. The total yield is estimated at about $500,000,000.

It has been estimated that in the 16 years from 1913 to 1929 the cost of all the governments in the United States increased 347 per cent while the national income increased 148 per cent and the population only 25.9 per cent. Governmental expenditures, in other words, grew more than twice as fast as national income and more than three times as fast as the population.

Of course these figures do not tell the whole story. There were compensating benefits, like the building of roads from the gasoline tax, and it has got to be remembered that a great part of the Federal increase was due to the war and its aftermath. But the figures do expose a condition for which waste and mismanagement, corruption and graft, are largely responsible. As long as this condition, from whatever causes, exists, we may expect to see the Federal Government, the states, the counties and the municipalities all looking about for new heads to hit, and some of these heads are bound to be hit more than once.

MORE PLEDGES TO AID BLIND BROOM MAKERS

They Include One Contribution of $100 a Month for a Year.

Pledges towards a monthly guarantee sufficient to make possible the re-opening of the St. Louis Broom Shop, 1908 Locust street, which closed Thursday for lack of funds, include one of $100 a month for a year and a similar amount for nine months, the Missouri Commission for the Blind announced yesterday.

Mrs. Mary Dranga Campbell, executive director for the commission, has estimated the 125 blind broom makers, dependent now on charity, cannot get their jobs back unless about $3500 a month until Jan. 1 is guaranteed. Another State appropriation, will be available then but extra funds still may be necessary to assist in making up the margin of loss on which some of the brooms are sold.

The monthly guarantees received thus far include one for a year by J. D. Wooster Lambert; for nine months by Mrs. Newton Wilson; for two months by Louis H. Waltke and for five months by Arthur B. Baer.

Grace Bell pledged $50 a month for nine months and F. E. Briner $50 a month for three. The committee for the Blind of the Council of Jewish Women gave a $100 pledge.

Cash contributions include five of $100 each from Julius A. Baer, Sidney R. Baer, Aaron Fuller, Leo C. Fuller and A. Tilles.

A telephone broom selling campaign to dispose of 12,000 surplus brooms at $1 each will be continued tomorrow. If all are sold, the profits will add $3600 to the fund.

tions forming the British commonwealth of Nations.

Repudiation of the oath is therefore denouncing of a treaty whereby it was set up, and it will leave the whole question of the status of that state vis a vis other members of the British Commonwealth of Nations uneasy and indefinite. This is not a petty or negligible issue.

What further developments of this situation may take place, it is yet too early to say. Great Britain has heartiest good will to Ireland, and I trust that the petulant folly of President de Valera will fail to impair that good will. Wise and patient statesmanship may prevent the situation from giving rise to friction between the two countries which would do harm to both.

At the same time, there is no escaping the fact that the fortunes of Ireland and Great Britain are quite indissolubly bound together. Geographically, historically, racially and economically, they are inseparable.

Ireland is the second largest member of the group of British Isles. Today the Irish Free State sells over 96 per cent of its exports to the United Kingdom and purchases from that source over 76 per cent of its imports.

As Abraham Lincoln said of the Southern states on the brink of the American Civil War:

"Physically speaking, we cannot separate. We cannot remove our respective sections from each other nor build an impassable wall between them. It is impossible then to make that intercourse more advantageous or more satisfactory after separation than before."

Full independence in terms of self-government and internal freedom the Irish Free State already enjoys. Utter separation such as would make it a foreign and alien state would be a curse alike to it and to Great Britain.

"The Ocean protests against separation and the sea against union." So declared the Irish patriot, Grattan, in a famous phrase. Whether Great Britain could do without Ireland or not, it is certain that Ireland could not do without Britain.

That balance between separation and union which Grattan demanded for Ireland is an object to which I have devoted a very great deal of time and some of the most strenuous, exhausting efforts of my political career. It was with profound thankfulness that I was able before I left office to look back on the completion of the Irish Treaty of which I was privileged to be the principal negotiator on the British side.

That treaty was welcomed and acclaimed in every country in the world, not least in the United States of America, as bringing to a happy and satisfactory conclusion a centuries-old distress. It has so far worked well and harmoniously.

Great Britain has powerful means for defending her own interests where Ireland is concerned, but the one desire of all people on this side of the Irish Sea is that no folly of Irish statesmanship shall succeed in impairing the happy relations and good understanding which in the last 10 years have grown up between us.

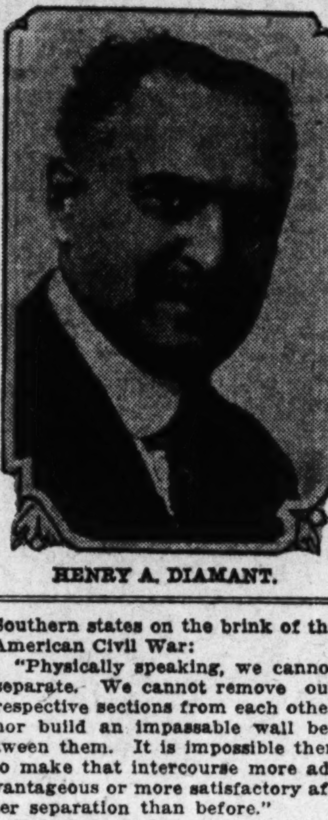
STAMP EXPERT DEAD



HENRY A. DIAMANT.

HENRY A. DIAMANT DIES SUDDENLY

Business Leader Had Successful Stage Career When Young Man.

Distinguished by a versatility that brought eminence in business, in a hobby and in one of the most difficult of the professions, Henry A. Diamant, 69 years old, died suddenly yesterday at his home, 5636 Cabanne avenue.

For 34 years Mr. Diamant had been president of the St. Louis Commission Co., 208 North Main street. As Martin Hayden, in a stage career of 15 years before he entered business, he had become internationally known as actor, playwright and producer. His pursuit of a hobby had made him president of the American Philatelic Society, and his stamp collection one of the finest in this country.

Mr. Diamant was preparing to attend a meeting of the society in New York, and partners said he seemed enthusiastic and in excellent health. He collapsed after dressing yesterday for breakfast, and physicians expressed the opinion that he died of heart disease.

The stage drew Mr. Diamant away from the study of law. Born in St. Louis and educated in private schools here, he appeared in amateur productions here with a success that brought him a professional engagement with Shook & Collier in the Union Square Theater in New York City.

Becomes a Producer.

Playing there in "The Prisoner for Life," he attracted the notice of other managers and had juvenile parts in several plays before taking the title role in "The Boy Hero" in which he made his first professional appearance in St. Louis, returning several times to the old Havlin Theater with his own company in various plays after he had entered the producer's side of the profession.

With his performance in "Held In Slavery," written my himself, his New York reputation was made. Charles Frohman selected him to play Lupin in "Thermidor," with a nall-star cast. He went to London as stage director of Kiralfy's Hippodrome, and became manager of the Olympic Theater for Sir Augustus Harris, with whom he produced "Chitral," a spectacular entertainment calling for all the resources of the Olympia, then the largest theater in the world.

In London he met Miss Freda Hucke, daughter of a St. Louis manufacturer, and Miss Hucke, who had gone to London as a soubrette, returned to St. Louis with him as his bride after the death of Sir Augustus terminated their plans for Drury Lane productions.

On World's Fair Committee.

Tiring of theatrical life, Mr. Diamant purchased a partnership in the commission firm. He became a leader in business circles, serving as president of the Raw Fur and Wool Association, in various offices in the old Business Men's League, and as a member o fthe Committee of 200 for the World's Fair here in 1904.

Despite his business interests, the lure of the stage persisted. He was frequently consulted by professional and amateur producers, as was Mrs. Diamant, who participated in many Jewish charity or cultural performances. Mr. Diamant had been secretary of the first Young Men's Hebrew Association here, and had edited probably the first Jewish periodical in St. Louis, a monthly "Society Record" published in 1879.

Mr. Diamant is survived by his widow, a daughter, Miss Doris Diamant, and a sister, Mrs. Simon Jacobson. Funeral arrangements wait upon the return this afternoon of Mrs. Diamant, whom he was to have joined this week in New York.

nation is in a state of perpetual war. I have said and I repeat that the five or 10 years to come will be decisive ones, because of the international fight, which is to be unchained...and we who arrive late on the world stage should not dissipate our energy."

Five years later he said: "The Italian peninsula is today an immense field for military maneuvers where millions of men are silently training themselves on the ground, on the sea, in the skies, in the schools, in the stadium, in the churches, for the great sacrifice of life, for the regeneration of the race, for Latin eternalness, and for the great battle that will come tomorrow or never."

Propaganda in Textbooks.

Today, when the International Committee on Intellectual Co-operation and members of the League are seeking to eradicate from textbooks and the minds of the rising generation dreams of war, the most important Italian pedagogical review, I Diritti della Scuola, recommends to teachers that constant emphasis be placed upon the injustices of the Versailles treaty vis-a-vis Italy, the faults of France and Jugo Slavia and the mistakes of President Woodrow Wilson.

At Geneva—the official report to the League on Italy's state of armaments gives the number of militia officers under arms as 3404; men and sub-officers, 8784. Premier Mussolini, speaking before the Senate, disclosed the fact that the permanent military service so classified numbered 76,000. A small discrepancy of about 67,000. Likewise, official figures place the total officers and men in the militia ready for instantaneous mobilization at 395,076—which doubles Italy's standing army.

"Hit or Miss" Saving Is Mostly Miss

The reason so many people fail to accumulate any substantial amount of wealth is that they do not follow a definite plan in managing the money they earn. The haphazard method of saving a little money now and then when it happens to be left over from the monthly income will never meet with success.

Proper management of money requires the setting aside of a definite amount at regular intervals and the secure and permanent investment of what you are setting aside. And that's just what a Farm and Home plan provides.

Stop the "Hit or Miss" style of trying to save. Ring up a "Bull's Eye" with the sure-shot Farm and Home Plan. Write or phone the nearest office for full details.

MISSOURI STATE LIFE CO. ELECTS W. T. NARDIN HEAD

Directors Name Him for Vacant Post When Judge C. I. Dawson, Louisville, Refuses to Serve.

Settling the troublesome question of the presidency of the Missouri State Life Insurance Co., directors yesterday unanimously elected William T. Nardin, who took charge at once on a part-time arrangement.

At the same time, the board received the refusal of Federal Judge Charles I. Dawson of Louisville, Ky., to accept the presidency, which was tendered him last December. Judge Dawson will remain on the bench but will continue as a director of Missouri State Life, having been placed on the board when the executive position was offered him.

Harry S. Tressel, who became executive vice president Jan. 19, resigned yesterday. His pay had been fixed at $18,000 a year. Abolition of his position was recommended by a committee of insurance commissioners from several states that looked into the company's affairs late in February. Tressel was formerly secretary of the Security Life Insurance Co. of Chicago.

Nardin's salary was fixed at $25,000 a year. It is understood that Judge Dawson was offered $40,000 a year for full-time service. At one time Hillsman Taylor, who resigned as president in December, received $50,000 a year. Taylor's resignation resulted from factional difficulties between two large groups of stockholders and Judge Dawson was chosen as his successor when the factions ironed out their difficulties. Nardin was one of the several directors elected at the annual meeting last January in behalf of Judge Dawson.

Why Dawson Declined.

Judge Dawson, who has a life position at $10,000 a year on the Federal bench, wanted to be assured of reasonable permanency in office if he took the insurance presidency. As a principal means of accomplishing this, arrangements were being completed last week to place in a voting trust the 29 per cent of Missouri State Life stock owned by the Inter-Southern Life Insurance Co. of Louisville.

E. D. Nims, chairman of the Executive Committee, which has been directing the management during the interim, said the inability of Judge Dawson to accept the place "was due to the fact that certain details which he deemed essential to his coming with the company could not be satisfactorily worked out." Nims indicated that among these was the voting trust plan, but said it likely would be put into effect anyway.

Judge Dawson, in declining, said the recent receivership suit against the company had nothing to do with his action. The Judge had planned, after his election, to resign from the bench and take up his work March 1. He delayed, however, while the voting trust was under discussion, but the action of Circuit Judge Hall last Tuesday in appointing receivers for the company brought matters to a head. Judge Dawson came here for meetings of the directors on Friday and yesterday, and Friday night he and Nardin and Theobald Felss of Cincinnati, chairman of the board, conferred with State Superintendent of Insurance Thompson at Jefferson City.

Thompson told them it was imperative to settle the question of the presidency at once and advised Judge Dawson to take the place, telling him not to hesitate over the company's condition. At that time there was no indication of giving the place to Nardin. According to Nims, the Judge did not wish to elaborate on his reasons for declining.

Receivership Action Blocked.

The Supreme Court of Missouri, at the company's application, issued a provisional rule of prohibition late Friday, directing Judge Hall to take no action in the receivership before a hearing by the Supreme Court on May 14. The company hopes to have the receivership set aside.

Nardin, who owns only a small amount of Missouri State Life stock, said he would devote whatever time was necessary to the company. He will continue as vice president and general manager of the Pet Milk Co., large producers of condensed milk, a place he has held for about 10 years. "I'll represent no one but all the policy holders and all the stockholders," said Nardin.

Nardin, who was born in Rushville, Ill., is 57 years old. He was graduated from the law school of the University of Missouri in 1907 and practiced law here until 1919, most of the time being a partner of the late X. P. Wilfley, former United States Senator. In 1919 he joined the Pet Milk Co. He became chairman of the Canned Milk Committee of the wartime United States Food Administration in 1917. Mrs. Nardin is Republican City Committeewoman from the Twenty-eighth Ward but will not seek re-election this year. The Nardins reside at 6253 Westminster place.

YOUTH IS ACQUITTED OF COUSIN'S MURDER

Fredericktown Boy Contends Another Man Threw Woman's Body Down Mine Shaft.

By the Associated Press.

FREDERICKTOWN, Mo., April 2.—Amos Lewis, 20 years old, was acquitted by a jury last night on a charge of murdering Mrs. Emma Cole, 54, his cousin, who was killed in February, 1931, and her body thrown into the shaft of an abandoned lead mine six miles west of here.

The jury returned its verdict after two hours' deliberations. The State had asked for the death penalty, while the defense contended the crime was committed by another man. The circuit courtroom was crowded throughout the four days' trial.

Taking the witness stand, Lewis, who was arrested in Los Angeles last February, said that when he went to Mrs. Cole's home near Pevely, Feb. 24, 1931, to take her to live with his family, she was in the company of a man who was a stranger to him. The man accompanied them, Lewis said, and when they reached the abandoned mine on the way to the Lewis home, he ordered Lewis to stop the automobile and leave him alone with Mrs. Cole. Lewis said he left them, and when he returned later Mrs. Cole was not in sight.

The stranger, Lewis said, gave him $300 and told him to leave the country.

The State, building its case on circumstantial evidence, contended Lewis killed the woman and took her money. L. L. Womach, railroad station agent at Fredericktown, testified that when Lewis appeared at the station to buy a ticket to the West, he appeared nervous and one sleeve of his shirt was stained as though by blood.

The body of Mrs. Cole was found in the mine shaft in May, 1931.

ATTEMPT TO REMOVE GUARDIAN OF MRS. J. SHEPPARD SMITH

Children of Banker's Widow Allege Court Orders Have Been Ignored.

The Sheriff's office has been served with notice of a motion to be filed in Probate Court seeking the removal of John P. Cabanne as guardian and curator of his sister, Mrs. Susan C. Smith, widow of J. Sheppard Smith, who was president of the Mississippi Valley Trust Co.

The action was taken by Mrs. Smith's children, Ellsworth F., Miss Sunie, J. Sheppard Jr. and Cabanne Smith, who allege Cabanne, co-guardian and curator with the Mississippi Valley Trust Co., has ignored orders of the Probate Court, in which a jury found Mrs. Smith incompetent.

In particular it is alleged that Cabanne interferes with the handling of the case by Dr. Frank Fry, who was appointed by the Court to be in complete charge of Mrs. Smith. The motion, to be filed by the law firm of Fordyce, White, Mayne & Williams, asks that Ellsworth F. Smith be appointed to succeed Cabanne as curator and guardian with the trust company.

Mrs. Smith was in a Wisconsin sanitarium from April, 1928, to March 7 last, when her condition admitted of her being removed to her home at 4334 Westminster place. She has an income of $10,000 a year from the estate of her husband.

Lucy Thompson, Alice Stocking Become Brides

Cabanne Smith Weds the Former, While Minister's Daughter Is Married to James P. Wilson.

TWO interesting post-Easter weddings took place yesterday.

At 5:30 o'clock, at her fa[illegible]s home, Miss Lucy Montford Thompson, daughter of Guy Atwood Thompson, 32 Washington terrace, became the bride of Cabanne Smith, son of Mrs. J. Sheppard Smith, 4334 Westminster place, and the late Mr. Smith. Because of mourning in the bridegroom's family, the guests were limited to relatives and a few close friends.

Quantities of fragrant spring blossoms were arranged throughout the house and the stairway was garlanded with smilax and flowers. The bridal party descended the stairs and passed through an aisle of white ribbon attached to flower-topped posts down the length of the drawing room, through the dining room and between marble columns to the breakfast room overlooking the garden. The altar was built of Easter lilies banked against palms and ferns between two windows, and was flanked by slanting tiers of many candelabra containing dozens of lighted cathedral tapers. The service was read by the Rev. Dr. William Crowe of Westminster Presbyterian Church. A stringed orchestra concealed by palms and ferns in the music room played the wedding march.

The bride was attended by her sisters, Mrs. William Alex Bor[illegible], formerly Miss Kate Edmondstone Thompson, as matron of honor, and Miss Susie Thompson as maid of honor. They were gowned in robin's-egg blue crepe and carried in marked contrast arm bouquets of yellow and purple blossoms. Joanna Hill roses, yellow iris, daisies and yellow snapdragon were combined with purple iris. The gowns were designed on clinging princesse lines, with narrow crepe belts fastened with—rhinestone buckles. The bodices were adorned with flounced capes, worn one flounce over the arm and the other underneath drawn to the left shoulder and tied in a bandana knot. Their slippers matched their gowns and were cut in the prevailing sandal effect.

The bride's gown was of white [illegible] depending from a high boat neck into a built-in train. The satin was fitted to the figure by means of star tucks at the waist. There were short sleeves edged with flared flounces. The bride wore Mrs. Borders' wedding veil of tulle arranged to a tulle cap finished with orange blossoms. She carried lilies of the valley.

J. Sheppard Smith Jr., was his brother's best man, and Ellsworth Smith, another brother; Mr. Borders, brother-in-law of the bride, and Alexander and Edmonstone [illegible]mpson, her brothers, were ushers.

An informal reception followed. The table was arranged with a center piece of Joanna Hill roses surrounded by clusters of lilies of the valley, sweet peas and iris.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith will spend their honeymoon in Mexico City and Monterey, and will make their home on Bissonet avenue, Houston, Tex., where Mr. Smith is in business.

The bride is a graduate of the University of Missouri and made her debut three seasons ago at a party at the St. Louis Country Club at which her cousin, Mrs. L. Wade Childress, was hostess. She is a member of the Junior League and has traveled abroad. Mr. Smith [illegible] educated at the Missouri School of Mines. He is a member of the St. Louis Country and Racquet clubs. His mother was Miss Eunie Cabanne, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charless Cabanne, and he is related to other St. Louis families of prominence.

The wedding of Miss Elizabeth Porter Stocking, daughter of the Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Jay Thomas Stocking, 13 Windermere place, and James Penfield Wilson, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. O. Wilson, 14 Windermere place, took place last night at the Pilgrim Congregational Church, of which the bride's [illegible]er is pastor. Dr. Stocking performed the ceremony. Palms and ferns gave a touch of green to the church decorations which were clusters of pale pink and pale blue hydrangeas, with Easter lilies banking the pulpit back of the bridal party.

It was a pink and blue wedding. Miss Alice Stocking, who was her sister's maid of honor, and Miss Josephine Stocking, another sister, the bridesmaid, were gowned in pale pink and pale blue respectively, and their flowers were pink snapdragon and blue delphinium. The gowns were fashioned alike of crisp organdie, with off-shoulder bodices adorned with berthas falling in points in the back and front and over the arms. Matching velvet girdles with long streamers encircled the high waists and the skirt, fitted to the hips, flared to the floor and were trimmed with series of ruffles.

The bride was given in marriage by her uncle, Dr. Donald W. Porter of New Haven, Conn. She wore her mother's wedding gown, created about 25 years ago of alternating bands of cream satin and filmy lace extending into an old-fashioned full train. There was a deep lace yoke covering the upper part of the bodice, which was held by a whale-boned girdle, and puffed sleeves showered with lace ruffles to the elbow where they lengthened into light lace cuffs to the wrists. The wedding veil was worn by Mrs. Porter at her marriage and was of tulle edged with rose point lace draped simply about the face and held at the back with orange blossoms. She carried Easter lilies.

Carl Otto was best man, and Earl Merrill, Summit, N. J.; Wallace Kieselhorst, Chicago; Dr. Robert Crossen, Victor Weir, H. Bethune Hall and William Horace Moulton Jr. were ushers.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Stocking home. The receiving line stood before a great mirror bordered with smilax covering a wall in the reception room. Pale pink rambler roses were used in the decoration. The wedding cake in the shape of a marriage ring was arranged with malines and smilax in the dining room.

After a honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. Wilson will occupy their new home recently completed on the Mosley road, St. Louis County.

The out-of-town guests in addition to Dr. and Mrs. Porter included Miss Helen S. Porter and Mrs. William Todd, aunts of the bride, and Miss Elizabeth R. Hooker, also of New Haven.

The Stocking family came to St. Louis a few years ago from Upper Montclair, N. J. The bride is a graduate of Bradford Academy, Bradford, Mass., and studied music in New York. Mr. Wilson attended Tarkio College and was graduated from Amherst, class of 1928. He is a member of Psi Upsilon.

Italian Renaissance Depicted at Ball

THE Italian Renaissance, with its pageantry and pomp, was depicted at the annual ball given last night at the Artists' Guild by that organization. The ball was preceded by a colorful and realistic pageant written by Thomas Woods Stevens, in which four centuries of the Renaissance were represented by as many scenes. The pageant was acted by members of the Artists' Guild on a stage arranged in the large gallery and decorated in keeping with the Renaissance. Rare tapestries formed the background for parts of the pageant, while a score or more of pigeons were released during the scene picturing St. Mark's Square.

Costumes rich in color and fabric, fashioned after the mode of that age, were worn by the guests. Following the pageant there was dancing and a buffet supper. About 250 members of the Artists' Guild and guests attended.

ACTIVITIES OF BOY SCOUTS

PRESS CLUB PLANNED FOR BOY SCOUTS HERE

Purpose Would Be to Train Members in Newspaper and Other Writing.

Organization of a Boy Scout Press Club, for scouts interested in newspaper work, is planned for the St. Louis Boy Scout Council by Assistant Scoutmaster Gregg J. Puster of Troop 170. Puster, who lives at 8208 Gravois road, is one of the three Missouri members of the Boy Scout Press Association, a national organization of which the proposed club would be a chapter.

Five qualified members will be necessary before the club can obtain a charter from the association, qualification being limited to holders of the journalism merit badge and to editors of chartered Boy Scout publications. Lone Scout holders of the Gold Quill, which corresponds to the Boy Scout journalism merit badge, are also eligible, however. Application for the charter will be made by Scout Executive Earle W. Beckman when the membership requirements are fulfilled.

The club at first probably will be composed of journalism merit badge winners, Puster said, as there are no chartered scout publications in the St. Louis council. A number of troops issue troop newspapers, but in most cases these are mimeographed. Printed papers meeting certain standards of content, size and typography are the only ones qualified for a charter. He hopes, however, for the club to start a printed paper, if only for distribution to troops who have members in the club.

While definite plans for club activities are waiting on actual organization, the group will probably take up such things as training members in newspaper and other writing, the "covering" of council events, assistance of troop scribes and troop reporters, and assistance of scouts attempting to qualify for the journalism merit badge. Club members probably will assume charge of their troop papers.

The National Boy Scout Press Association sends a monthly bulletin, "The Scout Journalist," to each member.

Qualified scouts interested in helping to organize such a club may reach Puster either at his home or by calling HUdson 1510.

TRAINING COURSE OFFERED IN NATURE STUDY FOR LEADERS

Open to Scout Masters, Assistants and Troop Committeemen Beginning April 13.

A training course in nature study, for scout masters, assistant scout masters, and troop committeemen, will be opened by the St. Louis Boy Scout Council April 13, provided enough members register for the course before that date. Registrations are being received at local scout headquarters, 505 Chemical Building, but so far not enough have been received to justify organizing the class.

The other training courses conducted by the council this spring will be held as usual this week. The eleventh meeting of the elements of scoutmastership class will be held at Michael School tomorrow evening, when an announcement will be made regarding the time and place of the twelfth meeting afternoon hike. The course in sea scout leadership will hold its third meeting at Michael School Tuesday evening.

The eighth meeting of the first aid course will begin a series of instruction classes in teaching first aid. All leaders who have completed the work of the first seven meetings of the course are eligible for the new instruction.

Troop Notes

North District.

Troop 3 of Grace Church, will take part in the neckerchief event at the Scout circus April 15 and 16. Eight scouts and three officers were present at the meeting last week. Scout Joe Conrad conducted the opening ceremonies.

Scouts Harry McMasters, Eugene Ramsey and Harold Browning passed second-class tests at the regular meeting of Troop 19 at Blair School last week.

Scout Lawrence Miller of the Pioneer patrol won an individual achievement contest just completed by Troop 103 of Elmbank Church. Scout Fletcher of the Ravens was second.

Suburban District.

Troops Home Heights 1, Marvin Park 1, Mount Pleasant 1, Overland 1, Overland 2 and Thomas Station 1 will enter 12 first aid teams as a unit in the Scout Circus next week. The teams were trained by Charles Crowell of Marvin Park 1.

West District.

A joint meeting, with a Troop Court of Honor and an Investiture Ceremony, was held by Troop 2, Pilgrim Congregational Church, and Troop 60, Union Avenue Christian Church, at the headquarters of the latter troop Friday evening, March 25. Troop 2, under Scoutmaster E. B. Langenberg, took charge of the investiture of four scouts from both troops, while Troop 60, under Scoutmaster L. H. Renfrow, conducted the Troop Court of Honor.

Six new members, William Ferguson, James Hustin, Robert Inge, Richard Russell, Maxton Russell and Henry Voges, were invested as Tenderfoot scouts in an Investiture Ceremony held by Troop 26, Delmar Baptist Church, two weeks ago. Scout Charles Arnold was advanced to second class, Scouts Lee Beaver and Winston McAdoo were promoted to Star Scout, and Scouts Robert Gartside, Winston McAdoo and Vester Thompson received received merit badges at a Troop Court of Honor. An all-day hike to Arnold, Mo., was held last Saturday.

A new scout, Norman Niedt, has been admitted to Troop 135, University Methodist Church. The troop is working to pay off a loan made to buy a troop flag.

Now Wives Take It Easy On Washday
by C.A. Voight
THIS IS ONE OF MY NEW TABLE CLOTHS, BUT YOU'D NEVER KNOW IT. IT'S YELLOW ALREADY—FROM JUST A FEW WASHINGS
THAT'S TOO BAD, ELLEN
AND LOOK HERE, BETTY. IT'S ACTUALLY WORN THIN FROM CONSTANT SCRUBBING TO GET SPOTS OUT
YOU REALLY SHOULDN'T SCRUB, ELLEN. NOT WHEN THERE'S A SOAP LIKE RINSO TO SOAK OUT DIRT
BETTY WAS RIGHT! —WHAT THICK SUDS RINSO GIVES
—WHAT WHITENESS—JUST FROM SOAKING!
HELLO, BETTY. I'M GLAD YOU DROPPED IN. LOOK, HERE'S THAT SAME CLOTH—WHITE AS SNOW AND I DIDN'T SCRUB OR BOIL IT
IT'S WONDERFUL SOAP FOR DISHES TOO, ELLEN. I USE RINSO FOR ALL CLEANING
THOSE COLORED PIECES LOOK AS FRESH AND BRIGHT AS NEW
YES, AND RINSO GOES SO FAR IN THIS HARD WATER. I DID OVER A HUNDRED PIECES OF WASH WITH IT THIS MORNING—AND THE BOX ISN'T HALF EMPTY
Rinso The Granulated Soap
Clothes last longer this safe, easy way

TRY Rinso next washday and see for yourself why thrifty housewives won't use any other soap—for the wash, for the dishes, for all cleaning. See what thick, creamy suds Rinso gives. Watch the dirt soak out. Notice how bright your colored things come. Clothes last longer this safe, scrubless way.

Cup for cup, Rinso gives twice as much suds as light-weight, puffed-up soaps—even in hardest water. No softener needed. The makers of 40 leading washers recommend it. Get the BIG package.

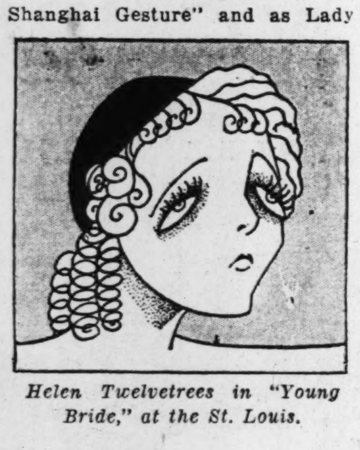
O'Neill's "Electra" Arrives

Six Performances of the Three-in-One Tragedy, Which Starts Tomorrow, to End the Season at the American—Shubert Has All-Negro Revue, "Rhapsody in Black," With Ethel Walters, Beginning Tonight.

AFTER the six performances of the New York Theater Guild's production of Eugene O'Neill's "Mourning Becomes Electra," which begins late tomorrow afternoon, the American Theater will close up for the summer. Out at the Shubert the all-Negro revue, "Rhapsody in Black" starts a week's engagement tonight to be followed next Sunday evening, by the musical "Crazy Quilt." These two shows will mark the end of the irregular regular Shubert season though the house is now scheduled to reopen on May 16 for a week of Katherine Cornell in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street."

The company which comes here to play for the Theater Guild in "Mourning Becomes Electra," is well known to St. Louis, since its members have appeared here many times. Of them, Judith Anderson, has appeared most recently in "Strange Interlude," another O'Neill play, and, it might be added, the play which is almost as long as "Mourning Becomes Electra," and which introduced the theatrical dinner intermission.

Florence Reed, who plays the role of Christine in Mr. O'Neill's play, is another well known star of the American stage. Her most recent roles have been in "The Shanghai Gesture" and as Lady Macbeth in the "Macbeth" production which Gordon Craig designed for George C. Tyler. In earlier years she played the leading roles of such plays as "The Yellow Ticket" and Katherine De Vaucelles in Justin McCarthy's "If I Were King."



Helen Twelvetrees in "Young Bride," at the St. Louis.

As O'Neill's father, James O'Neill, was a famous actor, so Florence Reed's father, Roland Reed, was a noted comedian at the beginning of this century.

Crane Wilbur, the Captain Brant of "Electra," is the well-known movie hero of some years back, the movie idol who threw the cinemas overboard for the stage and who began writing plays to provide himself with a vehicle. There was "The Monster," for instance, and there have been others since. Last season he was starred in Edgar Wallace's "On the Spot," and in his present engagement he also has to go on the spot, but in a somewhat less frenzied method than that set down by England's fastest writer.

Walter Abel, Thurston Hall and some 20 other actors make up the rest of the Guild's cast.

"MOURNING BECOMES ELECTRA," a tragedy of the days following the Civil War period, is really made up of three plays presented in one day and with the same set of characters interpreting the action throughout the trilogy. The first play, "Homecoming," will start promptly at 5:30 o'clock. There will be a dinner interlude from 7 to 8 p. m., after which the remaining plays, "The Hunted" and "The Haunted," will be given. There are six different settings for the 14 acts which make up the three plays. There will, of necessity, be no matinee performances.

When the idea for the trilogy was first conceived by O'Neill, he had planned to give the three plays on different nights. Thus, on Monday evenings, audiences would see "Homecoming," on Tuesday evening "The Hunted" and on Wednesday evening "The Haunted." When the plays were put in rehearsal, however, it was found that the playing time of each was considerably shorter than anticipated.

THAT the public was willing and glad to start its theater going at 5:30 in the afternoon had already been proved by the success of Mr. O'Neill's "Strange Interlude," so after several consultations, the plan was hit upon to give all three plays on one day.

The action of the trilogy, with the exception of an act of the second play, takes place in or immediately outside the Mannon residence, on the outskirts of one of the smaller New England seaport towns.

The three plays take place in either spring or summer of the years 1865-66.

"RHAPSODY IN BLACK," called a symphony of blue notes and black rhythm, will begin a week's engagement at the Shubert this evening headed by Ethel Waters. It has played in New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Pittsburg, Cleveland, Detroit and Chicago with considerable success.

"Rhapsody in Black" is a departure from musical revues in that it utilizes neither scenery, comedians nor chorus girls and yet it is reported to be replete with melody, humor and dancing such as no colored entertainment heretofore has boasted.

Included in the list of composers are George Gershwin, Mann Holiner, Alberta Nichols, Dorothy Fields, Jimmy McHugh, Ken Macomber and Rosamond Johnson. The piece contains three of the outstanding song numbers in the country, "What's Keeping My Prince Charming," "Till the Real Thing Comes Along" and "You Can't Stop Me From Loving You."

Rush of Film Folk Here for Cinema's Stage Show Bills

THE rush of movie actors to the stages of the cinema cathedrals keeps on and this week finds five stars, or former stars of the films, on the local platforms.

The St. Louis Theater has Sue Carol and Nick Stuart heading the vaudeville bill there in a sketch. Nick has about decided to quit the films for good but Sue, who has been out of pictures for more than a year, is going back to Hollywood after her present vaudeville tour ends.

At the Ambassador Lilyan Tashman, dashing blonde siren of the celluloids, is picking up some easy money between pictures and Moran and Mack, black face artists of the stage, screen and radio, are doing their stuff out at the Fox.

Chaplin in Japan But Ready for Home

After an absence from Hollywood of considerably more than a year, Charlie Chaplin is finally harboring thoughts of home. In a dispatch to his studio from Japan he has announced that he may be expected back toward the latter part of May.

The comedian left Hollywood immediately after the first showing of his picture, "City Lights," on Jan. 30, 1931. Arriving in New York about a week later, he also attended the opening here of "City Lights," and then began to make a habit of attending the picture at its openings in several capitals of the world. These included London, Paris, Berlin and Tokio, as well as other leading cities.

German Comedy Tonight.

"Die Gelbe Gefahr" (The Yellow Danger), a comedy by Curt Kraatz and Felix Okonkowsky, will be given tonight by the German Theater Stock Company in the German House Auditorium, 2345 Lafayette avenue.

Chatterton Starts Work.

Ruth Chatterton has started rehearsals in Hollywood of "Let Us Divorce," the stage play which she is directing and in which her husband Ralph Forbes stars. There is nothing personal in the title, both insist.

Y. M. H. A. Orchestra In a Concert Tonight

The Young Men's Hebrew Association Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Irl Rosenblum, will give a concert in the association's auditorium this evening beginning at 8:30 o'clock. Miss Deborah Carnovsky will be the soloist of the occasion, playing the Rachmaninoff C minor piano concerto.

The orchestra will also give numbers by Glinka, Rimsky-Korsakoff, Moussorgsky and Rachmaninoff. Thomas B. Sherman, music critic of the Post-Dispatch, will give a short talk during the intermission on Russian music.

Molino Will Stage "Lucia" at Odeon

L. M. Molino, local impresario, has arranged a production of "Lucia di Lammermoor" for the Odeon next Sunday night in which Enrico Clausi, an Italian tenor, will be the visiting guest artist, singing the role of Edgardo. Minerva Molino, wife of the maestro, will be in the title role, a part which she has sung many times.

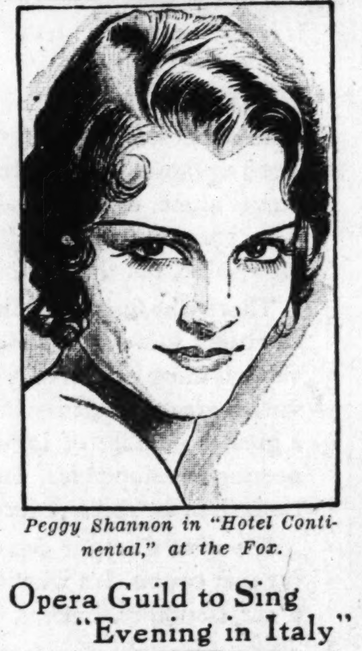
The other parts will be sung by St. Louis amateurs. Mr. Molino will conduct the large orchestra which has been engaged for the occasion.

Gary Cooper Coming Home.

Gary Cooper, who has been on a vacation which carried him into the interior of Africa, sailed for New York from London, England, on the Europa en route to Hollywood to resume work at the Paramount studios. He has been away from Hollywood nearly 10 months, touring Europe and then going to Africa on a big game hunt.

New German Talkie.

"Nie Wieder Liebe" (Never Again Love), a talking picture, will be shown in the German Film Theater, 2345 Lafayette avenue, beginning today. Lillian Harvey, considered one of the best film actresses of Germany, who has also played for American films in Hollywood, has the principal female role, supported by Harry Liedke and Felix Bressart.



Peggy Shannon in "Hotel Continental," at the Fox.

Opera Guild to Sing "Evening in Italy"

The St. Louis Opera Guild makes its first public presentation of opera Tuesday evening at the Wednesday Club auditorium when at "An Evening in Italy" it will offer Mascagni's "Cavalleria Rusticana" with a cast which includes Mrs. Hector M. E. Pasmezoglu as Santuzzi, Attilie Artz as Lola, Pauline Baker as Mama Lucia, Gilbert Borreson as Turiddu, and Thomas Climie as Alfio.

Following the tragic drama of "Cavalleria" the Guild will present an Italian street scene with Katherine Cowan and Warner Hornaday as incidental soloists of "Finiculi Finicula," Alma Wibbing and Harry Boyer as soloists in "Santa Lucia," and Grace Switzer as "Naughty Marietta."

Other Opera Guild members make up the chorus of 50.

Adrianne Allen, star of the current Broadway success, "Cynara," will make her screen debut with Sylvia Sidney and Frederic March in "Merrily We Go to Hell."

The Week's New Films

—:— By NIE —:—

TAKING Maurice Rostand's play, "The Man I Killed," as a starter, Ernst Lubitsch has evolved one of the finest motion pictures—it is called "Broken Lullaby" and is at the Ambassador this week—the screen has ever seen. A preachment, a sermon if you like, against war it points out, in a powerful and, at times, heart-rending way, the manner in which youths are sent to kill each other in the wars brought about by men who are too old to fight. The financial cost of these struggles is not gone into. The vast debts piled upon all peoples, debts which are now staggering the entire world, are not discussed. The cost in lives, always young lives, boys filled with the joy of living, is the theme back of a very beautiful romance and it will go a long way toward avoiding another great clash—until the minute orators begin to wave the flags and sound the call to battle again. There is very little of actual warfare in the picture, which begins with a scene in a trench where a young French soldier kills a German boy and is overcome by horror at what he has done. After the war, while the conquered and conquering nations are still hating each other, the French youth goes to Germany to find the parents of the boy he killed in battle and bare his heart to them. What happens when he reaches their lonely home, how he brings about a feeling of friendship and even of love and how he remains to marry the sweetheart of the dead soldier makes a magnificent story, which for the most part is somber and frequently tearful. Phillips Holmes gives an excellent performance in the role of the penitent French boy, and Nancy Carroll, in a line of work new to her, proves to be a fine actress as the girl he marries, but Lionel Barrymore is again an outstanding and commanding figure as the German father who learns, through his own suffering, that French fathers are suffering, too, and that war is a terrible and useless thing. Over these stars and over the other clever members of the cast, however, is the figure of Ernst Lubitsch, who directed the picture so perfectly that it should become a class book for the Hollywood film makers.

The Rev. Gable.

CLARK GABLE, the great lover of the screen at the moment, gets into ministerial garb in "Polly of the Circus" at Loew's. Maybe you remember the old stage play which, once upon a time, was also a silent movie. Polly is a trapeze performer who breaks a leg or something when the show is playing in a small town. She is carried into a minister's home and never really leaves it again, although by marrying the Reverend Mr. Gable she causes him to lose his church and his clerical collar for a while. Marion Davies is the Polly of the piece and, like Nancy Carroll in "Broken Lullaby," she steps out of her usual type of parts to play, very well indeed, a straight dramatic role.

Good Old Double Cross.

EXCEPT for the fact that the action all takes place in a big inn there is no resemblance between 'Hotel Continental," which is at the Fox now, and "Grand Hotel," the play lately seen here. But, although the stories are entirely different, the present picture is an interesting tale of crooks who double cross each other in a race to get possession of a lot of stolen money hidden in a room at the Continental before the thief went to jail. It has too, unlike Grand Hotel, a happy ending with Theodore von Eltz, a crook, and Peggy Shannon, a crookess, coming to a clinch at the finish and, apparently, getting ready to settle down and live happily and straight on nothing a year.

Good Time Charlie.

THERE is nothing like the blessed event to make a young husband forget to spend his time trying to put the eight ball in the side pocket down at Mike's place as you can very well find out in "Young Bride" at the St. Louis. Helen Twelvetrees, in the story, is a nice little gal who is dumber than she looks and who marries Eric Linden a Good-Time-Charlie who has a lot of pool playing and dancing to do. For some strange reason this interferes with his making a living. Even then everything might have been O. K. because Helen was willing to stick to her job, but, as sometimes happens with young brides even today, a third member of the family gives notice of arrival. This sobers Eric up so that he promises to go to work and buy baby carriages and things like that. Charming little Sue Carol, the movie star, and her husband, Nick Stuart, head the St. Louis' vaudeville bill in a nice sketch which makes one wonder why this youthful pair ever left the screen flat on its back.

Clothes Makes the Woman.

"BEAUTY and the Boss," at the Missouri is one of those old line comedies which show how an efficient and homely stenographer can change here hat and her gown and immediately become a raving beauty. Her boss—this time he is a Baron with a lot of business interests and as many women—is simply overcome by the change and lifts her from the typewriter to his baronial castle to become a real lady. Marian Marsh is the girl and the story is silly but amusing. "Sherlock Holmes" Fatal Hour," an English made film, is the Missouri's No. 2 offering. It's not so hot.

Marguerite Namara in "Carmen," at the New World Theater.

"Carmen" in Films At World Theater

Bizet's grand opera, "Carmen," is the second presentation of the new World Theater, which opened last week for the exclusive presentation of foreign-made talking pictures.

"Carmen," which opened at the World yesterday afternoon, was produced in Spain by a British film company and contains all of the original music of the opera.

The title role is played by Marguerite Namara, an English grand opera singer who has appeared in this country. She is supported by Tom Burke as Jose and Lance Fairfax as the toreador. "Carmen" will play a one week engagement at the World with a matinee today at 2:30.

Movie Customers Fade Away

Fox Theater Chain Alone Reports a Loss of Ten Million Dollars in Admission Receipts and Indications Are That the Cinema Palaces Saw a Hundred Million Former Patrons Drop Out of Sight During the Year.

THE legitimate stage, which has been blaming the talkies for the drama's decline, will be interested in the report for the past year issued by the Fox Film Corporation yesterday. The Fox theaters —just one chain in the five major collections of film houses which stretch across the country—reported a falling off in attendance receipts of $10,000,000. Placing the average cost of a ticket fairly high at 35 cents that would mean that nearly thirty millions of people who paid to go into Fox houses the year before stayed away last season. As remarked before the Fox is just one chain of houses. How the Paramount-Publix, Loew, Warner and RKO circuits fared has not been announced, but it is safe to say that the customers kept out of those theaters in droves also and that at least a hundred million people have cut down on their cinema going.

The local first-run houses have felt the slump badly. People who go to the movie cathedrals during the peak hours gather the impression that business is going on as usual, but the slack period, during the greater part of the day and evening gives the magnates plenty to think about.

The attempt to bolster up the attendance with the big names on the stage show end of the bills has not dragged in the customers much faster and while the big houses get slightly larger crowds when the stars are advertised for personal appearances those crowds are taken from the neighborhood theaters—which are owned by the same companies.

Just how fast the public can forget amusements and its favorite amusers is illustrated by a single picture. Twelve years ago the production of "The Miracle Man" was made as a silent. Today, as a talkie, it is being made all over again, yet after those dozen years which have passed between filmings only half the leading players in the first production are known to today's fans and although six distinct characterizations are remembered by all who saw the silent picture, only three players in the cast are generally recalled today, even in Hollywood.

IT is easy to remember that Betty Compson, Thomas Meighan and Lon Chaney worked in the film, for they soon rose to stardom as the result of their marvelous portrayals. Today, those parts go to Silvia Sidney as the girl crook, Chester Morris as the leader of the group and John Wray as the Frog, a fake cripple. In the earlier picture Frankie Lee appeared as the crippled boy; Joseph Dowling as the patriarch and Mone Dumont as the pickpocket, parts which now are being played respectively by Robert Coogan, Tyrone Power and Ned Sparks.

Of the original sextette, Miss Compson and Meighan are still film favorites; Chaney and Dowling are dead; Dumont plays character roles under the name of John Dumont and Frankie Lee, grown up, no longer acts.

George Loane Tucker, director of the silent film, is dead. Norman McLeod will direct the talking version.

As a matter of fact no Hollywood Rip Van Winkle needs to sleep for 20 years to get out of touch with events and personalities in pictures. Two or three years suffice to change the whole complexion of the film capital, either to occasional visitor or long-time resident.

NOT much over three years ago the writer visited the Warner Bros.-First National studios for the first time. Talking pictures were just then making the industry dizzy. At Warner Bros., Al Jolson was completing "The Singing Fool." Dolores Costello, as yet unmarried to John Barrymore, was the queen of the lot, but Texas Guinan, Sophie Tucker, Fannie Brice and Pauline Frederick were among the newcomers disputing her place.

Monte Blue was reigning favorite, both at the studio and at the box office. Rin-Tin-Tin was a star in his own right. Richard Bennett had appeared for one picture and had disappeared again. But his two daughters, since to make screen history, were not to be found in Hollywood.

At the big First National Plant, a little more than three years ago, the late Milton Sills was completing a picture with Maria Corda and his first picture with talking sequences in it, "The Barker," was about ready for release. In that film was a young boy named Douglas Fairbanks Jr., who gave perhaps his first real promise in that role.

COLLEEN MOORE and Corinne Griffith were the really important people on the lot. They occupied the studio's two bungalows and Colleen drove about the lot in a tiny four-wheeled "cycle car" which was forever getting stalled in front of charging trucks and scaring the production department in delirium. The Corinne Griffith vogue was at its height. Her fan mail was running close to the record-breaking amounts received by Colleen.

Richard Barthelmess was there, too, and still is, the veteran of the lot, and Jack Mulhall was one of the most popular actors at the studio. A young contract player was being noticed for the first time. She was Gretchen Young, but the studio had only recently decided to call her Loretta. She was 15, and about to receive an important role in a picture titled "The Squall."

New Plymouth's Wheelbase and Power Increased

New Custom Body Lines—Automatic Clutch, Improved Roadability and Performance.

A new line of Plymouth cars, with 112-inch wheelbase, 65 h. p. engine, improved body lines, and prices ranging from $495 to $785 at factory, is being displayed today in St. Louis and vicinity by the Mound City Motor Co., the Milstrand Motor Co. and L. M. Stewart, Inc., distributers, and their dealers. Features of the Plymouth since it was first introduced are retained, among them floating power engine mountings, free wheeling, easy-shift silent second transmission, hydraulic brakes and safety steel body. New features are a full automatic clutch, rigid-X double-drop frame and an improved performance.

The new Plymouth comes in nine body styles — business roadster, $495; business coupe, $565; sport roadster, $595; sport phaeton, $595; coupe with rumble seat, $610; four-door three-window sedan, $635; convertible coupe, $645; seven-passenger sedan, $725; convertible sedan with six wire wheels and trunk as standard equipment, $785.

Changed Front End.

The radiator is new—of a modern motif, and the front fenders are one-piece. The latter are supported at the front by a bracket to which the headlamp bracket is attached, and a second bracket at the mid-fender section makes for rigidity and strength. Fenders as well as all sheet metal parts and wire wheels are bonderized to prevent rusting.

The long, 44-inch hood sweeps gracefully back from radiator to windshield without a break, a 1932 custom car feature. The hood has two cowl ventilators controlled from the driver's seat. A concealed single-handle lock anchors the hood.

The front body contour is streamlined to carry out the sweep of the hood. The door line, hood line and hood louvre line are in harmony with the body contour.

Five wire wheels are standard, with six wire or demountable wood wheels optional at extra cost, while 17-inch wire or demountable wood wheels are available at slight extra cost.

Safety Steel Bodies.

Differing from the previous bodies only in styling, and with considerable more roominess, the same type of strong, rigid safety-steel body is used. Doors are unusually wide. Belt molding is higher. All bodies are sound-proofed and weather-proofed.

The upholstery is in appropriate shades of broadcloth with seat cushions and seat backs trimmed in three-inch pleats. Each closed car has braided robe and assist cords, ash receivers, foot and arm rests, rear window shade and modern motif chromium hardware.

Duplicate safety plate glass is furnished in coupes at $9.50 and in sendans at $17.50 extra.

Floating Power.

Floating power, the new type engine mounting which prevents power shock, continues unchanged in general design or location just as introduced on the Plymouth car last year. For greater rigidity, the triangular bracket supporting the front rubber mounting has been omitted and the front cross member shaped to form an integral support. The rear mounting has been increased in width.

The 65 h. p. engine of the new Plymouth has a bore of 3⅝ inches and a stroke of 4¾ inches. The power output has been accomplished without increasing the bore or stroke, but by a more rapid expulsion of exhaust gasses. The exhaust manifold has been opened up and the exhaust pipe enlarged. Back pressure has been reduced by a new muffler design. Reduced back pressure lengthens valve life and protects valve seats.

Other Features.

An oil filter has been added. The carburetor is new in design. An accelerating pump, integral with the carburetor, enriches the mixture when the accelerator is suddenly depressed.

The throttle is opened as the choke button in the instrument panel is pulled out. Starting is made easier also by a secondary choke valve and immediate stalling of the engine, because of an extremely rich mixture, is avoided.

Intake roar at the carburetor air inlet is muffled by a new silencer on which an air cleaner is mounted.

Automatic Clutch.

A full automatic clutch is optional on the new Plymouth at $8 extra. When in operation, it is not necessary to depress the clutch pedal when shifting gears, whether the car is standing still or in motion. Automatic release of the clutch disconnects the engine from the transmission. The free-wheeling unit disconnects the rear wheels from the transmission. Therefore, since no power is applied to the transmission from engine or car, selection of gears may be made noiselessly at any speed.

Shifting into reverse, free wheeling ceases until the gear shift lever is returned to neutral or forward speed.

A convenient control button on the instrument board when pulled out, locks out free wheeling.

The automatic clutch mechanism consists of a control valve assembly mounted on the front end of the intake manifold and a control cylinder with piston mounted at the right rear lower side of the cylinder block. When the throttle is closed and the engine is operating at idling speed equivalent to about six miles per hour, a high vacuum is created in the intake manifold. The moment the throttle is opened the high vacuum is dissipated by the inrush of air through the carburetor.

At idling speeds, the manifold vacuum by means of the control valve, pulls the piston in the control cylinder forward. Since the piston control rod is attached to the clutch release shaft, its forward motion releases the clutch in the same manner as depressing the clutch pedal. When the throttle is opened by depressing the accelerator pedal, the high vacuum in the manifold is released. The amount of pull therefore on the control piston and rod is less than the pressure of the clutch springs. As the control cylinder piston moves back to its original position, the clutch begins to engage. However, the control piston movement toward the rear is retarded by the air cushion or compression it builds up. This pressure is relieved as the control valve allows the clutch to engage smoothly.

Plymouth's easy-shift transmission now features silent second gear, of the helical type.

The double-drop, rigid frame was formerly found only on cars selling in a much higher price range.

Oil Refiner Insures User of Its Product Under Unique Plan

According to statistics recently released by the Chilton Class Journal Co. of Philadelphia, based on a national survey, motorists pay dearly for indifference to the proper lubrication of their automobiles. These survey figures divulge that the annual toll for the replacement and repairing of burned-out bearings due to faulty or insufficient lubrication runs into millions of dollars.

Undoubtedly this expense may be due to several causes other than carelessness. Yet one nationally known oil refiner in Pennsylvania, the Quaker State Co., now offers to protect its customers against loss due to burned-out bearings if they will follow a simple lubrication plan.

This idea, although simple, is unique. It provides that the oil refiner will pay the customary cost of replacing or repairing burned-out and inoperative bearings resulting from faulty or insufficient lubrication. This oil company issues guarantees to that effect to all motorists who agree to use its products exclusively, and have their cars lubricated according to a chart approved by the car maker and prepared by the Chek-Chart Corporation of Chicago.

These guarantees have been insured by the refiner with the Travelers Indemnity Co. of Hartford, Conn.

This is the first time that an oil refiner has accepted full responsibility for the performance of his oils and greases, and has issued a guarantee agreeing to pay the customary cost of replacing or repairing bearings burned out due to faulty or insufficient lubrication, according to Sam Rotenberg, president of Consolidated Petroleum Products, Inc., 4375 Duncan avenue.

Charging Battery Is Said Not to Put Electricity Into It

Members who attended the monthly meeting of the Service Managers' Bureau of the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association Friday night were told by one of the speakers that the charging of a storage battery does not put electricity into it.

The speaker was G. U. Pickering, vice president of the Monark Battery Co., who said that an automobile storage battery was not a storage battery, but really an electric generator and that when it was put on a charging line, the charge merely drove the acid moisture out of the plates and separators so as to permit them to generate electricity which they would not do if scaked with the battery acid.

He also said more batteries were ruined by being overcharged than undercharged. He suggested careful setting of car generators for this reason. He said the reason batteries frequently went dead in the winter was not always due to cold weather, but rather to the fact that they had been overused and overcharged during the summer. Storage batteries, he said, were now giving 10 times the service that they did some years back, due to the addition to cars of spotlights, fender lights, driving lights, cigar lighters, etc.

H. B. Levy of the Aeolian Co. of Missouri introduced H. V. Summerville, engineer for RCA-Victor Radio, who spoke at length, using a set for demonstration, on "The Installation and Proper Upkeep of Radios in Automobiles."

H. L. Strasburger of the Ray Day Piston Corporation showed a talking moving picture of the development of pistons from the raw material to their installation in the automobile. The picture showed clearly the reasons for piston slaps and oil leaks.

The speakers were introduced by Dolph Moore, chairman of the bureau, and Robert E. Lee, its managing director.

Chevrolet Dealers Urge Importance Of Car Lubrication

The Chervolet dealers of St. Louis point out that 80 per cent of all mechanical repairs are due to improper lubrication.

Thirty-three vital points in a Chevrolet car require regular lubrication. Many owners, attempting to lubricate their cars, overlook many of these points. The Chevrolet dealers' mechanics are factory trained and since they specialize in lubricating Chevrolets, know all of these 33 vital points and the quantity and quality of lubricants to use.

As an inducement to owners to keep their cars in the best possible operating condition, the Chevrolet dealers of St. Louis will offer special complete chassis lubrication to all Chevrolet owners during the week of April 4.

The Chevrolet dealers point out the advisability of attending to this vital matter immediately to get the most efficient car operation and greatest enjoyment out of the spring motoring season.

Road Work for Unemployed.

Pennsylvania leads all states in the Union in providing employment on road work. There are 31,279 men engaged in building highways and maintenance work. Michigan, the nearest competitor, has 16,363 men at work on roads.

Worm Drive Axles Driven 700,000 Miles In Excellent Condition

According to Nash engineers, the underslung worm drive axle has almost unlimited wearing qualities. Its length of service is set at probably more than a half million miles and perhaps a million miles.

It has been developed to a high point of efficiency over a long period of years, particularly on fast and heavy highway carriers. The Lanchester, the English built car known as one of the most expensive automobiles, has used worm drive for 19 years. Close examination of axles of this type which have served for as much as 700,000 miles shows them to be in excellent condition.

Silence is assured in the Nash axle because the steel worm gear is always in contact with the bronze worm wheel and constantly pushes a true helix in the bronze because of its sliding, quiet action. This action does not cause any pounding blows, but slides smoothly and silently at all times.

The underslung features of the new worm enables Nash engineers to bring the frame of the cars approximately three inches closer to the ground without sacrifice of head room or road clearance.

Third of Live Stocks Hauled to Markets In Trucks, Says Tilt

Despite depressed business conditions in 1931, motor trucks hauled 25 per cent more of the nation's livestock than in the previous year ,and accounted for one-third of the total receipts at the 17 principal markets. From 2,765,-512 head of cattle, calves, hogs and sheep in 1920, the number has risen steadily each year until in 1931 it reached a total of 21,162,430 head.

In citing the official figures, C. A. Tilt, president of the Diamond T Motor Car Co., states that the livestock were transported in 1,750,000 truck loads whose average haul was 65 miles, with 22,000,000 gallons of gasoline consumed on a round trip basis.

'Lubricating' Tires With Soapstone on Interiors Is Advised

One will get more mileage out of his tires if he will lubricate them occasionally with soapstone, according to F. L. Krause, manager of the tire service department of the U. S. Tire Co.

"A tire flexes or bends millions of times in a few thousand miles, and in so doing sets up a chafing action between casing and tube," explains Krause. "Unless a proper lubricating medium is used, excessive friction and heat will be generated. These are the two greatest enemies of tires.

"When a tire leaves the factory its inside is painted with a soapstone solution, but with use the coating wears off and should be renewed. Need for renewal can be determined by inspecting the inside of the tire. If the surface shows a chafed or scorched appearance, it is badly in need of soapstoning. In any event, it is always well to dust in a little.

"The soapstone can be applied by using a shaker-top can or by putting it in a cloth bag tied at the top and shaking all around the inside of the tire. Do not make the mistake of putting too much in, as it will accumulate and harden in one spot, which eventually will chafe through the tube."

How do you Weigh Value?

It is perfectly easy to size up relative automobile values.

An automobile is certainly not to be regarded as so much steel and other materials selling at so much a pound. It isn't wheelbase alone, or horsepower alone, or weight alone, or price alone—it isn't any one thing alone that determines a car's value, but the combination of everything.

That's why Chrysler value scales up bigger than any other value to be compared with it. Chrysler value is more extensive. Covers more things. Involves greater initiative in engineering. Includes a greater number of important and basic engineering developments. Entails greater results in car action, car ability, car comfort, car endurance.

It's what Chrysler does to the internals of a car that counts. It's what Chrysler does to make a car smoother, livelier, quieter and easier to drive. It's what Chrysler does to make a car stronger and safer and longer-lived.

Outstanding engineering developments such as Floating Power engine mountings—that give Chrysler cars the most fascinating performance there is. Great conveniences like an Automatic Clutch, a Silent Gear Selector and Free Wheeling—that make Chryslers effortless to drive.

Squeak-proot springs—distortion-proof frames—clash-proof gear shifting—shock-proof steering—self-equalizing hydraulic brakes—Centrifuse brake drums, providing five times the wear of ordinary brakes—balanced wheels—value features that build up Chrysler value to where it simply cannot be matched in today's market.

The best demonstration of Chrysler value is a demonstration of the car itself. Drive one and see.

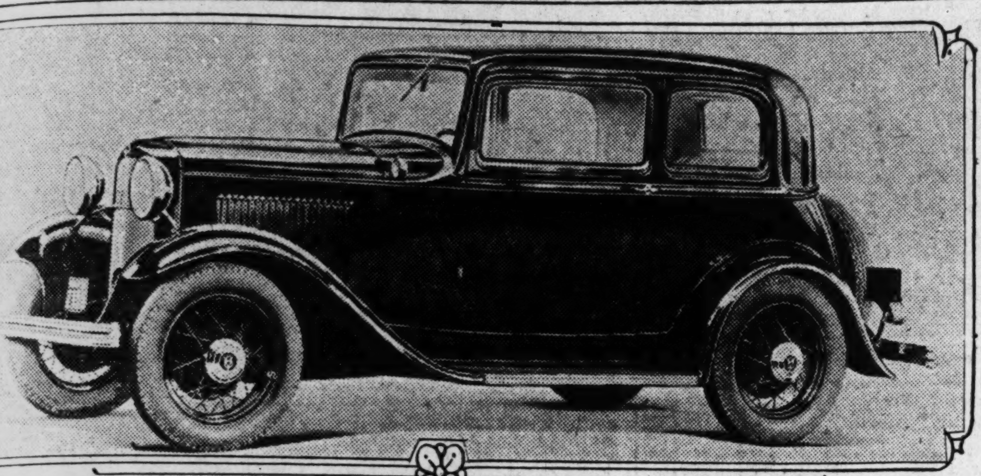
How the New Ford Eight Looks



Victoria model of the new Ford Eight, which has an entirely new chassis, new body lines and a "V" eight engine designed for 75 miles per hour.

New Ford Car Is Designed and Built as an 'Eight'

To Do 75 in High and Up to 60 in Silent Second—4-Cylinder Engine Optional.

The new Ford is an eight-cylinder car. Its chassis is wholly new, designed for an engine of eight cylinders, developing 65 horsepower. A four-cylinder engine of 50 horsepower is optional. But production schedules and selling campaign are predicated on an eight-cylinder car of 75 miles per hour top speed and 50 to 60 miles per hour in silent second gear, priced at $460 to $650 at the factory. Models with the four-cylinder engine will be $50 less.

The eight-cylinder engine is of the "V" type used in the Ford-built Lincoln car. Its bore is 3 1-16 inches, its stroke is 3¾ inches, giving the desirable "square" ratio.

Its carburetor is of the downdraft type, for greater efficiency, with an air intake silencer. Spark control is automatic. The 14-gallon gasoline tank is in the rear, and a fuel pump supplies "gas" to the carburetor.

Pressure engine lubrication is used, the oil pump being so located that as long as there is any oil in the crankcase it is delivered to the bearings.

The timing gear is so designed that it cannot get out of order and cannot be upset.

Cooling is by a combination of water pump and thermo siphon action, to give positive cooling at all times but not too much in starting.

The engine is mounted at three points in rubber, so as to minimize vibration, especially in decelerating. Chassis and running gear also are cushioned with rubber insulators in the spring shackles and shock absorber links.

Fast, Silent in Second.

The transmission is of the synchronized, easy-shift kind with silent second gear. It is stated that gears in this new Ford eight can be shifted from high to second and from second to high at high speed, and that the car will do up to 60 miles per hour in second gear.

The chassis frame is drop center, sturdy and solidly braced. In addition to the regular frame braces, a torque tube inclosing the propeller shaft and a heavy triangular brace make for rigidity in the rear. There is also a strong triangular brace at the front.

Center of gravity is low. The rear spring is set back from the axle by perches and is bowed out, so that it completely clears the differential housing and permits the body to be dropped two inches lower than otherwise would be possible, yet to have nine-inch road clearance.

Shock absorbers, front and rear, are hydraulic and of the automatic, self-adjusting type which fix their own degree of tension to suit weather and road conditions. So the Ford eight has ride control without a lever on dash or steering column.

Stream-Lined Bodies.

Wholly new in appearance also is the Ford eight. It has a "V" radiator with gray finish, barred grille. Air-flow body lines are carried on from the radiator by a long hood with rustless steel center strip, slanting safety glass windshield and gracefully rounded roof and rear. Convex headlamps, full crowned fenders and low running board are all in harmony with the body styling.

Wheelbase is longer than in the Model A Ford. Body interiors are roomy and finely furnished. Seats are of a new type, designed for comfort, and the driver seat in every closed model is adjustable. All bodies are insulated from the frames by rubber pads to obviate transmission of engine and running gear noises.

The wheels have distinctive appearing, sturdy steel spokes, electrically welded, with large hub caps. Tires are larger. Bumpers are of the single bar type and chromium plated.

There is a large cowl ventilator. Inside sun visors, which fold out of the way when not in use, are standard for all closed cars. The oval instrument board is in engine-turned finish and has a rustless steel mounting strip.

Choice of mohair, broadcloth or bedford cord upholstery is offered for all closed models.

There are 14 modern, streamlined body types in the Ford Eight line—roadster, phaeton, coupe, sport coupe, Tudor sedan, Fordor sedan, de luxe roadster, de luxe phaeton, de luxe Tudo sedan, de luxe Fodo sedan, de luxe coupe, cabriolet victoria and convertible sedan.

Ford Eight Engine Details.

The new Ford V-8 engine is remarkably free from vibration. Frequent and overlapping impulses deliver the power in a smooth constant flow. The engine is of the 90-degree V-type, developing 65 brake horsepower at 3400 r. p. m. The 65-pound crankshaft is of the 90-degree type, with its four cranks at right angles to each other.

The crankshaft is statically and dynamically balanced and its throws counterbalanced. The crankshaft, connecting rods and pistons also are in balance so that the engine operates with remarkable smoothness at all engine speeds. Pistons are of aluminum alloy and have three rings, the lower acting as an oil-control ring.

Cylinder blocks and crankcase are cast in one unit, giving exceedingly rigid engine construction. New type, one-piece valves, which eliminate tappets, operate directly from the camshaft without pushrods.

Connecting rods from opposite pistons are placed side by side on each 90-degree crankshaft throw. These are mounted on new floating steel bushings, babbitted inside and out which serve to give the benefit of the full crankpin bearing area to each connecting rod, thus affording longer wear.

A cast aluminum cover over the intake manifold forms the top of the engine, giving it an unusually finished appearance. The downdraft carburetor and the fuel pump are mounted on this cover.

The gas is preheated in the intake manifold by a hot spot created by hot exhaust gases surging back and forth through a small passage in the manifold cover plate. Exhaust ports are on the outside of the engine blocks, the left exhaust pipe being carried around the front of the engine.

The distributor operates directly from the front end of the camshaft, eliminating the use of interposed gears. Spark control is automatic. Crankshaft and crank pin bearings are lubricated by pressure as are the main bearings of the camshaft. Pistons and valves are oiled by spray and splash.

Riding Comfort Features.

A fan of airplane propeller type and two centrifugal water pumps together with the large surface of the radiator insure ample cooling under all driving conditions.

The rugged new double-drop frame is formed to the shape of the body and, with the new low rear spring, provides a low center of gravity, with consequent increase in roadability.

The riding comfort of the cars is due to many factors, but particularly to the new flexible transverse cantilever springs, larger tires, rubber insulation and the newly designed shock absorbers.

Two new features have been incorporated in the Houdaille hydraulic double-acting shock absorbers. One is a thermostat control which compensates for varying temperature conditions, and the other, a special valve which automatically lessens the effect of sudden road shocks.

The Ford rear spring is of new design, being flatter and lower. It is mounted on perches at the rear of the axle housing and bowed out so as to clear the differential housing.

The new brakes have a braking surface of 186 square inches.

Wheels are 18 inches in diameter. The large hubs enclose the bolts which attach the wheel to the drum. There are 32 steel spokes, sharply pitched and electrically welded to the drop-center rim and hub shell, forming an unusually strong unit.

Tires are 18x5.25 inches. Each is balanced to prevent "tramping" or vibration at high speed.

The drive is of the familiar Ford torque tube type, the drive shaft being of tubular construction.

The new Ford Eight chassis and a number of body types were shown to newspaper men and dealers and their salesmen Tuesday night. A feature was a moving picture of activities at the Ford factory. Sections of the film showing the new Ford Eight being driven at high speed over concrete and dirt tracks, and other deeply rutted roads and fields that looked as if they had been shelled by heavy artillery, drew cheers from the gathering of dealers and salesmen.

First public showing of the new Ford was in dealers' display rooms Thursday, when the prices were announced.

On Thursday, the first day the new Ford eight was shown at the Ford branch, Sarah street and Forest Park boulevard, 17,382 visited the branch to inspect the new models and the chassis.

Record Spoiled at Last.

A perfect driving record of 380,000 miles on three continents during the past 19 years dissolved in Flushing, N. Y., recently when a fine of $25 was imposed on Mrs. Julia Reed for having been caught speeding at a rate of 45 miles an hour. She has driven all over North and South America and all over Europe, and says this was the first violation she had ever been charged with.

Display of New Ford Transferred Today to Dealers in St. Louis

More Than 17,000 Persons a Day Have Been Seeing the Eight at Factory Branch.

The showing of the new Ford Eight will be transferred today to the dealers' showrooms in Metropolitan St. Louis from the factory branch at Sarah and Forest Park boulevard.

All the dealers will have the Ford Eight on display today and also the new Ford trucks. There will be special decorations and open house celebrations by the dealers.

The display of the new "V" Eight at the factory branch has been crowded for three days. On Thursday, the day the public got its first glimpse of the car, a total of 17,382 person saw it at the factory branch. Friday, the crowds numbered more than 17,000. Yesterday morning and afternoon, the attendance was still larger with indications of a jammed display for last night.

Triple Display Is Made Today by Milstrand Motor Co.

In addition to exhibiting a complete line of the new Plymouth cars today, the Milstrand Motor Co., distributer of Dodge and Plymouth cars, is showing a Dodge stripped chassis. This chassis is mounted at front and rear ends on up-rights and makes a complete revolution, electrically controlled. It can be stopped in any position for inspection.

Starting this afternoon at 2 o'clock, the Milstrand Motor Co. will also show a three-reel talking picture, "Behind the Scenes," which depicts the building of the new Plymouth fram drafting board to road test. This film will be shown every hour on the hour throughout today until 10 p. m. There is no admission charge.

Missouri Truckmen To Have Magazine

The Missouri Truckmen's Association, an organization of truck owners throughout the State, announces the Missouri Motor Truck Journal, which will be the official magazine for its members.

Byron E. Finley, president of the association, says that, due to the rapidly growing membership of the organization, it needs a publication of this kind to supply members with information regarding the various reforms, problems and progress and to create good will towards the motor transportation industry.

The first issue will be off the press about the first of April.

More Dodge Cars Delivered in 1931 Than in All of 1930

The Dodge dealer organization was one of four in the industry that delivered more passenger cars in 1931 than 1930, according to year-end figures just compiled by Dodge Brothers Corporation.

In addition to the new Dodge six and eight, these figures included deliveries of the new Plymouth, with floating power engine mountings, which is distributed by Dodge dealers.

General Motors Exhibit Will Be Open All Week In St. Louis Arena

Total of 54 Models of Cars Built by Divisions of the Great Corporation on Display — Numerous Other Products of General Motors Shown.

In St. Louis and in 54 other key cities throughout the United States, General Motors yesterday launched one of the most extensive merchandising programs of modern times.

All the forces of General Motors, representing more than 40 per cent of the motor vehicle production, have been marshalled in these great displays, the St. Louis one of which was opened by Mayor Victor J. Miller at 12:30 noon yesterday.

The exhibit will be open from 11 a. m. to 11 p. m. each day through Saturday, April 9. There is no charge for admission.

Parades yesterday, tomorrow, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday through the downtown are and out to The Arena will be features of the exhibit. In these parades some 45 cars and commercial vehicles will be in line, giving a graphic illustration of the coverage by General Motors in the automotive field.

At the opening each day, bombs will be exploded from the roof of The Arena, officially opening the exhibit, while in the evening red flares will be burned from the roof.

A Brilliant Scene.

As visitors entered The Arena they found it had been transformed by rich velvet hangings and cloth of gold, tall columns and floral urns into a place of striking beauty—a fit setting for the latest automotive products of 1932.

In all there are 54 cars on display, representing a total retail valuation of $75,000.

The least expensive cars displayed, of course, are the new Chevrolet sixes. Gradually ascending the price scale are the Pontiac sixes, Pontiac V-eights, Oldsmobile sixes and straight eights, Buick straight eights, La Salle and Cadillac V-eights, Cadillac V-twelves and finally the Cadillac V-sixteens.

Several General Motors and Chevrolet trucks are included in a commercial car exhibit which is a feature of the show. These vehicles are trucks which have been sold to St. Louis concerns and will soon be seen on the streets of the city in actual work.

But the exhibit is far from being exclusively automotive. Other General Motors products also are shown: Frigidaire domestic and commercial refrigeration units; the wide variety of parts and accessories built by AC, such as spark plugs, oil filters, reflex lamps and Remo chemical injectors; Delco electric fans, Delco vacuum cleaners and the water systems and electric lighting plants designed to equip the modern farm home.

Other Features.

A feature of the exhibit is the Fisher display of its Guild work, in which 145,000 boys participated last year throughout the United States. This work involves the competitive building of miniature coaches for awards, which this year total $75,000, including four university scholarships.

Symbolizing the fundamental purpose of the exhibit are two gigantic hands upraised on both sides of the exhibit entrance. Fourteen feet in height, they bear the exhibit slogan—"Work for Many Hands." On each hand appears a pictorial story of General Motors and its importance as a user of labor and raw materials to every state in the Union. At the far end of the hall looms the huge figure of a workman holding aloft a motor car.

Only after inspecting the immense local exhibit and then multiplying this activity by 55 can a visitor fully appreciate the extent to which General Motors has gone in its national activity.

New Federal Tax Bill.

Motorists in the United States will pay approximately $94,000,000 annually to the Federal Government under the terms of the new Federal tax bill. The 2½ per cent sales tax, which applies to gasoline, will net the Federal Government approximately $26,000,000. Lubricating oils, carrying a 4-cent-per-gallon tax, will yield another $25,000,000, a total of $51,000,000. This means an average tax of about $2 per annum on 26,000,000 motorists of the country. Purchasers of new cars, trucks, tires, and accessories, computed on a 1931 sales basis, will pay an additional $43,000,000.

Fred J. Wagner, veteran auto race starter, who started his first race in 1894, is believed to be the oldest in point of service in America. He is 74.

Depicts Part Auto Industry Has in U. S. Economic Structure

R. D. Williams Addresses Meeting of Advertising Club of St. Louis.

"The automobile industry was the first industry to be hit by the slump of 1920, but it is also first to come out of that depression," said Ross D. Williams, zon manager of the Oakland Motor Car Co., who was the principal speaker at the weekly meeting of the Advertising Club of St. Louis, at the Hotel Statler Tuesday noon.

"The many thousands of dollars spent on recent automobile shows prove the confidence of automobile manufacturers in the stability of this country."

Williams stressed the basic importance of the automobile industry in the economic structure of this country, pointing out that it uses 53 per cent of all malleable iron produced in the United States, 15.5 per cent of all steel, 68.7 per cent of all plate glass, 18 per cent of all hardwood lumber, 14.8 per cent of all copper 9.3 per cent of all cotton, 82.6 per cent of all rubber, 26 per cent of all lead, 30 per cent of all nickel, 51.4 per cent of all upholstery leather and 85 per cent of all gasoline, as well as 35,000,000 yards of upholstery cloth. The automobile industry in 1930 paid the railroads $500,000,000 for transporting 3,300,000 carloads of freight.

Williams added that General Motors alone used 1,200,000 carloads of freight during that period.

"The General Motors exhibit which is to be held at The Arena, April 2 to 9 inclusive, is a contribution of General Motors to stimulate the automobile industry which in turn should stimulate business generally, not only through immediate orders for automobiles with consequent purchase of raw materials by manufacturer, but also for the psychological effect upon the public," he said.

"If we can start the automotive business on a normal basis, with its demands for so many millions of tons of various materials, we hope to give work to many hands. With 10 per cent of the population dependent on the automobile industry for livelihood, it seems but natural that this industry should, and can, lead the way."

The exhibit will include a representative line of all the new 1932 General Motors automobiles, electric refrigeration units, automotive accessories, vacuum cleaners, electric fans and generators, and a booth showing youthful members of the Fisher Body Craftsmen's Guild fabricating a miniature model Napoleonic coach. The exhibit will be open daily from 11 a. m. to 11 p. m. through Saturday, April 9.

Grant to Direct Sales of Pontiac, Buick, Oldsmobile

Super Sales Organization Will Handle Three General Motors-Built Lines.

Formation of the Buick-Olds-Pontiac Sales Co.—a super-sales organization for the distribution of Buick, Oldsmobile and Pontiac cars—is announced by Richard H. Grant, vice president of General Motors.

Grant, in addition to his activities as general supervisor of sales, advertising and service for General Motors, will have active charge of the new organization, assisted by A. Blees as general sales manager, and R. K. White and George H. Wallace as assistant general sales managers.

Blees formerly was vice president in charge of sales of the Oakland Motor Car Co., with White as assistant. Wallace was formerly general sales manager of the Buick Motor Co.

Grant, in announcing the new executive personnel, said that R. M. W. Shaw would continue as advertising manager for Oldsmobile; R. H. Wihte for Pontiac and E. J. Poag for Buick.

Five Regional Sales Areas.

"The new organization is planned to intensify and improve the operating efficiency of our distributing outlets for these three lines of cars," Mr. Grant stated. "The present field organizations of the three companies will be combed for the best talent available, and their united efforts under one directing organization will, we feel, form the strongest and most efficient sales force ever assembled in the automobile industry.

The three cars will continue to be merchandised through the present dealer and distributor organizations, and the management expects to increase materially their sales through the new organization."

The new sales organization is being organized with headquarters in the General Motors Building in Detroit for greater intensification of effort and more convenient and efficient operation.

Five great sales regions are to be established under a resident personnel at New York City, Detroit, Chicago, Memphis and San Francisco. Sales zones under the jurisdiction of the regions also are to be installed at 33 ponits in the United States, Grant announced.

Three hundred picked sales and service representatives will be assigned to the field to work out the zone offices.

Grant Back on Sales Line.

Thirty-three zone warehouses for wholesale distribution of cars and parts also will be centered at strategic points throughout the country, so that immediate service may be rendered to purchasers.

Formation of the new sales organization brings Grant back to the active sales line again. His direct responsibility for the sale of Pontiacs, with W. S. Knudsen charged with their production, brings together once more a team who made automotive history when actively identified with the Chevrolet Motor Co., for they brought that company from comparative obscurity in the industry to first place inside of a decade.

Grant, a Harvard graduate in the class of 1901, is a native of Ipswich, Mass. In the fall of 1901 he went to work for the New England Bell Telephone Co., and for three years continued with them in various commercial capacities.

He then entered the organization of the National Cash Register Co., and after two years of training, joined the sales department. In a short time he was in charge of the company's selling activities. He launched many innovations, and is generally credited with a good share of the brilliant success of that company.

Grant's Busy Career.

In 1915 he became general manager of the Delco Light Co., Dayton, a General Motors subsidiary, and soon had accomplished results more comparable to his achievements with the National Cash Register Co. In 1921, Grant took over Frigidaire as general manager, and once more duplicated his earlier successes.

His entry into the automobile field came in May, 1924, when he was appointed vice president and general sales manager of the Chevrolet Motor Co.

In 1923 the company had sold considerably less than 500,000 cars. In 1927, the volume of the company for the first time crossed the million mark, and that year Chevrolet led the industry in sales, repeating again in 1928.

On May 9, 1929, just 25 years to a day from his appointment as sales manager of the National Cash Register Co., Grant was elected a vice president of General Motors, and relinquished the active sales management of Chevrolet in favor of Harry J. Klingler, formerly general sales manager.

Grant then became vice president of General Motors as general advisor on all sales, service and advertising matters of all divisions of the corporation, a position he still retains in addition to his duties.

In this capacity, during the past three years, he has been responsible for the sale of products valued at an average of more than $1,000,000,000 a year.

Co-Operative Paint Sales Plan Started By the Steelcote Co.

Tuesday evening the Steelcote Manufacturing Co. held a meeting at the Melbourne Hotel for over 25 local independent retail merchants who are participating in a new co-operative merchandising plan in St. Louis and territory.

This plan brings to the user of painting material, a simplified economical method of meeting his needs, of obtaining authentic practical information on the use and color harmony and for getting the services of good painters when work is to be let out.

The idea is the result of nearly four years research on modern selling by this manufacturer in an effort to meet present-day conditions, to remove the mystery associated with the use of paint and to bring newer and improved products to the knowledge of all.

Uniform colors for store fronts, standard identification store signs, systematic stock arrangements and control are some of the features of the plan.

Prices of Pontiac Six Models Are Reduced

A general reduction of prices of all Pontiac six models is announced by the Oakland Motor Car Co. The cuts range up to $50.

New prices are as follows: Standard coupe, $635; two-door sedan, $645; sport coupe, $715; four-door sedan, $725; convertible coupe, $765; custom sedan, $795.

R. H. Grant, vice president and general manager of the newly organized Buick-Olds-Pontiac Sales Co., said the announcement was made in an effort to help the movement toward equalizing prices with the earning capacity of the public.

Thirty-Eight Years Of Tire Making Back Of Kelly-Springfield

Company Began Making Rubber Covering for Wheel Rims in 1894.

The first Kelly-Springfield pneumatic tires for automobiles were made in an old barn-like structure, back at the turn of the century. Still further back, Edwin S. Kelly acquired patents covering solid rubber tires.

It was in 1894 that operations began under the name of the Rubber Tire Wheel Co. of Springfield, O. Five years later the company became the Consolidated Rubber Tire Co., with a plant at Akron turning out tires under the name of its subsidiary, the Buckeye Rubber Co.

When that new and novel conveyance called the automobile created a demand for pneumatic tires, these also were made at the Akron plant. It was in 1914 that the name was changed to Kelly-Springfield Tire Co. with manufacturing units at Akron, Wooster, O., and Buffalo, N. Y.

In 1921, with a large new plant on a site of 80 acres, manufacture was concentrated at Cumberland, Md., on the banks of the Potomac.

Kelly-Springfield had assumed its place in what had so rapidly developed into one of the country's major industries.

William H. Lalley, late in March of last year, became president of the company and brought to that position years of experience in the automotive industry, coupled with the right knowledge of banking. Under his direction the company is engaged in a program of advanced development in both manufacture and distribution.

The Kelly-Springfield company's extensive facilities for research and development are employed in an intensive effort to build still better tires, says F. R. Harris, branch manager in St. Louis.

Auburn Price Rise Effective on April 15

Word has been received by E. J. Johnson, Inc., Auburn and Cord distributer here, that the prices of all Auburn cars will be increased $100, effective April 15. This increase applies to all models in the straight eight and 12-cylinder lines.

E. L. Cord, president of the Auburn Automobile Co., was quoted as saying that automobile manufacturers, more than ever before in the history of the industry, made their greatest effort this year to incorporate new standards of value in their products, both in design and mechanical betterment.

"Prices anounced by most manufacturers for 1932, represented the greatest dollar values in motor car history, and were based upon an anticipated and hoped-for volume of business which has not been realized," he said. "For this reason it is probable that many manufacturers will raise their prices in the near future."

Head of White Co. Finds Optimism on 3000-Mile Bus Trip

"Although general business conditions are at a low ebb and prices are still scraping along the bottom, there is an optimistic feeling spreading throughout the country which may be the forerunner of greater business activity." So said A. G. Bean, president of the White Co., who arrived in St. Louis Thursday on a 3500-mile motor bus trip to visit 18 of the company's factory branches. Bean was accompanied by George H. Kelly, vice president and treasurer of the company. While in St. Louis they were guests of J. B. Suttles at the branch office, 4151-4161 Forest Park boulevard.

"Wherever we visit we find people are more optimistic about the future," said Bean. "This is a good sign. For we must look to the future with confidence if we are to ably apply the many lessons which this period of depression has taught us. As far as the White Co. is concerned we look forward confidently and it is my personal opinion that we are laying the foundation for future business that will be greatly in excess of any year our company has ever had."

Awarded Medal For Goodyear Tire Cord Development

Award of the special Litchfield medal of merit has been made to Samuel A. Steere, manager of the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co.'s cotton and fabric division.

He received the medal for his development of Goodyear supertwist cord used in all tires the company makes. He is the third to be recognized by the factory council with the award, although the Litchfield medal plan has been in existence for some years.

Chevrolet Reduces Prices of All Models

A reduction of prices of Chevrolet cars is immediately effective. The price range for the Chevrolet six now is $445 for the roadster to $625 for the landau phaeton. Six wire wheels and fender wells may be had on all models at $15 additional.

At the same time that the price reduction was announced it was stated officially that Chevrolet will continue to build a six-cylinder car.

The new Chevrolet prices are: Roadster, $445; sport roadster, $485; phaeton, $495; standard coupe, $490; five-window coupe, $490; coach, $495; de luxe coupe, $510; de luxe coach, $515; sport coupe, $535; five-passenger coupe, $575; cabriolet, $595; sedan, $590; special sedan, $615; landau phaeton, $625.

Hupmobile Six Prices Cut on All Models

Hupmobile has just announced a reduction in price affecting every model in its six-cylinder series 216 line. The reduction amounts to as much as $280 on some models.

The new prices announced for standard body types are: Roadster, $795; convertible cabriolet, $895; coupe, $895; standard sedan, $895, and de luxe sedan, $950. These prices include either one extra wire or demountable wood wheel mounted in the right front fender well.

When this new model was introduced at the New York Automobile Show last January, the base list price for the sedan was $995, with other body types still higher.

There have been added to the line de luxe models in all body types.

Combatting Stolen Car Racket.

Twenty-four states of the Union and the District of Columbia now require motorists to have a certificate of the title for their motor vehicles and the universal acceptance of these laws will do more than anything else to end the stolen car racket.

Graham Declares Industry Resents Tax Discrimination

Autos Wrongly Assessed As Luxury He Tells Rockne Dealers in St. Louis.

There is no resentment in the automotive industry against a sales tax, George M. Graham, vice president in charge of sales of the Rockne Motors Co. Corporation, told some 200 Rockne six dealers at a luncheon meeting Thursday at Hotel Chase. But there is resentment because of the sacrificing of the principle that the automobile is an essential, not a luxury, so should not be singled out for taxation.

The auto tax proposed in the general sales tax that was defeated in Congress was to have been 2¼ per cent, and the tax agreed on finally is 3 per cent, so the buyer of a car will pay only three-quarters of one per cent more, anyway, he pointed out.

However, when the excise tax on autos was abolished four years ago, the principle was established that the auto was an essential and should not bear a luxury tax. Again, at the hearing in January last, before the Ways and Means Committee of Congress, the committee members admitted the validity of this principle.

Describing the rapid growth of the Rockne Six organization, Graham said that the first contract with a dealer was signed Dec. 22, 1931, and that on Wednesday night, March 30, there were 1330 Rockne dealers. This month the factory will ship 4000 Rockne Six cars. Dealers are being signed at the rate of 80 to 100 a week, and indications are that there will be 2000 of them by the end of this year, he said.

"Not bad for a company that has been in production only 90 days," he remarked. Incidentally, he recalled that the death of Knute Rockne, the Notre Dame coach for whom the car was named "occurred a year ago today." (The day he was speaking).

Graham said he saw a sure return of prosperity as a result of individual action, especially action by men who were becoming weary of waiting for something to happen.

R. O. Gresham, district sales manager for the Rockne Corporation, presided at the luncheon. Arthur R. Lindburg, president of Arthur R. Lindburg, Inc., Rockne distributer, was host.

Both of the Rocke Six models—the "65," which is the model competing in the low-priced field, and the larger "75" model—are in full production.

Willys-Overland President Visits Distributer Here

L. A. Miller Says Legalizing of Beer Would Have Beneficial Effect on Business.

Balancing of the Federal budget will be the best thing that can happen for the auto industry and for the country as a whole, if it is accomplished, L. A. Miller, president of Willys-Overland, Inc., Toledo, O., declared Tuesday during a visit to Frank C. McDonald, president of the Southwest Willys Co., and W. A. Elliot of Kansas City, Western sales manager for Willys-Overland.

Today the auto industry, he declared, favors a Federal sales tax, but is opposed to any tax discrimination, especially against the automobile and gasoline.

He said he hoped that the tax bill would be definitely settled by June, and urged that motorists demand that Congress act at once and not quibble and delay action with consequent slowing up of the return of good business.

Within the next 30 days, he said, there should be a general improvement in the automobile business with all manufacturers putting forth the greatest effort they have ever made, in advertising as well as in sales promotion, to stimulate business.

People in general, he remarked, are showing more and more confidence every day, and a gradual improvement in business conditions seems a certainty.

Miller said it was his opinion that the legalizing of beer would have a tremendous beneficial effect. He declared that bringing beer back was not only of vast importance as an aid to increasing employment, but that he knew that it would have a great effect in reducing crime. The return of prosperity to St. Louis, especially, he said, would be accelerated.

Miller said that while he realized that many persons had strong convictions that caused them to oppose the return of beer, yet he believed they might well be liberal and yield somewhat, in view of the vast number of those who want beer, and of the general good.

Miller said he was particularly impressed today, as on previous visits, with the size and variety of manufacturing plants in St. Louis, which, to him, meant a definite industrial strength.

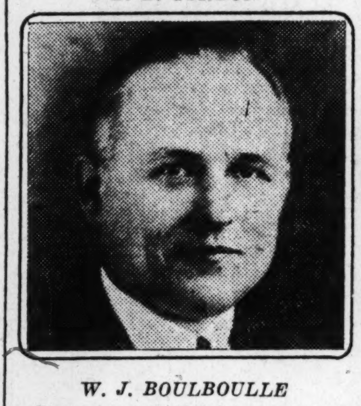
Conduct Meeting of Tire Dealers

W. M. STONESTREET

E. E. GORDON



W. J. BOULBOULLE

Stonestreet is district manager in St. Louis for the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Co. He will be in charge of a meeting of Goodrich tire dealers on Friday at the Jefferson Hotel. Gordon is manager here for Goodrich-Silvertown, Inc. Boulboulle is district operating manager for Goodrich.

Goodrich Executives Coming for Dealers' Meeting Here Friday

W. M. Stonestreet, district manager for the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Co., announces a meeting of tire dealers next Friday, April 8, at the Jefferson Hotel, to be conducted by members of the sales and advertising staff of the company from Akron, O.

More than 400 dealers from Missouri, Illinois, Arkansas, Tennessee and Kentucky will attend the conferences to be addressed by P. J. Kelly, assistant general sales manager; A. C. Kelly, division manager; Guy Gundaker Jr., sales promotion manager, and H. W. Delzell, tire expert.

"A dramatized presentation of the 1932 sales policies of Goodrich will be given at the meeting by members of the rubber company's Akron organization, the story being built around a tire dealer's problems in a small town," Stonestreet says.

The play has been given in various parts of the country at Goodrich conferences and has been reviewed by critics who proclaimed the show to be the most unusual effort of its kind they had seen.

"Goodrich this year introduced a new line of tires developed after three years of experimentation and testing during which time the tires were tested in more than 1,000,000 miles of driving.

"During January and February Goodrich sales of first line tires increased 25.9 per cent in units sold over the same period last year," Mr. Stonestreet declared.

Stonestreet is assisted in this district by E. E. Gordon, manager of the local Goodrich Silvertown, Inc., store, and W. J. Boulboulle, district operating manager, in charge of branch and store operations.

The Goodrich party will arrive Thursday morning.

Pierce-Arrow Holds Special Exhibit All This Week in St. Louis

Pierce-Arrow, through its local distributer, the Western Automobile Co., is participating this week in a nationwide series of exhibits being staged to promote the patriotic spending movement. The industry's demonstration is based on the idea that a dollar spent for a motor car will contribute more quickly to a general business recovery than will a dollar spent for any other product.

"The sooner people buy what they actually can afford, whether it be radios, clothing or automobiles, the sooner will the movement and manufacture of raw materials begin to provide work and money for everyone throughout the country," said Sam Breadon, head of the local Pierce-Arrow sales and service organization.

"This is especially true in the case of an automobile because a revival of automobile sales will immediately renew activity in all lines of trade, for the reason that the automobile industry not only consumes vast quantities of steel, rubber, copper, glass, lumber, textiles and other materials, but dispenses millions of dollars to wage earners and, consequently, wage spenders."

No form of investment offers as quick or effective distribution of the country's inactive billions as the purchase of a motor car, according to a statement recently made by a Pierce-Arrow official, who pointed out that 48 states contribute to the building of an automobile.

The new Pierce-Arrow eights and twelves are said to represent more hours of labor than any other car. Conservative calculations reveal that the production of each Pierce-Arrow car provides food and shelter for 50 men and their families for a month.

Great Organists to Play for KMOX

CHARLES COURBOIN, a Belgian who is listed among the "big five" organists, is to play the new KMOX organ for a CBS network concert at 8:30 Saturday night, April 16. He also will play the KMOX organ recital the following Sunday afternoon. Frank Asper, organist for the Mormon Tabernacle in Salt Lake City, will play a KMOX concert some time in May.

One of the few really fine organ concerts broadcast is that from KMOX at 5 o'clock Sunday afternoons. Last Sunday there was a soloist in this concert and, therefore, the organ was subordinated. The same is true for this Sunday. Hereafter, assurances are given these Sunday concerts will be confined to the organ and to fine music. It also is stated that this will be one radio recital in which the organ will be played as a concert instrument, not as a theater type organ.

ANOTHER array of radio stars is billed for a special broadcast over the WEAF chain and KSD at 8:30 tomorrow night when entertainers generally used on five programs will be massed for the one. The broadcast will continue for an hour and will feature orchestras led by Paul Whiteman, Erno Rapee, Frank Black, Harry Reser and Gustav Haenschen, and the following artists and entertainers: The Revelers Quartet, the piano team of Ohman and Arden, the Countess Olga Albani, Mildred Bailey, Eileen Stanley, the King's Jesters, the Rondoliers Quartet, Welcome Lewis and others. Announcers will include Graham McNamee, James Wallington, Howard Clancey, Howard Petrie, John S. Young and Norman Sweetser. The program's climax is planned to come when Whiteman's orchestra plays Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue."

STUDEBAKER MARCHES ON

Sales from January 1st to March 20th, 1932 increased 20.3% over the same period in 1931

STUDEBAKER is marching on to new success in 1932 . . . the Triumphant New Studebakers have met with a remarkable reception, Pierce-Arrow retains its unique hold on the fine car field and the Rockne Six has won immediate acceptance. As a result, passenger car sales of The Studebaker Corporation in the United States and Canada, between January 1 and March 20, were 20.3% in excess of the same period in 1931.

In two-thirds of the cities over 100,000 population in the United States, sales of Studebaker models alone increased in January and February from 17% to 600% over the same months last year.

From coast to coast and from border to border, remarkable gains have emphasized Studebaker leadership. In New York, in February, Studebaker models alone registered an increase of 101% over February, 1931. In San Francisco, Studebaker deliveries were 70% in excess of February last year. In New Orleans, 63% more Studebakers were sold. In Detroit, the gain was 97%. In St. Louis, 55%. In Buffalo, 63%. In Cincinnati, 62%. In Denver, 82%. In Toledo, 114%.

These are only a few of many new "highs" established in every part of America by overwhelming public approval and purchase of Studebaker's 4 great "buys."

Studebaker is taking month after month in stride because Studebaker has refused to stand still—because in 80 years of experience, and through 10 business depressions, the oldest vehicle manufacturer in the world has learned that the way to win out is to stand out—to do more and give more!

To do more . . . by pioneering such epochal advancements as Free Wheeling . . . by contributing Safety Glass in all windows and all windshields of all models at no extra charge—and again the industry is following Studebaker.

To give more . . . in cars of larger size and finer quality, replete with 32 startling betterments . . . yet drastically lower in price.

Today, all America is attesting Studebaker's leadership. Alert to value as never before, motorists are giving Studebaker one of the great sales records of its career. Studebaker sets forth this record as an invitation to thoughtful Americans to see and drive its triumphant new cars—the utmost in engineering genius and the ultimate in value. Arrange for a demonstration today.

MORE DIVERSIFIED DEMAND IN REALTY DEALS LAST WEEK

Business Building at the Northeast Corner of Gravois and Phillips Avenues Sold.

While not individually large, the week's transactions in real estate here indicated a more diversified demand. Negotiations pending yesterday involved several substantial holdings in the midtown and uptown business as well as in the apartment centers.

An uptown feature during the week was the sale of the business building at the northeast corner of Gravois and Phillips avenues, to George W. Reiss and Emma C. Reiss. The sellers were Charles and Anna Erlenbach. The transaction was handled by the Nann-Heberer Realty Co., Inc. The first floor of the Gravois structure comprises stores and the upper floors, offices. The Associated Grocers, a chain concern, has the corner store under a long lease. The price was not announced. The property was acquired as an investment.

A two-story business building occupies the lot with a frontage of 30 feet on Franklin by an irregular depth. Lasky, who is proprietor of a Franklin avenue furniture store at 1406 Franklin avenue, made the purchase as an investment.

The northwest corner of Franklin avenue and Seventh street 80x127 feet was purchased three years ago by the L. C. Wilderman Lubricating Co., represented by Henry R. Weisels, Inc. from William A. Giraldin, president of the Giraldin Bros. Real Estate Co. Giraldin, had purchased the corner two years before. A service station of the Wilderman company now occupies the corner.

The Washington avenue building, comprising six apartments of seven rooms each, with a four-car garage in the rear, has a frontage of 75 feet on the corner of Laurel avenue. The seller was Mrs. Hattie M. Bunting. The Leland building contains three apartments of six rooms and sun parlor each. It has a lot frontage of 45 feet. There is a garage for three cars in the rear of the premises. The purchaser was represented by the Kroeger-Miege Real Estate Co. The owner, Fred Block, was represented by Farnoff.

Construction contracts awarded in the 37 states east of the Rockies amounted to $76,471,800 during the first three weeks of March, according to F. W. Dodge Corporation. PROTESTS AGAINST REALTY LOAN POLICY OF BANKS HERE

Five thousand letters protesting against what is termed "the unwarranted and unreasonable" policy of St. Louis banks in handling real estate loans have been prepared for mailing to the St. Louis members of Congress by individual members of improvement associations.

The letters state that banks are calling well secured real estate loans and insisting on substantial reductions before renewing them. Foreclosure follows if the reduction is not made, the letters state. They express the hope that something can be done "to induce banks to adopt a sane and liberal policy."

IN MEMORIAM

CERNY—In loving memory of Frank, Clara Cerny and family, who departed this life April 5, 1931:
Our family circle has been broken,
Links gone from our chain;
But though we're parted for a while,
We know we'll meet again.
Some day we hope to meet you,
Some day, we know not when,
We shall meet in a better land
And never part again.
We shall meet with many a loved one
That was torn from our embrace,
We shall listen to their voices
And behold them face to face.
Sunshine passes, shadows fall,
Love's remembrance outlasts all.
Sadly missed by
MOTHER AND SISTERS.

ERB—In sad and loving remembrance of my dear wife and our loving mother, who departed this life one year ago, April 7, 1931.
We are thinking of you today, dear mother,
Thinking of the past, picturing you in memory,
Just as we saw you last.
You left behind some broken hearts that loved you so sincere,
That never did and never will forget you, mother dear.
The face we loved is now laid low, your loving voice is still;
Your hand, so often clasped in ours, lies now in death's cold chill.
God took you home—it was His will—
But in our heart you liveth still.
Sadly missed by
Husband, Mr. Frank Erb, and children, Bernice, Helen, Claude, and all who loved you.

ENGLISH—Wm. J. English departed this life on April 1, 1930.
Another year has passed and gone
And I am still sad and forlorn
Thinking of you night and day,
Wondering why you went away.
It won't be long, my daddy, dear,
Until we'll clasp our hands with cheer.
Sadly missed by wife,
FLORENCE ENGLISH. (c)

HENZE—In loving memory of our dear son and brother, Ellsworth Henze, who passed away April 2, 1931:
More and more each day we miss him;
Friends may think the wound is healed,
But they little know the sorrow
Lies within our hearts concealed.
Sadly missed by
MOTHER, FATHER AND SISTER.

HORNBY—In loving memory of my dear husband, Richard James Hornby, who passed away two years ago April 4, 1930:
Sunshine passes, shadows fall;
Love remembrances outlast all,
And though the years are many or few,
They are filled with remembrances, dear, of you.
WIFE AND DAUGHTERS. (c)

KRAMER—In loving memory of Mrs. Amalia Kramer, who departed this life April 6, 1925.
The depth of sorrow we cannot tell,
Of the loss of one we loved so well;
And while she sleeps a peaceful sleep,
Her memory we shall always keep.
Sadly missed by daughter, MRS. FERDINAND KNITTEL AND GRANDDAUGHTERS. (c)

IN MEMORIAM

LANDERS—In loving memoriam of our dear husband, father and grandfather, Albert Landers Sr., who passed away March 24, 1931:
The rolling stream of life rolls on,
But still the vacant chair
Recalls the love, the voice, the smile,
Of the one who once sat there.
Sadly missed by the FAMILY.

LASKEY—In loving remembrance of our dear mother, mother-in-law and grandmother, Catherine Laskey, departed second day of April 1931
Surrounded by friends we are lonesome,
In the midst of our joys we are blue.
With a smile on our face
We've a heartache, longing dear mother, for you.
Sadly missed by the bereaved family.

LAY—In loving memory of Sergt. Richard Lay, who died March 31, 1931.
The garment of his soul has passed away,
The shining spirit and love light stay,
The echo of his voice, his eyes, his smile,
Just as they were, are with us all the while.
Sadly missed by WIFE. (c)

LODDEKE — In loving memory of our dear mother, Antonette Loddeke, who departed this life two years ago, April 2, 1930.
A faithful mother, so kind and true,
We always pray and think of you,
You are not forgotten in our minds,
To us you were so good and kind;
And for us you did your best
God grant you eternal rest.
Sadly missed by sons and daughter and all who loved her.

MAIER—In loving memory of William Maier, who died April 6, 1931.
His memory is as dear today
As in the hour he passed away.
Sadly missed by
WIFE, SON AND RELATIVES.

MARTIN—In memory of my beloved husband and our dear father, Adam J. Martin, who passed away April 3, 1931.
Just one year ago today,
In silent sleep you passed away;
God called you home, it was His will,
But in our hearts you linger still;
And when our days on earth are past,
May we meet in heaven at last.
Sadly missed by
WIFE AND CHILDREN.

METTING—In loving memory of our dear mother, Caroline Metting, who passed away March 31, 1931.
Just a thought of sweet remembrance,
Just a memory sad and true,
Just a love and sweet devotion
Of those who think of you.
Sadly missed by CHILDREN.

NANSEL—In loving memory of my dear husband, Charles W. Nansel, who died April 2, 1931:
Oh, what would I give to clasp his hand,
His dear, kind face to see;
To hear his voice, to see his smile,
That meant so much to me.
His spirit has fled, his sufferings o'er,
At the fireside he will join us no more.
Sadly missed by
WIFE AND STEPCHILDREN.

SCHOLLMEYER—In loving memory of our dear father, Christian Schollmeyer, who departed Feb. 18, 1925, and our dear mother, Barbara Schollmeyer, March 28, 1927:
We are sad within our memory,
Lonely are our hearts today,
For the ones we loved so dearly
Have forever been called away.
We think of them in silence,
No eye may see us weep
But many silent tears are shed
When others are asleep.
Sadly missed by
THEIR CHILDREN.

STOETZER—In memory of our beloved son and brother, Oscar E. Stoetzer, passed away April 4, three years ago.
He is not dead, but sleeping,
Beloved one for whom we mourn,
At rest in Christ's strong keeping,
No longer trouble-worn.
Why, then, should we keep weeping
With hearts sad and forlorn;
He is not dead, but sleeping,
Beloved one for whom we mourn.
Sadly missed by
PARENTS, BROTHER AND SISTERS. (c)

WELSCH—In loving memory of our dear wife and mother, Emma Welsch, who departed this life April 2, 1931.
She bade no one a last farewell,
She said goodby to no one;
Sad and sorrowful was the call,
Our dear wife and mother loved by all.
The shock was great, the pain severe,
She did not know that death was near;
Her loving heart had ceased to beat,
And before we knew she was gone.
Sadly missed by
HUSBAND, SON AND FAMILY.

IN loving memory of our dear mother and grandmother, who departed this life four years ago, March 30, 1928.
Sadly missed by
CHILDREN AND GRANDCHILDREN.

SALESMEN WANTED

MEN

SALESMEN AND MEN WHO ARE QUALIFIED TO LEARN HOW TO SUCCESSFULLY REPRESENT THIS COMPANY.

This is an unusual business opportunity that requires no capital, no investment or expense. If you are diligent and handle your business right, it is yours permanently and your initial earnings will steadily increase with weekly pay-checks, and bonus-and-savings fund will be set up for you.

This plan has enabled acceptable men throughout the entire country to double and triple their highest previous earnings and to share in our extraordinary gains in business last year. For example, as Ralph Love stated: "I am happier than I ever have been in my whole life. I would not sell my future in this business today for $20,000 in cash."

If mutual investigation warrants our employing you, you will have certain tasks to do every day—things which are simple enough for the average man to learn, but he must pursue them exactly as taught, with honesty of purpose and with perseverance, to merit success. You will have no investment in stock, no office expenses, no service or collection work. We sell you nothing.

New men must take the time to learn and acquire skill, but our method of work is so effective and the market is so wide that extra time can be profitably used to offset inexperience. Some men require two or three months before their earnings average more than in previous occupations; some require five or six months. We expect you to merit increased earnings as experience is gained.

For example, when V. E. McNeil, former grocer, started on this plan, he made $110 his first three weeks, whereas his recent pay-vouchers show him averaging $100 per week—with no investment or risk such as most ordinary retail outlets suffer. A. Orvis, former aviation instructor, made only $79 his first three weeks, but he made $1255.66 his first three months, and $6962.40 his first year with us.

If you have good character references, are able to work consistently as taught, without punching a clock; if you need and want to earn a substantial income in a company that is expanding its business and revolutionizing an entire industry, apply Monday morning, 9:30 to 12. Also 1 to 4. Personal interviews at 562 Paul Brown Bldg., 9th and Olive sts.

This announcement is addressed to reputable, industrious men by Electrolux, Inc., now introducing and manufacturing in this country a new mechanical specialty (not refrigeration) with amazing success.

SALESMEN—With car. If you think you can sell our proposition we can prove we have men making from $15 to $20 day. Good St. Louis and surrounding territory open. Call Maryland Hotel, room 634, Sunday afternoon or any day after 6 p. m.

SALESMEN—Experienced in selling refrigeration display cases; a new, improved ice cream freezer and hardening cabinet; territory open in both Missouri and Illinois. For appointment call RIverside 0028. (c)

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., April 2.—The wildness of Sam Gray and Dick Coffman cost the Browns a victory over the Minneapolis club of the American Association here this afternoon, for all three of the Millers' runs were scored by men who had been put on bases through walks. The score was 3 to 2. It was a tough game for Bill Killefer's team to lose, for the club fielded brilliantly, handling every chance cleanly and executing one of those rarities of baseball, a triple play.

Browns Make Triple Play.

When Gray walked the first man to face him in the fourth inning, it looked as though he was in for certain trouble. Two singles followed, scoring a run and paving the way for others. Men were on first and third and there was no one out, with the heavy end of the batting order ready to add to the havoc. Then it happened. Ganzel hit a long drive straight at Jimmy Levey. The shortstop snared the ball just above his head, whipped a fast throw to Storti, who stepped on third, retiring Norris, and after a moment's delay, threw the ball across the diamond to Burns, putting Harry Rice out for a triple play.

Gray got by the next inning without any trouble but a walk started him on the way to more grief in the sixth. Two singles and a force out resulted in the second run. Coffman, who has pitched inspiring ball in his previous appearances on the mound this spring, relieved Gray in the eighth and immediately put two runners on base because of his lack of control. A single and a forceout followed, pushing a runner across the plate. This proved the winning run for the Browns scored only one run in their ninth.

Browns Fail to Hit in Pinches.

It's difficult to win games when the hitters are not hitting. The Browns got only nine scattered hits off old "Rube" Benton and young Sid Hensick, St. Louis boy, and they left only four men on base. The Minneapolis pitchers had better control than Killefer's hurlers, issuing only one base on balls.

In the fourth, Schulte opened with a single and Burns bunted safely, his speed enabling him to convert what ordinarily is a sacrifice into a base hit. But Goslin hit into a double play. Melillo came through with a single to score Schulte and Bettencourt also reached first on an infield hit but the rally closed when Storti struck out.

That was the only really good inning the Browns had at bat. A double play stopped them in the eighth and a walk helped them to score in the ninth.

Catcher Bryant, who will soon join the Wichita Falls club, caught half an inning today.

Brownie Notes.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., April 2.

MANAGER KILLIFER will give George Blaeholder a chance to go nine innings tomorrow. He has Wallace Hebert, Americo Polli and Dick Coffman ready for work.

Sid Hensick, a St. Louis boy, who once starred for Harry Ratican's team in the St. Louis Soccer League, relieved Rube Benton as the Minneapolis pitcher in the sixth.

MISS ORCUTT RETAINS NORTH-SOUTH GOLF TITLE

New Jersey Woman Defeats Mrs. Hill, 1 Up, With Long Putts on Last Two Holes

By the Associated Press.

PINEHURST, N. C., April 2.—Sinking putts of more than 20 feet to win the seventeenth and eighteenth holes, Maureen Orcutt, Englewood, N. J., star, overcame a one-hole deficit to defeat Mrs. Opal Hill of Kansas City, today for the North and South Championship. Her one up victory brought her the crown for the second successive year.

The Winner

MAUREEN ORCUTT.

Down from the start, Miss Orcutt forced the play with a chance-taking game all the way. Although she kept the match squared often, she was never ahead until the final hole. Mrs. Hill's uncanny ability to sink long putts enabled her to win several holes which it appeared Miss Orcutt would capture.

To overcome her putting jinx, which finally left her on the last holes, Miss Orcutt gambled frequently on long second shots, playing them over traps to the greens.

The victory today was the third of the winter season for Miss Orcutt and gave her top honors for the year's early campaign.

After halving the fifteenth in fours, Mrs. Hill went 1 up on the sixteenth, where Miss Orcutt's putt for a half rimmed the cup. The long-hitting New Jersey girl stretched her second to the edge of the green on the long seventeenth and holed a 25 -foot putt for a birdie to win the hole.

A cross wind caught Miss Orcutt's drive on the eighteenth and it carried into a trap, but she made a long out to the left of the green, leaving herself a difficult chip over a trap, which she carried and sank a long roller for a par four as Mrs. Hill missed her try for a half.

Miss Orcutt's medal score was 82 and Mrs. Hill's 84.

Results of final matches in other divisions:

First division consolation—Mrs. Charles Harbaugh of Cleveland beat Helen Waring of Pinehurst, 5 and 3.

Second consolation—Mrs. J. Maynes of Washington beat Mrs. F. E. Campbell of Pittsburg, 3 and 2.

Fourth division—Mrs. D. A. Garber of Pittsburg beat Adelaide Reckford of New York, 3 and 2.

PITCHERS SHIFTED ON CARDINAL FARM TEAMS

DALLAS, Tex., April 2.—L. S. MacPhail, president of the Columbus American Association baseball club, today announced the trade of Jim Widford and Clarence Heise, for Carmen Hill and Pete Fowler of the Rochester International League club. All are pitchers. Winford and Heise are youngsters while Hill and Fowler are veterans.

The Rochester and Columbus clubs are both controlled by the St. Louis Cardinals.

MUNN SETS NEW SHOTPUT RECORD

By the Associated Press.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., April 2.—Clarence Munn of Minnesota, Western Conference shotput champion, broke the meet record for his specialty at the fourth annual Minnesota Relays tonight. He heaved the 16-pound shot 48 feet 10⅞ inches. The former record was 48 feet 9⅝ inches, held by Sammy Behr, Wisconsin.

Elton Hess, Minnesota, tied the meet record in the pole valt at 13 feet and Wisconsin won the university distance medley erlay with Grinnell second.

WRAY'S COLUMN

That Dempsey Tour.

JACK DEMPSEY'S comeback tour, now over, demonstrated nothing much, except the Mighty Mauler's amazing popularity. It built up another small fortune for Dempsey, but added little to the hopefulness of his supporters that he has regained much more than half the form that once carried him to the top.

The crest of his tour was reached at Chicago when he fought the rugged and powerful young fighter King Levinsky—a fight that caused nearly all of the observers to turn thumbs down on Dempsey's hope of being able to battle for the title again.

CARNERA

This writer saw that fight. True, Dempsey was not the Dempsey of old. He could not find the target with his mighty wallop. He was outpointed in a small way by Levinsky. It did not seem that he was strong enough in the legs to stand up before Levinsky for 10 rounds.

Nevertheless he was far from disgraced. He took all that Levinsky handed him. At no time did he seem in real distress. His lack of wind appeared to be his outstanding handicap.

But while it is possible that further training may still further improve Dempsey, his mind and hand will never again team together with the same lightning swiftness that once made him such a wrecker of opponents' hopes.

Lack of co-ordination, more than lack of legs or stamina, is Dempsey's worst handicap today.

Why Reno?

NEVERTHELESS it seems pretty well established that Dempsey is committed to a fight in Reno, Nev., on July 4, against Primo Carnera. Dempsey says he's going West to climb mountains and still further improve his condition.

If he does, it is conceivable that a fight with Primo Carnera would not be altogether hopeless. If there is one man among the first 10 today whom Dempsey can whip it ought to be Carnera. Dempsey was always at his best against larger and comparatively slow opponents. Considering the enormous target Carnera would present, Dempsey's bonecrushers ought to find the mark without great difficulty.

That famous right to the body and left to the chin may

54 RUNS SCORED IN 13 1-2 INNINGS IN HIGH SCHOOL DOUBLEHEADER

By Harold Tuthill.

Teams representing the City High School Baseball League established some sort of record in the first double-header of the season yesterday afternoon at the Public Schools Stadium when 54 runs were scored in 13½ innings of play. Roosevelt, the defending champion, took the honors by defeating Beaumont, 23 to 8, in the first game, and Central trounced McKinley, 18 to 5, in the second, which went only five innings.

The weather was ideal for baseball, but very little, if any, of it was played for the benefit of the 1000 fans who turned out.

From a mathematical standpoint the contests were successes, because the 56 hits and 54 runs scored during the afternoon, an average of more than two hits and two runs per half inning, had the scorers dizzy, after the curtain had been rung down on the five-hour performance. Central very probably could have set a mark for future teams to shoot at, had darkness not abbreviated the game.

Roosevelt gave the fans an indication of what to expect by hopping on John Stiles, the starting Beaumont thrower, for six runs in the first frame. The Rough Riders scored only twice in the second and once in the third, lulling the spectators in the belief that the game might be interesting, but this was dissipated by the four they counted in the fourth.

Before the game had ended Roosevelt had scored at least one in each of its eight innings and all the regulars with the exception of Leroy Suschanek got one or more hits. Al Kleier had a perfect day with four hits and two walks in six trips to the plate. Ollie Steiner, the southpaw pitcher, helped to win his own game by contributing a

St. Louis Eleven Stronger for Replay Of National Soccer Title Match Today

McCarthy Will Be at Center Forward for Stix Club in Battle Against New Bedford Club.

By Herman Wecke.

St. Louis' soccer representative, the Stix eleven, will get its second chance to win a national championship when the club opposes the defending titleholders, the New Bedford (Mass.) club, in a replay match at Sportsman's Park, this afternoon, starting at 3 o'clock. In one of the finest exhibitions ever played in this city, the two teams went to a 3 to 3 draw in two hours of battling last Sunday.

The St. Louis team will be strengthened for the second meeting with the Easterners, since Joe McCarthy will be able to resume his center forward position. Jack O'Reilly played at the position last Sunday and also in the deciding match of the western final against the Bricklayers of Chicago. O'Reilly is a fine player, but he's inclined to do too much running, whereas McCarthy sticks to his position in better style. O'Reilly may play outside right, especially if Pastor's leg is still ailing.

Someone Gets a Tough Job.

Harry Hebberger or young Corbett will get the job of defending against that veteran performer Alec McNab, captain, coach and star outside right of the invaders. No matter who is assigned to the task, that athlete will be in for a busy afternoon. Despite his 37 years, McNab showed a week ago that he still must be regarded as one of the outstanding forwards in the country. Nilsen or White, whichever plays next to McNab, also will give any halfback a busy afternoon.

Following the 3 to 3 draw Willie McLean, the little forward, who headed in the cross in the last seven minutes of play to give the St. Louis entry a tie, was complaining of a bad leg early in the week, but after several visits to a physician, announced that he would probably be ready to play.

Because of the ailing players, Manager Jimmy Burke has not definitely made up his mind regarding his starting lineup. However, Jimmy Roe, the little forward brought up from the Russells of the Municipal League, will get a chance at a forward position. He will replace McLean, if the outside left is unable to start. If McLean plays, Roe is scheduled to work instead of Eddie Hart, who has had trouble reaching top form this season.

Besides Hebberger, the halfback line will be made up of Captain Bill Lehman and Elmer Benoist. Those three fine defenders—Charley LaBarge, Bob Gregg and Tom Erbe—are ready. Their play has been one of the bright features of the Stix team's play in recent important cup matches.

"We know that we will be up against a tough rival, one of the finest teams in the country, but we will do our best to give St. Louis its first national championship since 1922," said the Stix players following their final workout.

McNab expects his team to play even better soccer in the replay than it did in last Sunday's game. He declares that a week ago the players were pretty well tired out following their long train ride. This was not apparent to the spectators.

This week, however, the team will be fresh, since the athletes remained here all week, with the exception of a trip to Gillespie, Ill., Friday afternoon, for a practice

Two Homers Each by Hurst And Whitney of Phillies Defeat Athletics, 8 to 4

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, April 2. — The Phillies and their old rivals, the American League Champion Athletics, opened their annual spring city series here today with a victory for the National leaguers, 8 to 4.

Ten thousand persons saw the local baseball season open with heavy hitting upon the part of the Phils.

Don Hurst, the heavy muscled first-sacker of the Nationals, poled two home runs over the right field wall, each time with a man on base, and Pinkey Whitney upheld his captain's role with a pair of homers that saile into the lower left field stand.

Except for those long distance shots, the Athletics out-batted the Phillies, making 11 hits off Phil Collins aand Ray Benge, to the seven the Phillies got off Joe Bowman and "Sugar" Cain.

Cards Stronger Choice Than Macks In New York Odds

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 2.

THE St. Louis Cardinals are a stronger choice to repeat last year's National league triumph than the Philadelphia Athletics are to win their fourth straight American League pennant in the betting figures announced today by Jack Doyle, Broadway commissioner.

Doyle, who handles most of the large wagers made on big sporting events here, quoted 6 to 5 against the Athletics to win but held the Cardinals at even money. The odds are 1-4 against the A's finishing second and the Cardinals 1-3. No wagers were offered against either team finishing third.

Doyle offers wagers that the New York Yankees will provide the chief opposition to the A's, with Washington third choice and Cleveland fourth. The New York Giants are his second choice in the National League, with Chicago third and Brooklyn fourth.

The Yankees are 9 to 5 to win, 1 to 3, for second, while Washington is 3 to 1 to win and 1 to 2 to place. The Giants are 5 to 2 to win, 1 to 3 for second, and Chicago 3 to 1 and 1 to 2. No money is offered against any of these teams finishing third.

The longest shots are the White Sox and the Cincinnati Reds. Doyle quoted 1000 to 1 against the the chances of either to win and 200 to 1 against them finishing third. The White Sox were quoted 300 to 1 for second place and the Reds 400 to 1.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

ATLANTA, Ga., April 2. — Bill Hallahan, the well known elephant tamer, showed the effects of his recent illness, but he was good enough, with the aid of Jerome Herman Dean, the able orator, to lead the Cardinals to a 4-2 victory over the Atlanta Crackers of the Southern Association this afternoon.

Bill toiled five innings and the Crackers got their two runs while he was on the mound. His fast ball was not zipping as it usually does and after his session on the mound, Bill complained of being tired. His showing however, indicated that he is about recovered from his recent illness and another outing on the mound before the club begins the National League season April 12 should just about put the southpaw from Binghamton, N. Y., on edge for the long grind.

Dean Allows Only One Hit.

After Hallahan gave away, Dean took the mound and he looked far better than in some of the games in Florida when major league opposition plastered his shoots to all parts of the lot. Dizzy dished out a row of four goose eggs, allowing only one hit.

While Hallahan and Dean were subduing the Crackers, the Cardinals were making good use of the nine hits they collected. George Watkins was the leading bludgeon swinger, with a double and two singles and his hits figured in the scoring of two of the four Cardinal runs.

He made his presence felt as early as the first inning with one out his first single was converted into a run, the rightfielder tallying on Bottomley's double in center field.

"Pepper" Thrills Crowd.

"Pepper" Martin gave the local fans a thrill by his great sprinting in the second inning when he opened with a drive to center for three bases. Jimmy Wilson followed with a blow of like proportion that tallied the "Wild Horse of the Osage." Wilson, however, was thrown out at the plate on Adams' grounder, but Gelbert, who had walked, scored on Watkin's double.

While Hallahan was on the mound the Crackers scored a pair of markers and the count remained at 3 to 2 until the ninth inning when Parham, batting for Martin, opened with a walk. On Mancuso's long fly, Parham took second, but in his attempt to dash to third on an overthrow, was cut down. Gelbert's double and Dean's single accounted for the fourth and final tally.

Redbird Notes.

ATLANTA, Ga., April 2.

THE crowd today was the largest that the Cardinals have seen this spring. More than 2200 fans turned out to see the world champions. With Martin in the lineup the Cardinals are a drawing card and it means that "Pepper" is going to appear in all games. Otherwise the fans will squawk.

Martin's retirement in the ninth was due to the fact that Manager Street wanted the fans to gaze on Bob Parham, an Atlanta boy. He game with Gillespie which the New Bedford team won, 8 to 2.

Three practice sessions were held during the week. These practices were notmerely kicking at the ball.

CARDINALS CONFIDENT OF WINNING THIRD PENNANT IN ROW

STREET INTENDS TO START RHEM IN FIRST GAME OF NEW SEASON

By J. Roy Stockton.

ATLANTA, Ga., April 2. — The world-champion Cardinals have concluded their Florida spring training and are now in fine condition for the new pennant race, in which they hope to win their third straight title and their fifth in seven years. Charles Chick Hafey, who led the National League in batting last season, is still holding out, and the resources of the Cardinal organization can be appreciated when it is stated that despite the prospect that he will be lost for part or all of the 1932 campaign, the members of the team still believe that they are strong enough to stand off all challenges and go through to the world series.

Manager Gabby Street, happy over the condition and prospects of his squad, has designated his lineup for the spring series with the Browns and the opening game of the season, and also has compiled a working schedule for his pitchers.

Starting Rhem.

"It may sound superstitious and foolish to some people," the Old Sergeant apologized, "but I won two pennants and a world series after starting Flint Rhem in the opening game of the flag race, and he will be on the hill for us when we meet the Pittsburg Pirates at Sportsman's Park April 12. No matter what happens meantime, that is my plan for the opener.

"As for the spring series, if my schedule works out without rain interfering it looks like Rhem and Carleton will work the Saturday game against the Browns, with Hallahan and Derringer due to pitch in the Sunday game. That, of course, depends on whether we get in all the games at Atlanta, Nashville, Hoxie, Joplin and Springfield. But I'm going to work my men in order and that may change the spring series battery plans."

The Old Sergeant also wrote down the lineup that he plans to use. Sparky Adams will lead off, with Watkins or Blades in right field and batting second. Watkins will play against right-handers and Blades will be the right fielder when the opposing pitcher is a southpaw. Frisch, of course, will bat third, followed by Jim Bottomley, Jimmy Collins, the new left fielder, Martin, Wilson, Gelbert and the pitcher.

Street virtually has selected his roster of 23 players, who will comprise the world champions' squad after June 15, but the final reduction will be put off as late as possible.

Eight Sure Pitchers.

For instance at this time it appears that the eight pitchers are certain to win jobs, with the ninth place still open. The men who have convinced the manager that they ought to remain are Haines, Hallahan, Johnson, Derringer, Rhem, Lindsey, Stout and Carleton. The others will be retained until Street is satisfied, but if he had to make his choice today he undoubtedly would pick either Dean or Starr for the ninth man. That means that Tony Kaufmann, Bud Teachout and either Dean or Starr will be farmed out to one of the minor league clubs.

Starr has been the in-and-outer of the spring camp and recently he has been pitching impressively. For a time it seemed that Dean had an edge, but the Dizzy one from Houston has not done any convincing work. He reported under weight as a result of an attack of flu and has never shown the fast ball that made him a great pitcher at Houston. If careful diet and a course of cod liver oil fail to restore Dizzy's strength, Starr, if he continues to improve, may force the Cardinals to send Dean to Houston for another year.

The infield problem appears to have solved itself satisfactorily. Bottomley, Frisch, Gelbert and Adams will be the regulars, with Horace Ford and Eddie Delker as reserves.

As long as Hafey is out of the fold, Street will not have to worry much about the ultimate make-up of his outfield squad. Blades, in fine condition, seems to have won the job as alternate right-fielder and Ernie Crsatti is too valuable to be excluded.

Jimmy Collins, sent to left field as a regular, when it appeared that Hafey was going to be a serious hold-out, has surprised everybody by making a fine showing defensively. Everybody figured the boy could and would hit, and now that he has displayed ground-covering ability, a fine arm and a keen eye at judging flies, the Cardinals actually have ceased to worry about Hafey.

Infield Problem Solved.

Besides making the club forget about Hafey, Collins' transfer to the outfield also has helped to solve Street's infield problem and Lee Cunningham, from Danville, is the only infielder who will have to be disposed of before June 15 to reduce the infield squad to the quota of six. Pat Crawford already has been assigned to the Columbus club of the American Association and Cunningham also probably is destined for a regular job with one of the higher minor league teams.

GENERAL TIRES ROLL 2877 IN A. B. C. EVENT

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Mich., April 3.—The General Tires of St. Louis pounded out a 2877 total in the team event of the American Bowling Congress tournament tonight, although they scored only 863 in their opening game. The St. Louisans came back in their remaining attempts and the pins rang out to the tune of 1004 and 1010.

Jimmy Wilson headed the scoring parade when he sent his hook into the uprights for a 615 total.

Jule Schmitt's Ready Mixers put up a rally in their final attempt and hung up a 1064 game for a grand total of 2826 pins. They had only meager counts of 887 and 875 in the first assaults at the maples.

The three other St. Louis lineups registered marks that will bring in cash awards. The Witter Razz socked 2792; Henry Schaeffer 2777, and Alexander & Son 2706.

The noted Witter Razz quintet failed to live up to advance notices. Although counting a money score of 2792, this crack lineup were not themselves. Otto Stein Jr., all-events champion in 1929, totaled only 505 in his three games.

Pete Spencer was high with a 593 mark, followed by Ben Cohen, who came through with a 584 series. Lee Martin found the pocket for 524 and Jimmy Wilson 506.

The Verifine five of Milwaukee took the lead in the five-men event in tonight's session of the American Bowling Congress with a score of 3101.

Alexander & Son Team Wins State Bowling Tourney

The bowling team of Alexander & Son of St. Louis holds the five-man championship of the Missouri State Bowling Association.

The St. Louis team's score of 3024, rolled a week ago, withstood the assaults of crack out-of-town teams in the final team events last night at the Wellston Recreation parlors.

The Super Shell team of Kansas City, rolling on last night's second squad, took second place with a score of 2980.

With all five-man competition ended, the first five standing was as follows: Alexander & Son, 3024; Super Shell of Kansas City 2980; Beykirch Hatters of East St. Louis 2969; Wooster Lamberts, 2961.

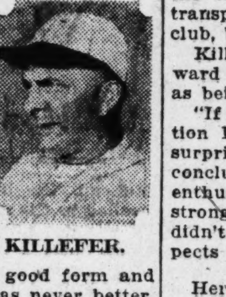
The tournament will be concluded today with doubles and singles play starting at 10 a. m.

Bill Killefer Visions Browns Much Stronger; Polli Becomes Regular

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., April 2.—Bill Killefer is bringing back to St. Louis from the Florida training camp as well conditioned a ball club as will emerge from the South this spring. When the advance squad arrived in Florida a month ago, it was difficult to foresee anything but a gloomy start for the 1932 Browns.

Nine players had not yet signed their contracts; four of the club's outstanding stars were in serious disagreement with the owner over salaries; third base, shortstop and right field presented the most distressing problems and the team had scheduled only two exhibition games with a team of major league class.



KILLEFER.

Today, all but one player are signed; perfect training conditions have brought the players around to where they are as fit physically as they were in May of last season. Levey's improvement has eliminated all doubt as to who will play shortstop; the pitchers, including at least one new twirler, have shown surprisingly good form and the team morale was never better. Third base is the only "open" position.

Manager Killifer admits that he is not wholly satisfied with the situation at third base, where Lin Storti and Jimmy McLaughlin have been alternating; he says he hopes to correct the condition before long—through a deal for a new player—and he thinks he has a far stronger ball club than he had last spring.

"To begin with," said Killefer when he was asked to name his probable starting lineup for 1932, the batting order he will use in the spring series with the Cardinals. "Ralph Kress will be in right field and he will be batting fourth. You can tell the fans that under no consideration will I stand for the transfer of Kress to another ball club. He's my right fielder.

"There's no use trying to disguise the fact that I'm not satisfied with the situation at third base. I have a plan for improving it, and we may have some news along this line within 10 days. I'm not in position now to divulge what our plans are but you may rest assured we are trying to improve the position."

"Rick Ferrell will bat under Kress. He was hitting in fifth position when my club was going well last season. That means that Levey will be dropped down just over the pitcher, with Storti above him and Melillo sixth."

"I think the outstanding work here has been turned in by Jack Burns and Levey. Burns has done especially well. Batting in the second position, he should do us a lot of good because he can pull the ball to right field, giving Schulte the best chance in the world to go from first to third on any kind of a single."

Killefer says Pitcher Louis Americo Polli is certain to be retained and he expects him to work his way into the regular starting staff. Cooney and Hebert are the other young pitchers, both of them having pitched for the Browns last season. The rest of the pitching staff will be composed of Coffman, Gray, Stewart, Blaeholder, Kimsey and Rip Collins—if he signs. It's not yet time to definitely decide upon which players shall be retained, but there is little chance that Pitchers Fred Vincent and Dick Florrid, or Catcher Herb Bryant will be with the club. They all have talent to a degree, but not one of them is sufficiently strong to dislodge any of the others.

In the absence of Kress, three men have been used in right field during the spring training period, but not one has come through so well that he could be considered a serious threat to the Redhead. They are Larry Bettencourt, Jack Kloza and Tom Jenkins. One of the three probably will be given transportation to a minor league club, but it's hard to say which.

Killefer's hopeful attitude toward his team's chances strike one as being thoroughly sincere.

"If I can only bolster one position I will have a club that may surprise the American League," concluded Bill. "The players are enthusiastic. We all believe we are stronger than last season and we didn't do so badly then. The prospects don't look a bit bad to me."

Here is the probable batting order of the Browns for their spring series games with the Cardinals.

Schulte, cf.; Burns, 1b.; Goslin, lf.; Kress, rf.; Ferrell, c.; Melillo, 2b.; Storti, 3b.; Levey, ss.; Coffman, Gray, Stewart, Blaeholder, p.

A month after the season opens, when the rosters will be trimmed to 23 men, the Browns probably will be as follows:

Outfielders—Goslin, Schulte, Kress, Bettencourt, Kloza or Jenkins.

Infielders—Burns, Melillo, Levey, Storti, McLaughlin and Grimes.

Cathers—Ferrell, Bengough and Young.

Pitchers — Gray, Coffman, Stewart, Blaeholder, Kimsey, Polli, Hebert, Cooney, Collins.

drew a big hand when he came to bat and coaxed a pass.

The Cardinals left tonight for Nashville where games will be played tomorrow and Monday. Derringer and Johnson will be the pitchers tomorrow.

Flint Rhem rejoined the club today, reporting that his mother in Rhems, S. C., is very ill.

Driving from Bradenton to St. Louis, Mrs. George Watkins banged into Mrs. "Pepper" Martin's car just south of Atlanta this morning. The two players' wives will be held up here until Tuesday, until the automobiles can be repaired. The accident was caused by the car in front of Mrs. Martin suddenly deciding to stop. She jammed on her brakes and Mrs. Watkins following slowly behind was unable to stop until she crashed into the Martin car. The Martin child, Arlene, was with her mother but none was injured.

C. B. C. DEDICATES FIELD, DEFEATS NORMANDY HIGH

Christian Brothers College's track team dedicated its new field yesterday afternoon by defeating Normandy High's team 102-51 in the eight events held. The high wind prevented the high jump, broad jump, javelin and pole vault from being held. These events will be run off Wednesday afternoon at C. B. C.

C. B. C. won eight of the nine firsts in the senior division and seven of the nine in the junior. Menke counted three firsts in the junior dash events and a third in the shot for a total of 16 points to be high scorer of the meet. Flynn led the seniors with two firsts and a second garnered in the shot, discus and high hurdles.

The time in the relays was considerably fastter than it truly was, inasmuch as the track is not quite a fourth-mile and each man ran but a half lap.

CHICAGO FIVE BEATS ST. LOUIS CHURCH CHAMPIONS, 40 TO 27

Falling before the fast-moving and accurate playing of the Irving Park Lutheran team of Chicago, the West Park Baptist quintet, champion of the local church leagues, lost the first game of a home-an-home series last night, 40-27, at the Downtown Y. M. C. A. The final game will be played next Saturday night at Chicago. In preliminary games, Fourth Baptist defeated Fourth Christian for the North Side division title, 42-21, and the Trojans defeated Federal Land Bank, 19-13.

The inter-city contest was hotly contested until the last minute of the opening half. At that time Clarence Johnson and Wes Schulz dropped a pair of setups to give Chicago a 19-12 lead when the gun sounded. Then, with smooth-working team play under the basket in the second period, the visitors found it easy to run up their score. Schulz of Chicago was high scorer of the game with 17 points.

GOLF PROS INSTITUTE SUNDAY EXHIBITIONS TODAY; GULDAHL IN FOURSOME AT COUNTRY CLUB

By W. J. McGoogan.

Bigger and better golf events for the St. Louis district will start this afternoon with the first of a series of Sunday afternoon exhibitions featuring the best players of St. Louis and vicinity.

Under the auspices of the Eastern Missouri Professional Golfers' Association, Ralph Guldahl, new professional at the St. Louis Country Club, and one of the outstanding tournament players of the country will team with Ben Richter, Triple A instructor and the best southpaw professional in the country, in an 18-hole match against Clarke Morse, Normandie, and Bill Schwartz of Meadowbrook (formerly Midland Valley) at the St. Louis Country Club, Price and Ladue roads.

The match is scheduled to start at 2 o'clock and there will be no admission charge.

It is the plan of the P. G. A. tournament committee to hold a series of Sunday afternoon exhibition programs in all of which Guldahl will take part, having a different opponent and a different partner each week. The foursomes will include all of the best amateur and professionals of the district.

Guldahl made a fine record during the winter tournaments, winning the Arizona Open and finishing in the money in several others. Morse and Schwartz are excellent golfers. Morse has been regarded as the outstanding player in the district and his friends predict that he will not surrender that position to Guldahl without a struggle.

Since Guldahl was signed by the Country Club, golfers here have been waiting for Morse and him to clash. Their contest should be well worth watching.

Golf at Kirkwood High.

A squad of more than 30 golfers have turned out for the Kirkwood High School team and are striving for 16 positions on the "varsity." The "regulars" are to be picked on a basis of the best average turned in for six practice rounds over the Osage Country Club, which has given the use of its course.

Two rounds have already been played and some of the boys are showing up well. Frank Bredell, who won the High School championship last season, is a Kirkwood student and for his first two practice rounds he has scored 86 and 77. Ray Green, a caddie at Osage, had 88 and 80 for his two rounds, while Jack Berkley had an 89 and an 87. Tony Klebusch, another promising member of the squad, shot a fine 82 for his second round after taking 92 for his initial trip.

The boys are to play at Osage on Monday and Friday afternoons until the six rounds are completed after which the team will start a schedule of home and home matches with other high schools in the city and county. Osage will be used as the home course by Kirkwood and it is over the Osage links also that the junior tournament will be played this season.

The boys who have turned in two scores thus far are: Ray Green, 88-80; Ed Reilly, 95-86; Robert Meyer, 90-84; Everett Brown, 110-92; Irvin Beno, 95-89; Tony Klebusch, 92-82; Hon Hannaker, 95-98; Frank Bredell, 77-86; Jack Berkley, 89-87; Ralph J'rey, 93-103; J. Radcliffe, 97-104.

Two Tournaments Next Week.

The first two competitive tournaments of the season are scheduled to be held next week; the professional-amateur event under the auspices of the professionals is to be held at the St. Louis Country Club Monday, April 11, while the first of seven monthly handicap tournaments under the auspices of the St. Louis District Golf Association is set for the Country Club Friday, April 15.

These tournaments have an entry fee of $3 each, $1 of which goes to the club holding the event as a greens fee.

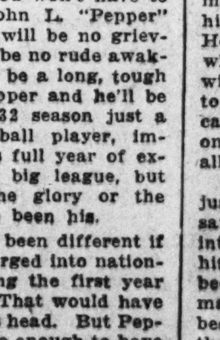
ATLANTA, Ga., April 2.

Wild Horse Sense.

"IS it going to be a long, tough summer for that boy Martin?" Almost every touring correspondent who has visited the camp of the world champion Cardinals asked that question in one form or another about the muscular Pepper Martin, hero of the world series.



MARTIN.

They all seem to assume that the world expects Martin to bat .500, steal a couple of hundred bases and rewrite the baseball record book, all because in the seven-game world series he crowded a dozen hits, all highly important, into five ball games. They seem to assume, also that Martin is overcome by his own importance and that he will grieve profoundly when he begins to realize that he can't hit a couple of homers a day, and a couple of singles, just to pave the way for the daily pair of stolen bases.

Well, folks, you won't have to worry about John L. "Pepper" Martin. There will be no grieving. There will be no rude awakening. It won't be a long, tough summer for Pepper and he'll be through the 1932 season just a good hustling ball player, improved after his full year of experience in the big league, but unspoiled by the glory or the spoils that have been his.

It might have been different if Pepper had splurged into nationwide fame during the first year in the majors. That would have turned anybody's head. But Pepper was fortunate enough to have a long, tough pull to the big league. He came up and tasted big league groceries and stopped at the big league hotels, and he had to go back to the minors. It took him four years to arrive and in those four years he realized the difficulties. He saw how hard it was to make the grade. And he was a sober, wise, ambitious young man when he finally did get his big chance, and was able to make the Cardinals gamble on his ability to the extent of sending the brilliant Taylor Douthit to Cincinnati.

A Profitable Splurge.

MARTIN profited handsomely by his world series exploits. He cashed in to the extent of $16,000 or $17,000 by virtue of the Redbirds' success and his own glamorous deeds. But he profited even further. He took a fling at the theater. He was forced to attend banquets in his honor. He learned to make a very acceptable speech. He gained poise, stage presence, self-confidence. Instead of permitting his success to go to his head he seized the opportunity and improved himself, financially and in other ways.

Here is the way Martin looks at the world series and at the new campaign:

"A ball player has a batting average of say .300. That means that he gets three hits out of every 10 times at bat. Now he may go along close to that ratio for weeks at a time. Then he may go on a spurt and get seven straight hits. Or he may go into a slump or face especially good pitching or have bad luck and go 20 times without a hit. But a man who is a .300 hitter will get his three hits out of every 10. He doesn't have to start crying when he goes a couple of days without a hit and he doesn't have to think he's a .750 batter because he gets three out of four on each of three straight days. It all evens up.

"Well, in the world series I just happened to be getting them safe for five games. I crowded into a few important games the hits that very easily could have been stretched over twice as many games, and if they had been, I wouldn't have made all that extra money. Well, that was pretty lucky for me, and wouldn't I be dumb if I let myself get swell-heated over that.

"I haven't changed. I have confidence in myself and I'll play this year just the way I did last. I don't expect to burn up the league or break any records of any kind. But I'll be in there giving my best and you can bet your life that I won't let myself be any less valuable just because I happened to have a little extra luck in that world series."

They'll See Him Now.

NOW you have to string along with a man as sensible as that and you don't have to worry about him. He'll get along.

It is true that all eyes will be on Martin. Spectators at spring exhibition games have asked that he be pointed out and they have watched him eagerly. They have cheered him and there have been a few razzberries of disappointment when he has not hit safely. But he has made his share of hits and he has fielded brilliantly.

That is one thing the world series splurge will do for Pepper. Customers and the experts will be watching him more closely and they will see his great fielding. Last year he was a great fielder but he didn't get much credit for it, outside of St. Louis. But this year, when he makes a great catch in New York, or Boston, or Chicago, the customers won't miss it and Pepper will be recognized as one of the great fly chasers of baseball history.

Incidentally he is still cashing in on his world series exploits. Moving pictures were taken of his batting, running and fielding during the stay here. Slow motion films will show the movie fans how Martin's muscles work while he is batting and how the muscles in his legs flex as he stars from the plate. The pictures were taken with arms and legs bare, to show the power of the bulging-muscled athlete.

And Pepper will get a percentage of what the films bring in at the box office. Sam Breadon, before advising Pepper to sign, was told that the pictures probably would net the player about $10,000.

WYKOFF DEFEATS KIESEL BY INCHES IN 100-YARD DASH

By the Associated Press.

BERKELEY, Cal., April 2.—Southern California's Trojans sent California's Bears down to an overwhelming 102 1-3 to 28 2-3 defeat here today in a track and field meet that lost much of its glamor through the last minute withdrawal of Frank Wykoff, Trojan sprint ace, from the 220-yard dash.

Ten thousand fans assembled for the dedication of California's new quarter-million dollar stadium, were here mainly to witness the expected duel between Wykoff and Bob Kiesel, sophomore dash star of the Bears.

Wykoff, whose time of 9.4 seconds is up for recognition as a world's 100-yard dash record, edged out his young rival in the century.

Inches separated Wykoff and Kiesel at the finish of the hundred. The time of 9.8 seconds was not bad under existing conditions.

In the 220, however, observers had given Kiesel a good chance to breast the tape first. Just before the field lined up for the dash, it was announced Wykoff would not run because of an injured hip and foot.

Kiesel won the race without apparent effort in 21.3, good time considering the track, softened by early morning rain. The stocky Californian, running his first outdoor furlong under competition, outraced two Trojans to lead by six feet at the finish.

single, a triple and a home run in four times at bat.

The Beaumont nine entertained some vain hope that it would win, an idea which was substantiated with one run in the second and another in the third. The North Siders should have given up when Roosevelt made the count 13 to 2 in the fourth, but they persisted in running the bases, with the result that one more was added in the fifth and four in the sixth.

Central Gets 18 in Five.

Central took the field intending to equal the Roosevelt exhibition and the mid-city nine might have surpassed the Rough Riders' efforts if the game had gone the route. As it was, Central scored seven times in the opening round and added three more in each of the second and third innings. Pete Chulick, who started on the hill for McKinley, lasted about as long as snow in July.

Three of the Central team had batted for the second time in the first inning, when Everett Moss was sent in as relief thrower. He accomplished little more than his predecessor, retiring in two and two-thirds innings, after permitting nine hits and 11 runs. Luke Pursley, the third hurler, escaped as the best of the three, because it was growing late and the Central batsman had received orders to hurry up the game by striking out. Thus Pursley had three strike-outs to his credit in the short time he pitched.

The one who bothered the McKinley hurlers most was big Ed Dueker, who had two home runs, a single and a walk in four times he swung. Three of the other 10 hits were made by Leo Biasi, one of them being a triple. George Hasser singled and doubled to pace the McKinley sluggers.

Three of the Central team had batted for the second time in the first inning, when Everett Moss was sent in as relief thrower. He accomplished little more than his predecessor, retiring in two and two-thirds innings, after permitting nine hits and 11 runs. Luke Pursley, the third hurler, escaped as the best of the three, because it was growing late and the Central batsman had received orders to hurry up the game by striking out. Thus Pursley had three strike-outs to his credit in the short time he pitched.

The one who bothered the McKinley hurlers most was big Ed Dueker, who had two home runs, a single and a walk in four times he swung. Three of the other 10 hits were made by Leo Biasi, one of them being a triple. George Hasser singled and doubled to pace the McKinley sluggers.

your life that I won't let myself be any less valuable just because I happened to have a little extra luck in that world series."

They'll See Him Now.

NOW you have to string along with a man as sensible as that and you don't have to worry about him. He'll get along.

It is true that all eyes will be on Martin. Spectators at spring exhibition games have asked that he be pointed out and they have watched him eagerly. They have cheered him and there have been a few razzberries of disappointment when he has not hit safely. But he has made his share of hits and he has fielded brilliantly.

That is one thing the world series splurge will do for Pepper. Customers and the experts will be watching him more closely and they will see his great fielding. Last year he was a great fielder but he didn't get much credit for it, outside of St. Louis. But this year, when he makes a great catch in New York, or Boston, or Chicago, the customers won't miss it and Pepper will be recognized as one of the great fly chasers of baseball history.

Incidentally he is still cashing in on his world series exploits. Moving pictures were taken of his batting, running and fielding during the stay here. Slow motion films will show the movie fans how Martin's muscles work while he is batting and how the muscles in his legs flex as he stars from the plate. The pictures were taken with arms and legs bare, to show the power of the bulging-muscled athlete.

And Pepper will get a percentage of what the films bring in at the box office. Sam Breadon, before advising Pepper to sign, was told that the pictures probably would net the player about $10,000.

SPORT SALAD

Prosperity Begins at Home.

WILLIE, Willie, shame on you,
Hoarding dough the way you do!
I can hear the pennies clank
In your little savings bank.

You have 30 cents, I know:
That is too much hoarded dough.
Help your sadly harassed nation,
Put that jack in circulation!

Uncle Sam is in distress,
Can't you hear his S. O. S.?
Loosen up and blow it in,
Saving money is a sin.

Every little boy and girl
Could make the wheels of commerce whirl.
Shake that money from your banks,
Blow it in for candy. Thanks!

once more bring down big game. Primo's weakness is a right-hand body punch. King Levinsky, in the closing rounds of their bout at Chicago, had Carnera pulling away from him without being able to avoid this punch. If Dempsey lands he has the power to cripple Carnera with a blow or two, such as no other fighter that the giant has ever opposed.

Even granting that the Dempsey of July 4 will be far below the Dempsey of 1919, there is not the slightest doubt that he's still poison for any one he can hit.

And Carnera will get hit, if he faces Jack.

Obsolete.

WHEN John Patrick Nicholson, probably the greatest all-round athlete St. Louis ever produced, invented his "starting block" for sprinters, he thought he saw a pot of gold at the end of his rainbow. At the time, all of Nicholson's track squad (he coaches at Notre Dame) were using the Nicholson invention. Noted sprinters like George Simpson, Frank Wykoff, Paddock and others were making records from the starting block.

But two years ago the Amateur Athletic Union put a ban on this convenient getaway and forced sprinters back to the old plan of digging holes from which to leave the mark.

That punctured Nicholson's bubble. For him prosperity is still around the corner. The only body that permits the use of starting blocks is the National Collegiate Association. Because they are barred in championship and Olympic meets, athletes have virtually abandoned the use of them.

It was an unkind trick Lady Luck played Nicholson, because, subsequent events have proved, it was the added speed gained from the starting blocks that caused the unusual series of record-breaking races at the time the starting blocks appeared. As a matter of fact, the splendid sprinting performances and even the making of other records was continued, despite the abandonment of starting blocks. Only recently Ben Eastman shattered a record that athletic observers thought would stand for a long time—Ted Meredith's mark for the 440. Eastman clipped a full second off the record.

Leading sprinters of the country are still equaling or bettering the times made under starting block conditions.

All of which proves what Nicholson contended—that the starting apparatus did not enhance the speed of the runners, but was merely a convenience to the runner. The custom of digging of holes with spikes is primitive. In indoor events it is not possible and the starting blocks are almost essential on the boards.

Despite their absence from the Olympic events, there will be no falling off in the performances there, from a time standpoint. If the sprinters fail to equal or surpass the records of previous meets, it will not be due to any embargo on starting blocks.

'Mechanical Devices Numerous'

THE argument against the starting blocks was that it was a mechanical aid. Nevertheless, "mechanical aids" or improvements have figured in other branches of track or field sports and the improved performances can be directly traced to their aid.

Even in ancient days they resorted to artificial aids. The javelin throwers used spear-casting devices, some of string, some made of wood, to get added distance. Jumpers used weights and the boxers used a variety of cestus, instead of bare knuckles.

The modern pole vaulter has added many feet to his altitude by the adoption of the bamboo pole. In early days the hammer thrower did his stuff with a hammer having a rigid wooden handle, whereas the hammers used today have flexible handles made of wire, with a double hand grip.

Once the hammer throw, the shotput and the discus throw were all made from a circle whitewashed on the ground. Today a wooden ring encloses the throwing space and it serves both to keep the athlete from stepping over into foul territory and to add distance to his cast.

The modern hurdle, with its swinging top, greatly adds to the confidence and naturally to the speed of the runners.

There is more reason for barring some of the "mechanical aids" mentioned above than for putting the ban on "starting blocks."

Perhaps some day John Patrick Nicholson will see his dream come true and his invention restored to good standing.

More "Doubles."

TAKING a hint from the "daily double" of race track fame, Commissioner Tom Kearney has started a new wrinkle in his "future book double."

Some of the tid-bits at which the speculative-minded are asked to nibble are as follows:

20 to 1 that Top Flight does not win both the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness Stakes.

20 to 1 that Tick On does not win the same two events.

25 to 1 that Top Flight does not win the Kentucky Derby and Tick On the Preakness.

30 to 1 Tick On does not win the Kentucky Derby and Top Flight the Preakness.

50 to 1 Burning Blaze does not win both the Derby and the Preakness.

Only twice in history has one horse won the "double event." Sir Barton, a "maiden," won the Derby and later the Preakness. Gallant Fox won the Preakness first and then the Derby. This year the Derby comes first.

ONE of the betting angles to the future book business that is puzzling the amateurs is why Top Flight is 6 to 1 to win the Derby and 4 to 1 to win the Preakness; another concerns the odds against Tick On, which is 8 to 1 to win the Derby and 4 to 1, equal favorite with Top Flight, for the Preakness.

As the Preakness is run one week AFTER the Derby, the natural thought is that the Kentucky, rather than the Pimlico classic, would be quoted at shorter odds.

The explanation is that the Preakness will be held in the East, where the two leading candidates for both three-year-oold stakes are now being trained. It is considered more probable that both will start in the Preakness than in the Derby.

The reason for making Top Flight favorite over Tick On in the Kentucky event, and only equal choice with Tick On in the Preakness is that there is a stronger chance that Tick On will go in the Maryland race than that Top Flight will. It is considered almost certain that the filly will try to equal the feat of Regret—the only filly to win the Derby.

MUNY ELEVENS PLAY IN BENEFIT MATCHES, TODAY

Two games between clubs of the Municipal Soccer League will be played at Fairground No. 2 this afternoon, starting at 1 o'clock, for the benefit of the Soccer Players' Protective Association, which during the campaign took out insurance on 609 athletes. An admission of 25 cents will be charged, with all the receipts going to the association.

In the first match, the Spanish Sport Club, regarded as one of the finest passing elevens in the Municipal organization, will play the St. Ambrose club of Forest Park, a team made up of Italian stars. The Clearys, beaten by the Macks for the city championship, tackle the Russells, runnersup for the Fairground No. 2 title, in the closing contest. The Clearys and Russells are made up almost entirely of young players, who are just coming into their own in the sport. Some good soccer should be exhibited in each contest.

Willie Brady and John Cradock will referee in the first game, assisted by Harry Donovan and L. Robbins as linesmen. Nick Reidy and Dick Wall have been selected to referee the closing contest, aided by Cliff Brady and D. Barnard. All the officials have donated their services.

During the campaign, which is now drawing to a close a total of 89 of the 609 players received injuries. The claims of 46 have been paid in full, 20 are nearing completion, while 23 are being handled by the board of governors.

COACH WALSH DIRECTS SQUAD IN SCRIMMAGE

Coach Charles (Chile) Walsh, director-in-chief of St. Louis University's football activities, got his first thorough glance into the prospects for his 1932 Billiken eleven yesterday afternoon. When spring practice started several weeks ago, Walsh trotted 90 aspirants for next fall's squad onto the practice field at Walsh Stadium for the first scrimmage of the season.

Flashes of the combination that won the State gridiron championship for the Billikens last season were seen yesterday as Coach Walsh inserted players from last year's freshmen and varsity ranks into opposing lineups. Veterans worked side by side with yearling gridders. The St. Louis mentor and his assistants directed them through a scrimmage session that lasted three and a half hours.

The Lineups in Practice.

Two elevens from among last season's freshmen were chosen by Walsh to open scrimmaging. One combination included Rollin and Strugar, ends; Conlin and Dick Bockrath, tackles; Matavino and Keith, guards, and Martin, center. Halfbacks for this group were Butch Rapp and Kane, while Keleske was fullback and O'Keefe, quarter. For nearly a half hour this eleven worked against another picked group. In the other eleven were Ayres and O'Connor, ends; Morell and Sandweg, tackles; Marr and Harsch, guards; Neal, center; Lawler and Hurley, halfbacks; Weil, bullback, and Kaveny, quarter.

One of last season's crack combinations was then put on the field. This group showed Taylor and McGowan at ends; Philpot and captain-elect O'Brien, tackles; Black and Montgomery, guards; McLeod, center; McCoole and La Presta, halves; Arenz, fullback, and Thompson, quarter.

The Billikens have the largest spring squad in the university's history in training this season. And each candidate was given his opportunity yesterday. After the above-named elevens were placed on the field, Coaches Walsh and Maxwell made substitutions at reglar intervals. Gradually, teams of equal strength will be picked by the coaches to play in a squad elimination, with the championship game early in May closing the spring training.

Football Relay Team.

Training for the football relay event of the Drake Relays, in which St. Louis University will have a team, will begin this week. Coach Walsh has several crack runners among his many backfield candidates, namely Manuel Rapp, Bob McCoole, Carl Pike, Lee Savage, Joe Stephan and Ben La Presta, while Roy Taylor, an end, is perhaps the fastest man on the squad, according to Walsh.

Mack Eleven Plays Kansas City Team In Contest, Today

THE Macks, champions of the Municipal Soccer League, will play the All-Stars of the Kansas City circuit in the second game of the intercity series at Kansas City this afternoon. In the first match of the set, played here last Sunday, the St. Louisans gained a 3 to 1 victory.

John Scully, who will be in charge of the Macks, expects to start his regular lineup in the contest with the Kansas City club.

FIFTH INDOOR TENNIS TITLE WON BY WRAY BROWN

By Davison Obear.

Wray Brown won his fifth St. Louis district indoor tennis title last night, when he defeated Joyce Portnoy in the final singles match of the tournament at the Washington U. Field House, in straight sets. The scores were 6—3, 6—3, 7—5. Brown was defending champion.

With the score 2-all, there were two breaks in service. Brown took the seventh game on cross-court shots to lead at 4—3, then again broke through Portnoy's service to make it 5—3. Portnoy was erratic in the next game and Brown took the set, 6—3.

Each won his service at the start of the second set, then Brown began to play more to Portnoy's backhand and won the next two games, which gave the champion a lead of 3—1. They alternated in winning on service, which gave Brown a lead of 4—2. Then Portnoy won his service but Brown played to Portnoy's backhand some more and won the eighth game for a 5—3 lead. Brown then broke Portnoy's service to win the set 6—3. Two points were made by Brown in short volleys at the net.

The service went to 3-all in the third set, Portnoy making a more determined effort and making more points at the net. On service it went to 4-all. Brown was steadier, and took the next game to lead 5—4. In the tenth game Brown had the match point twice, but Portnoy was steadier and took the game. Brown on service and net play took the lead at 6—5, and then broke through Portnoy to win the next game and the set, 7—5.

Brown, with Teddy Eggmann, retained their indoor doubles championship by defeating Sidney Smith and Herbert Weinstock in the final, 8—6, 6—1, 6—3.

SRENCO AND ZANDER ENTER HANDBALL FINAL

Class B semifinal results: W. Weisman defeated E. Wirfs, 10-21, 21-10, 21-15, and R. Connelly eliminated J. S. Whitmore, 19-21, 21-9, 21-11.

The teams of Wolff and I. N. Kessler entered the doubles final, defeating Srenco and Lehr, 15-21, 21-16, 21-12. The other semifinal is still to be played.

ST. LOUIS ELEVEN STRONGER FOR REPLAY OF TITLE CONTEST

Soccer is a serious proposition with those Easterners. The workouts are in the form of regular matches, with work on combination play, goal shooting and other forms of practice which better the team's play.

"Your St. Louis boys surprised us a week ago, but we will know what to watch for in the second game," declared McNab, "and all the players are confident that it will be a far different story when the replay is completed. If we are beaten, however, we will have to admit that it was a fine eleven, one that played a fine, clean game."

There is no chance that there will be a change in the New Bedford battle front, since the club came here with but 11 players. Billy Watson, the made-over halfback will again be in goal. He's had quite a bit of practice at the position during the week and expects to do a better job of guarding than he did a week ago.

That was the only weak spot on the club a week ago. Every fan who witnessed the 3-3 draw is ready to admit that New Bedford has as good a passing combination as has been seen in this city in many years. They make raids on the goal starting from the half line, never losing possession of the ball.

Nilsen, center forward, reported ill during the week, has recovered.

Jimmy MacFarlane of Cleveland will again referee. The admission will be $1 for men and 50 cents for women and children.

NEW YORK A. C. SWIMMERS SET NEW WORLD MARK

NEW HAVEN, Conn., April 2.—A crack trio of swimmers from the New York Athletic Club posted a new world's mark, its second of the day, to win the 300-yard medley relay race tonight in the National Senior A. A. U. championships.

The team of Leonard and Walter Spence, brothers, and George Kojac clipped a full second off its own world's mark of 3 minutes 2 1-5 seconds, set in the preliminaries a few hours earlier.

Clarence (Buster) Crabbe, Los Angeles A. C., mainstay, became the official individual champion of the four-day meet held in the Yale pool by adding the 500-yard free style title to two championships annexed earlier. Largely through his efforts the West Coast club carried away team honors with 45 points.

The titles in tonight's other two events also changed hands. The New York club, which placed second for team honors with 37 points, took the 300-yard medley relay crown from the Lake Shore A. C. of Chicago.

Seven new titleholders were created during the meeting, while four champions successfully defended their crowns.

In winning team honors, the Los Angeles A. C. took six championships, with four going to the New York A. C.

WHITE SOX TO TRAIN AT PASADENA IN 1933

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 2.—The Chicago White Sox will train at Pasadena, Cal., next year, President J. Louis Comiskey announced today.

DRASTIC RULE CHANGE TO SPEED UP BASKETBALL

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 2.—Stalling in basketball was stalled today.

The National Association of Basketball Coaches, after a three days' discussion of means and ways of speeding up the game, adopted a drastic rule whereby any team in possession of the ball in the back court must cross the center of the playing floor toward its target within 10 seconds.

Under the rule, pronounced by Dr. Forrest "Phog" Allen of the University of Kansas as the most revolutionary change in the game since the dribble law in 1906, a line would be drawn through the center of the floor; thus if team A gets a tip-off in its back court it must advance the ball past the center of the line within 10 seconds after it gets possession of the ball.

The penalty for violating the rule is loss of the ball at the nearest sideline. The referee would call the violation, assisted by the timekeeper.

While the rule, suggested by Coach Harold Olsen of Ohio State University, who was later named president of the association, must be approved by the association's Rules Committee, there was no doubt but what it would be adopted. It was the unanimous opinion of the scores of coaches at today's meeting that something radical was necessary to halt stalling and speed up the game.

MISS MORRILL GAINS INDOOR TENNIS CROWN

BROOKLINE, Mass., April 2.—National tennis championships came in bunches today for Marjorie Morrill of Dedham, Mass., the nation's sixth ranking woman player. She registered a "grand slam" in the three finals of the women's indoor title play at the Longwood covered courts.

She gained the national indoor singles championship by dethroning Marjorie Sachs of Cambridge, defending champion, in the final, in an overtime match, 3—6, 6—2, 6—2.

Then she teamed with Mrs. John Van Ryn of Philadelphia, who ranks eighth nationally, to turn back Mrs. George W. Wightman and Sarah Palfry, the Brookline players who had held the national indoor doubles crowns for four years, by scores of 6—3, 6—0.

Miss Morrill, after a brief rest, returned to the court with Dr. G. Colket Caner of Brookline as her partner and gained the national mixed doubles titles by defeating Mrs. Van Ryn and Thomas A. Jansen of Winchester, 10—8, 6—2.

The Dedham girl's "grand slam" is the second in the history of women's indoor tennis. Mrs. Wightman had similar success in 1927.

AIR PILOT, DERBY CANDIDATE, WINS FIRST 1932 START, AT BOWIE

W. J. SALMON COLT SETS TRACK MARK FOR 5 FURLONGS; VICTOR PAYS $20

By the Associated Press.

BOWIE, Md., April 2.—Air Pilot, Walter J. Salmon's Preakness and Kentucky Derby candidate, made his 1932 debut here this afternoon and scored an impressive victory over a smart lot of three-year-olds in the Capitol Purse at five furlongs.

Although the racing strip had dried out for this event, it still was not in its best condition and despite this fact, the son of Swift and Sure established a new track record of 1.01. This time clipped a fifth of a second off the old mark.

Air Pilot, under 110 pounds, beat William Ziegler's Jr.'s Phantom Legion by three-quarters of a length and paid $20.90 for $2 S. W. Labrot's Mexico was a length farther back, in third position. Willie Nertney, the jockey who was injured in a fall in Maryland last fall, rode Indicative into fourth place.

Indian Runner, which ran second to Top Flight in the Saratoga Special in his last start as a two-year-old, drew the heaviest play but the gelding got pinched back right at the start and never could get to the leaders thereafter.

The race was bitterly contested all the way. Regula Baddun, possessed of great early foot, rushed into early command but could not shake off Mexico and Phantom Legion.

Air Plot was in the middle of the pack. Alfred Robertson started his drive turning for home and Air Pilot responded nobly, gradually wearing down the leaders. Once in front, the colt continued gamely under strong handling.

Regula Baddun stopped badly but Phantom Legion and Mexico stuck to their tasks. Indicative made up ground fast the last quarter mile. Air Pilot ran in the interests of Mereworth Stud, which is the name of Salmon's Kentucky farm.

Deglane, Title Claimant Wrestling Here Tuesday, Termed "Steam Engine"

By Damon Kerby.

DEGLANE.

Deglane, a squatty Frenchman weighing more than 220 pounds, is making his first appearance in St. Louis in the coming show, and an opportunity to look him over has been afforded wrestling followers in his workouts at Tommy Sullivan's Future City A. C.

Standing only 5 feet 10 inches, most of Deglane's weight appears to be in a tremendous pair of shoulders, and unless appearances are deceiving, his physique is an unusual powerhouse of strength. Virtually none of his weight appears to be superfluous.

A Biting Bout.

Deglane, as is known, claims the heavyweight title in direct line from Frank Gotch. His claim is based on a victory over Ed "Strangler" Lewis last May in Montreal, Lewis then being recognized as champion in some circles. The victory was awarded Deglane when he pointed to marks of a bite on his arm and charged Lewis had bitten him. The referee upheld the contention, even though Lewis counter-charged that Deglane bit himself.

Be that as it may, Deglane said he was confined to a hospital for 11 days as the result of infection from the bite.

Deglane's memory is excellent regarding the biting episode, but it fades slightly at times when he is questioned regarding some of his matches. For instance, he was asked how many times he had wrestled Malcewicz.

"I don't know; I never keep track of my matches," he said. (The records show that he has defeated Malcewicz four times since he won by forfeit over Lewis.)

"How do you keep a record, then, for your income tax returns?" he was asked. Dan Koloff, another wrestler of Deglane's group, who was present, entered the discussion:

"We don't keep our financial records. That's all handled at an office in Boston."

"Then you fellows are working for an office in Boston?"

"No we're strictly independent," replied Deglane. "When I work for Promoter Berger in St. Louis everything is between Berger and myself."

Deglane did recall that he had had three matches with Lewis prior to the disputed event: in Kansas City, a one-hour draw; in Montreal, a two-hour draw, and in Los Angeles, Lewis winning. He also remembered having met Gus Sonnenberg in the ring.

A Sonnenberg Scar.

"See that scar under my chin?" he asked, pointing to a slight ridge. "That's where Gus butted me with his head. I woke up three hours later in a hospital."

Deglane's record, since winning title claims, is dotted with matches in which he lost one fall in two-out-of-three fall events.

"A wrestler becomes careless, sometimes, in two-out-of-three fall matches," he explained, "and when you get careless your opponent is likely to cut you down."

The young Frenchman—he is 29 and unmarried—wrestled extensively as an amateur in Europe before coming to America. An enlarged ear discloses his calling.

Malcewicz, in previous bouts in St. Louis this season, wrestled to a 30-minute draw with Nick Lutze, defeated him in a return event, and also won from Pat McGill and Karl Pojello. Malcewicz last week lost to Ed Don George in Buffalo, N. Y. Two nights after his appearance here Deglane is scheduled to take on George in a title match at Boston.

When Bull Martin, the George Zaharias of the Bowser troupe, was disqualified and suspended for his actions in a Baltimore bout on Friday night, his match with Dan Koloff on Tuesday night's card took on added importance in the eyes of Promoter Berger and the bout was moved up to the semifinal spot. It will be to a finish.

Karl Pojello and Karol Zbyszko, originally scheduled for a finish event in the semifinal, will go only 30 minutes. Other 30-minute bouts on the card are: Jim Browning vs. Charles Leahman, and Ohmar Mahmont vs. Billy Keith.

Ted Tonneman of Chicago, who referees on Bowser wrestling cards occasionally in midwestern cities, will handle the Deglane-Malcewicz event.

In the upper bracket, Allison, former national intercollegiate champion and seeded No. 3 in the tournament, had comparatively little trouble in defeating Jimmy Quick of Dallas, 6—3, 6—1, 5—7, 6—2.

The final will be played tomorrow.

Vines and Lott advanced to the doubles finals late today by defeating Karl Kamrath of Texas University and Frankie Parker of New Orleans, 6—2, 10—8, 4—6, 6—3.

Vines and Lott tomorrow will meet Hall and Allison in the finals. Hall and Allison defeated "Red" Thalheimer and Jimmy Quick of Dallas, 6—0, 6—1, 9—7.

Lester Bell Sold by the Cubs To Louisville

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, April 2.

THE Chicago Cubs today sold Lester Bell, veteran third baseman, to Louisville of the American Association, and sent Pitcher Johnny Welch to the same club on option.

Bell, who was a member of the 1926 world champion St. Louis Cardinals, was purchased by the Cubs from the Boston Braves for the 1930 season. Rated as a strong batsman, Bell was counted upon to plug the Cubs' ancient weak spot, but something went wrong with his throwing arm, and he failed to fulfill expectations.

The sale of Bell indicates that Manager Rogers Hornsby, who urged the purchase of the veteran, is thoroughly sold on young Stanley Hack.

Kittenball at St. Louis U.

Kittenball has been added to the St. Louis University spring intramural card, and several entries have been received to the leagues being formed, according to Walter C. Eberhardt, director of physical education. Classes, colleges, departments or independent groups will compete in a schedule which goes into effect after April 16, when entries close.

"I feel miserable!"

"Well, you do look a bit run down, Helen. Were you out late last night?"

"No-o-o... that's not it. I've been this way for days. Dull headache... no appetite at all... and just look at my color... isn't it awful?"

"I'll bet you've got ASTHENIA ...at least it sounds that way to me.

"One of the girls in the auditing department was troubled the same as you are and she cleared it up in a few days with Pluto Water...

"Said her brother told her about the ten-day treatment they give at French Lick Springs. She took a fifth of a glass of Pluto Water in a glass of hot water every morning for ten days, then kept it up every Sunday morning.

"It's months since she's had even the sign of a headache... and she's on the go all the time. Never saw such a change in a girl in my life. Fact is, while I wouldn't say she is really pretty, her skin is as clear as a baby's, and her eyes have a sparkle that fairly melts you.

"Why don't you try Pluto for ten days? Believe I'll start myself in the morning... come on, let's each of us get a bottle tonight."

And How the Chimp Proved Itself More Ingenious Than an Orang-Utan in Procuring a Bunch of Cherries, That Had Been Placed Out of Reach, in a Series of Remarkable Experiments at Suchum in the Caucasus.

By a Member of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Staff

HUMAN problems are not the only ones which Soviet Russia is trying to solve these busy days. At Suchum, on the Black Sea, the government has established an ape park, and there it is endeavoring to learn the phychological secrets of the beasts which are closest to man in the evolutionary scale.

The park is enclosed by a high wall. Except for this barrier to freedom, the animals are allowed to live in their natural state. This place in the Caucasus is sub-tropical, which tends to make their environment familiar—another point contributing to naturalness of behavior. No attempt is made to train the apes or impose any human culture upon them. The scientists at the park merely study them, observing their growth in body and mind and the way they act in a variety of situations. Some of these situations are specially created by the observers as psychological tests, but the subjects' reactions are dictated only by their simian brains, without prompting from human beings. Out of this research may come a clear conception of ape mentality—conclusive evidence as to the possibilities and limitations of the man-like animals' power of thought.

A recent test is illustrated on this page. A bunch of cherries was hung up, well out of reach of the animals to be tested. But close at hand were placed a table, two wooden stands and several bamboo poles. The question was, would an ape be able to figure out a way of using any of these articles to help him get the cherries.

The experiment was conducted, at different times, with an orang-utan and with a chimpanzee. And both got the cherries, but each went about it in a different way.

The orang-utan, when he found he couldn't reach the cherries by stretching his arm upward, took up one of the bamboo poles to see what he could do with its help. But he soon found he couldn't manage the pole well enough to use it effectively, so he dropped it. Then he put one stand on top of the other and stood on them.

STILL he couldn't reach the prize hanging so tantalizingly above him. Seeing that the table was higher than a stand, the orang-utan dragged it into position and climbed on it to stretch an arm upward again. But he wasn't high enough yet. Finally, he conceived the idea of putting one of the stands on the table, and that solved the problem; standing on top of this structure he triumphantly seized the cherries.

When the chimpanzee saw the fruit hanging above him, he set about the business of getting it much as did the orang-utan. He first found he couldn't reach the cherries standing on the ground, then took up one of the poles. But the pole was too short. He tried to overcome that by putting two together—without success, until he noticed that the poles were hollow at the end. After solemn

TAMING OLD MAN RIVER with ROLLER DAMS

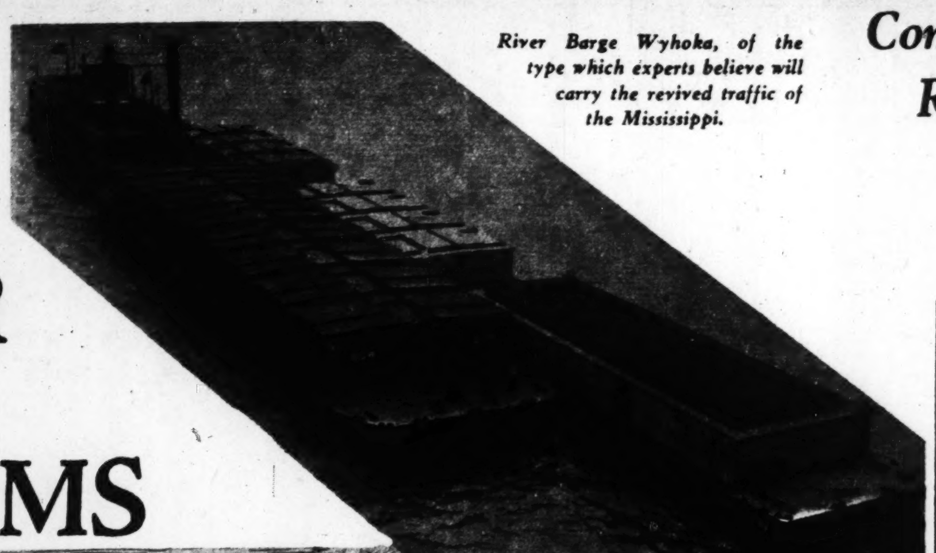
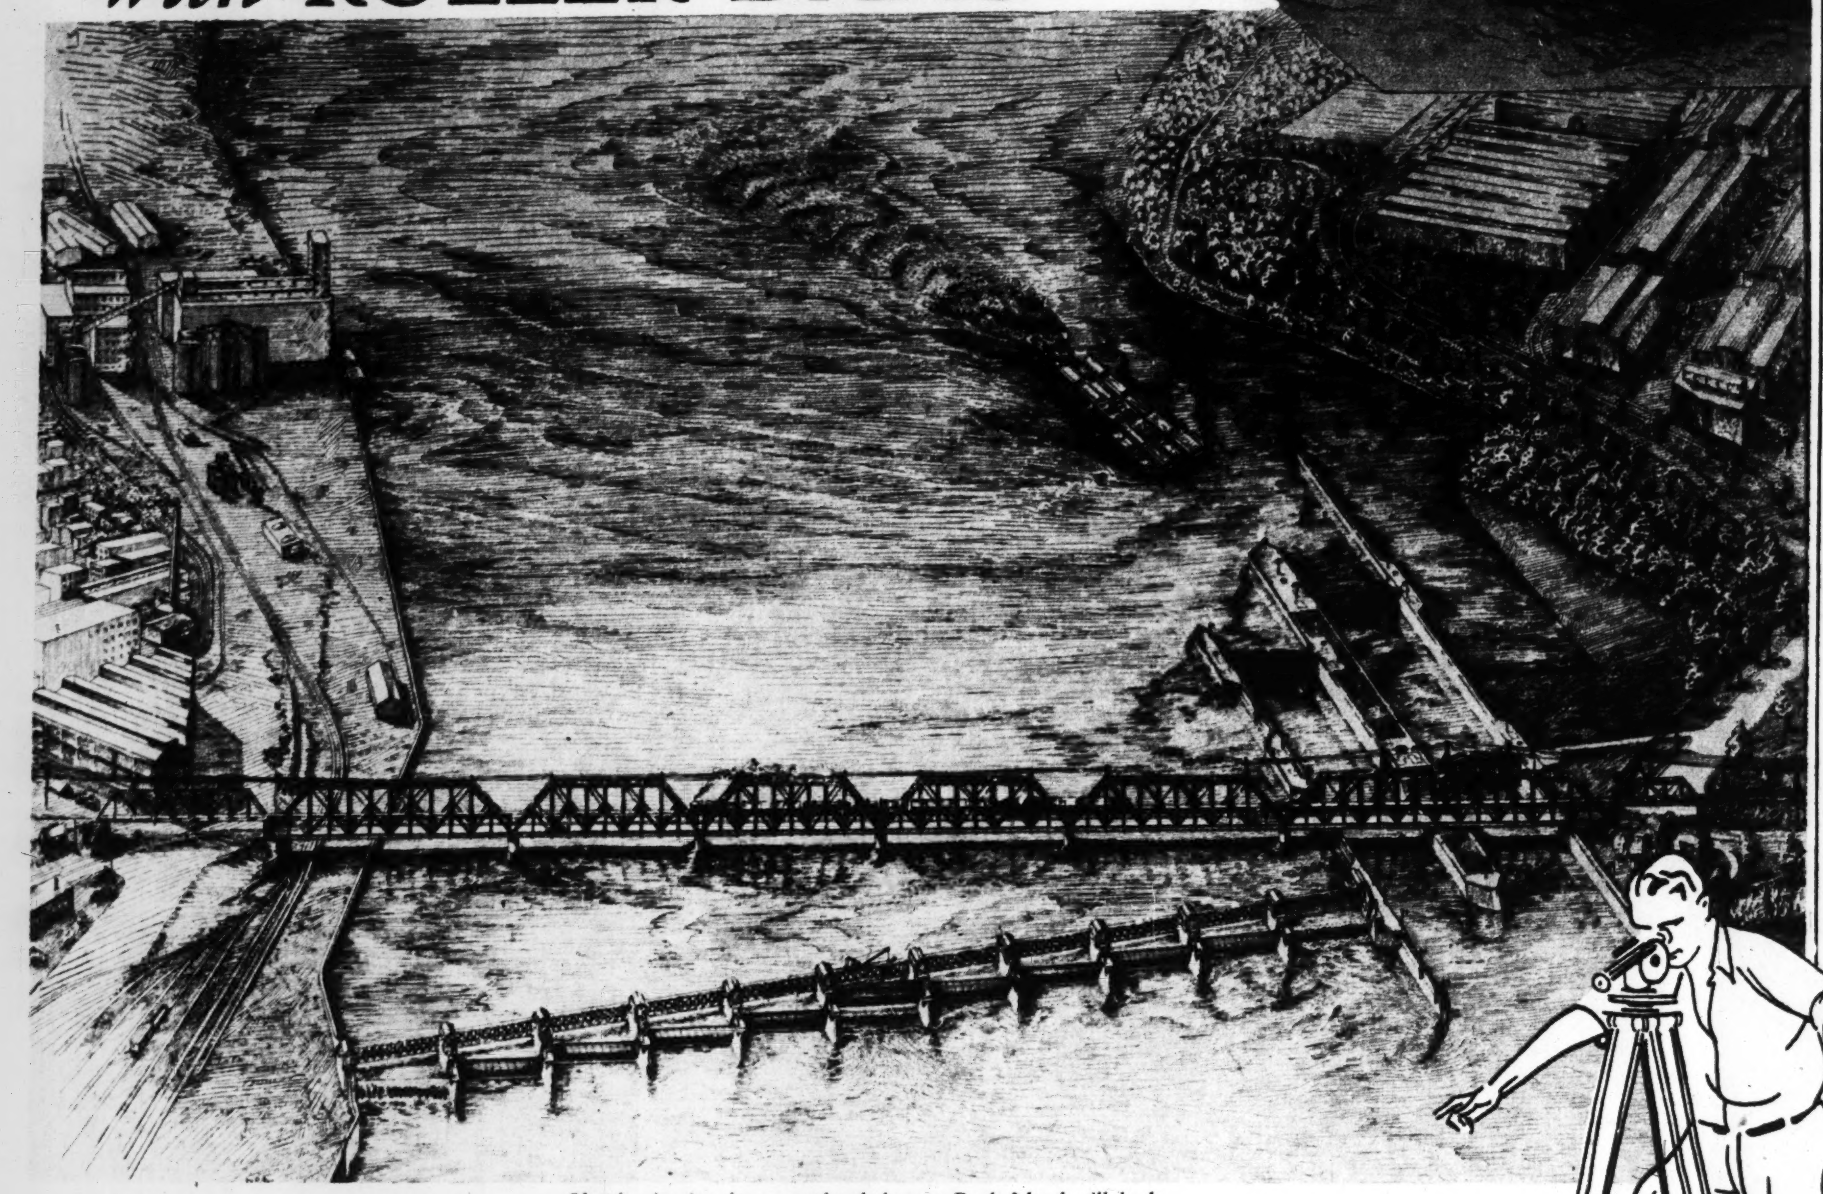
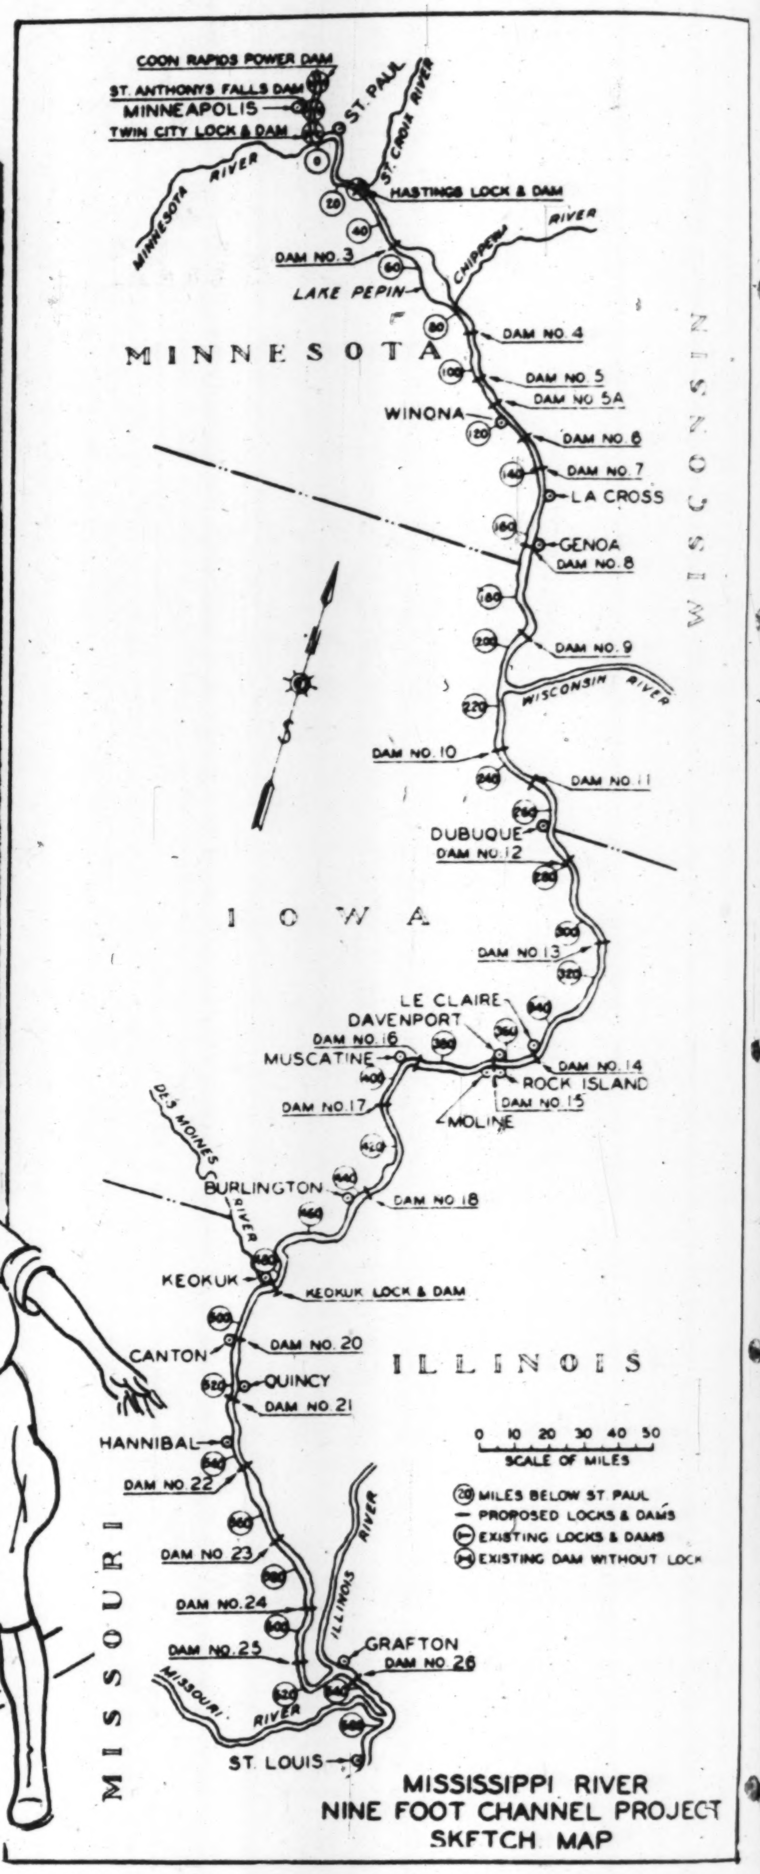
Construction Begun on Huge Unit at Rock Island Which Foreshadows, It Is Believed, a Renaissance of the Mississippi.



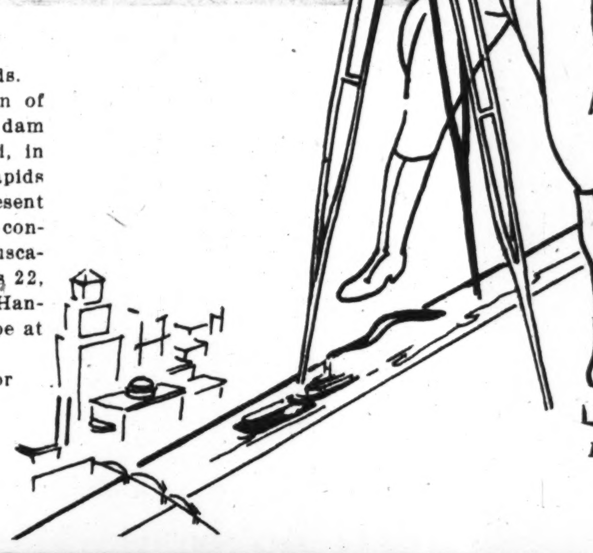
River Barge Wyhoke, of the type which experts believe will carry the revived traffic of the Mississippi.



Sketch, showing how completed dam at Rock Island will look.



Diagram, showing tentative location of dams in the project now going forward to canalize the Mississippi above St. Louis.



By M. W. CHILDS

Of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Staff

ROCK ISLAND, Illinois.

THEY have begun construction here on what is to be the largest roller dam in the world—one unit in the great project that will make the Mississippi above St. Louis a vast canal, interspersed at frequent intervals with elaborate locks.

In a strictly technical sense, of course, it will still be a river, but the flow of the Mississippi will be reduced by man's engineering skill almost to the vanishing point. This dam that is being thrust across the river between Rock Island and Davenport, Iowa, is the first step toward realization of a dream that has stirred the hopes of towns along the upper river for more than two decades—the long awaited, the long planned for nine-foot channel. There will eventually be 26 dams and 26 sets of locks, beginning just above St. Louis, near the town of Grafton, Illinois. The engineering project will cost the Government $125,000,000, exclusive of all the damage awards.

The attempt to harness Father Mississippi to the will of man, to tame the river, make it docile and well-behaved, dates from a long way back. And how many millions have flowed out of Uncle Sam's treasury into the vasty depths of the stream up and down its whole length from St. Paul to New Orleans no one will ever know. Fifty years ago when Mark Twain returned to the river to gather data for "Life on the Mississippi," the question of methods—wing dams, levees, reservoirs, stone ballast on the banks and so forth—was hotly disputed. It was Mark's opinion:

"One who knows the Mississippi will promptly aver—not aloud, but to himself—that 10,000 river commissions, with the mines of the world at their back, cannot tame that lawless stream, cannot curb it or confine it, cannot say to it, 'Go here,' or 'Go there,' and make it obey; cannot save a shore which it has sentenced; cannot bar its path with an obstruction which it will not tear down, dance over and laugh at."

Since that was written every method then employed has been virtually abandoned and river enthusiasts and Government engineers alike have concentrated their hopes on a system of dams, major and intermediate, the position and number of the latter as yet undetermined. Even this scheme, vast and comprehensive as it is, meets with the skeptical doubt of old-timers up and down the river. Those survivors who fought many battles with the Mississippi in the days of the packets and the lumber rafts snort with contempt at the presumption of Government engineers.

But they have never seen the scope and extent of this plan as it exists on blueprints in the Federal engineering offices here and in St. Louis. The dams, major and intermediate, are designed to create a stretch of water 700 miles in length as placid as the Erie Canal, nine feet in the channel, regardless of the season or the weather.

The 26 major dams will all be of the roller type. These dams are not built flush with the bottom of the river. In appearance they resemble huge boilers, or cast-iron drums, with an open slit in the center facing upstream. There is a slight flange attached to this opening which is directed toward the bottom of the river. The separate sections of this dam are to be installed between a series of great concrete piers, beginning at the locks on the Illinois shore and ending with the sea wall on the Iowa shore.

Photograph of section of roller type of dam.

Each of the individual sections can be raised or lowered at the will of an operator who will be stationed in a control tower at one end of the dam. Built across the piers will be a foot bridge and a railway track for a railway crane which will be used to lift out large logs and other obstructions which lodge against the dam. The whole project, including the set of two locks, will cost $7,500,000, a sum made available by Congress more than a year ago.

The first of the 26 dams was built here in order to do away at once with what are perhaps the most treacherous rapids in the upper river. Just above Rock Island there has been for a number of years a set of locks around a stretch of rapids, but this did not remove the obstruction of the lower and even more hazardous rapids.

According to the tentative plan of Government engineers, the next dam will be built at Canton, Missouri, in order to submerge the rocky rapids that exist not far below the present Keokuk dam. Third in order of construction will be the dam at Muscatine, Iowa. As now planned, dams 22, 23, 24 and 25 will go in between Hannibal and Grafton. Dam 21 will be at Quincy.

Many advantages are claimed for the roller type of dam. Silt will not accumulate behind it, for one thing. This is at present a problem at Keokuk, where the dam is a solid masonry structure, and the Government has had to buy and equip at considerable cost a special type of boat to dredge out the silt that has piled up behind the dam and threatens to hinder navigation. Fish can pass unimpeded under the roller dams.

What, the skeptical are inclined to ask, will ever justify this enormous expenditure? Many who witnessed the decline of river traffic doubt that it will revive, however attractive the river itself may be made. But it is only necessary to talk for a few minutes with a genuine river enthusiast to get the opposite point of view. With many men it is almost like a religion, this faith that a great renaissance of river traffic is to quicken the sluggish industrial life of the whole upper Mississippi Valley. Such men as Horace M. Hill and A. C. Wiprud of Minneapolis, B. F. Peek of Moline, Halleck W. Seaman of Clinton, Iowa.

The latter has slept and ate and breathed the river and its revival since he was a young man in college. As a railroad builder, an engineer and attorney for the powerful lumber interests that once dominated this section, he has never lost sight of this dream which he is sure now, within his lifetime, is to be realized. His office at Clinton is on the top floor of the tallest building, on the river side, and next to his desk is a pair of powerful binoculars that give him a wide sweep of the river. So eager is he that he must come here two or three times a week to watch the actual progress of what was for so many years a slender hope.

What Seaman and the others foresee is not a procession of proud packets, tricked out with jig-saw ornaments and gilded stacks. They see an almost endless string of barges burdened with iron ore and another string of barges burdened with soft coal from the Southern Illinois field. The two would meet in various great industrial centers along the river—St. Louis, Davenport, Dubuque—here would be the new Pittsburgs.

And, as the disciples of the river religion have worked it out, the plan appears logical. They point first of all to the enormous advantage which the Panama Canal gave to manufacturers on the Eastern seaboard. By means of the cheap water haul through the canal, the New York industrialist can ship his goods to the west coast more cheaply than can the Middle-western manufacturer, although the goods must go by water 2000 to 2500 miles farther. This advantage must be overcome by giving the Middle West a cheap and advantageous water route.

These prophets of a new day on the Mississippi point to the fact that the principal source of iron ore in this country is concentrated in an area that is approximately 50 to 150 miles northwest of St. Paul. Why take this ore to Duluth and then through the Great Lakes, and then by means of a second rail haul to the Pittsburg area? Why not take it to St. Paul—no farther than from the mines to Duluth—and then put it on river barges and haul it directly down to great steel plants along the river? Similarly, the coal could come from the Southern Illinois field, be put on barges and taken directly to the unloading yards of the river steel plants. If, it is contended, this plan could once be put in motion, the whole valley would be transformed into a smoking hive of industry. The furnaces in the Pittsburg area would grow cold and the steel workers of the East would migrate to the Middle West. That is what the most enthusiastic believe is in the immediate future for this region. And there are tangible eidences that it may materialize in the options that various large steel companies hold on tracts of land that front on the river here.

OF COURSE, there is an enormously powerful opposition. All the major interests of the East are opposed to this project. The villain in the piece is Wall street. At least this is the view of Seaman, who has long been a director of the Upper Mississippi Barge Line Company and prominent in the Mississippi Valley Association.

"No one can realize what is at stake here," he says, "what a tremendous stake there is. Western railroads are the tail of the kite, subsidiary to great Eastern roads, in which Wall street is primarily interested. Great Eastern banking houses control all the railroads—there is simply no discussion about that. And those great Eastern bankers are determined that this Middle Western country shall always be their fiefdom—paying an enormous tariff in rail rates to those bankers. The water is the way to lick them, and we're well on the way to do it."

Much, of course, is still dependent upon Congress. The present rivers and harbors bill before Congress calls for an appropriation of $124,000,000. Of this total about $25,000,000 to $30,000,000 would be available, it is es-

NEW YORK.

A REAL estate development of gigantic proportions and great social significance is taking place in the heart of New York's Lower East Side where approximately 15 acres of the city's worst slums and tenements are being transformed into a model "white collar city," within walking distance of Wall street and the financial district.

Actual construction has just begun on the first unit of the new development, which will be known as "Knickerbocker Village," named after the early Dutch settlers whose estates were located there. It lies between the Brooklyn and Manhattan bridges, East Broadway and East River. It is at present occupied chiefly by people of foreign birth who are crowded together in decayed and dingy tenements, some of which have been standing since shortly after the Civil War. The district includes the famous and deadly "lung block," so called by former Governor Smith because of the high incidence of tuberculosis mortality among its inhabitants.

These miserable dwellings, breeding places of crime and disease, are to be replaced by spacious and modern apartment houses, built so that the tenants may enjoy a maximum of sunlight and air. Instead of looking out on the dark walls of rear courts, sidewalks crowded with pushcarts, or rusty fire escapes overflowing with bedding, occupants of the new buildings will be able to see a few trees and an occasional plot of grass, for the district will be extensively parked.

The first unit, a 12-story building being erected at Henry and Market streets, will contain approximately 300 apartments, of three and four rooms each. They will be equipped with every modern convenience, and will rent for less than $20 per room, which, for this type of dwelling in Manhattan, is exceptionally cheap. There will, of course, be some apartments and penthouses which will be more expensive, but the section is being rebuilt with a desire to create desirable, yet inexpensive apartments which will draw their tenants from among the great army of workers employed in that criss-cross of office canyons known as the financial district.

The Knickerbocker Village project is a product of the imagination of New York's most dynamic and spectacular builder and real estate operator, Fred F. French. It was he who built Tudor City, on the East River at the foot of Forty-second street, a few blocks from Grand Central Terminal, replacing a ramshackle and poverty-stricken district with large, modern apartment dwellings, many of which boast the luxury of abutting lawn and trees.

The success of Tudor City was in a large measure due to the fact that residence there appealed to many persons employed in the midtown and Grand Central areas, because they could eliminate the discomfort and time of using the subway between office and home. Knickerbocker Village will undoubtedly have the same appeal to many working in the vicinity of Wall street, which is at a comfortable walking distance.

To acquire the 15 acres on which Knickerbocker Village is being located, more than 250 parcels of land, of varying dimensions, were separately purchased within this district in the past four years. It was four years ago that Mr. French conceived his project, and it was essential to its success that his plans be kept secret.

Forty-two persons, bound in writing to absolute secrecy, have been negotiating for these properties since 1928. Four dummy companies were created for the purpose of buying up the land, ostensibly for their own purposes.

The total cost of the development will be $50,000,000, approximately half of which will be spent on labor. When completed the development will provide accommodations for 10,000 persons and will displace 8000 who now live in these ancient tenements, under the worst possible conditions to be found in Manhattan.

A block of tenements in the slum area which will make way for "Knickerbocker Village."

As it is planned, the "white collar city" will cause a shift of population, bringing many office workers close to their work and scattering to other parts of the city a population composed largely of recent immigrants. The "lung block," as Al Smith called it, which is bounded by Market, Hamilton, Cherry and Catherine streets, and has long been regarded as one of the worst slums in the world, will at last be replaced by a block of modern apartment dwellings.

Indeed, among the most enthusiastic indorsers of the new undertaking is former Governor Smith, who welcomes this new city replacing the ancient and rickety buildings of the section where he played as a boy. The section to be developed runs close to the site under the Brooklyn Bridge where Al Smith was born, and it takes in Oliver street, where he lived for many years.

The assembling of this vast plot—which is the largest owned by any individual or company in Manhattan—required about 50 different negotiations, which were carried on with such honor by the 42 men and women in the compact of secrecy that the project remained a mystery for more than three years.

A view of Tudor City.

It was well known that some great undertaking was in progress because the neighborhood swarmed with real estate agents seeking to purchase titles. Once it was reported that a great railroad terminal was to be erected there. At another time the section seethed with excitement over reports that drillers, excavating for the foundation of a building, had struck an enormous lake of oil under Manhattan and that the scheme was to buy up the land before turning the section into a city of gushers.

Although no one seemed to know the purpose that was inspiring so much activity among real estate agents, the activity itself was obvious enough, and after a time property owners naturally began doubling and trebling their prices.

IT BECAME necessary to stop all buying at one time to allow the boom prices to collapse. When property owners realized that they couldn't dictate excessive terms, another wave of buying was started. During the entire period Mr. French himself didn't dare visit the region for fear that if he were seen in the neighborhood the secret of all the real estate activity would be guessed.

Although present plans call for an expenditure in the neighborhood of $50,000,000, it is possible that much more than this sum will be spent in developing the district. Planned during the boom era, the project was originally three times as great as it is today. It was to cost $150,000,000 and was to accommodate 30,000 persons. The very high price of real estate, followed by the stringency of the money market, caused a curtailment of the original plans.

Since then, however, the general deflation has markedly affected real estate values, and there is a great likelihood that the present area of 15 acres will be enlarged before the project is completed. Already the improvement inaugurated by Mr. French and his associates has attracted other builders and investors to the neighborhood, with the result that even the district not directly included in Knickerbocker Village, but adjoining it, will see striking renovation and improvement.

The first unit will be completed in time for October occupancy, and al-

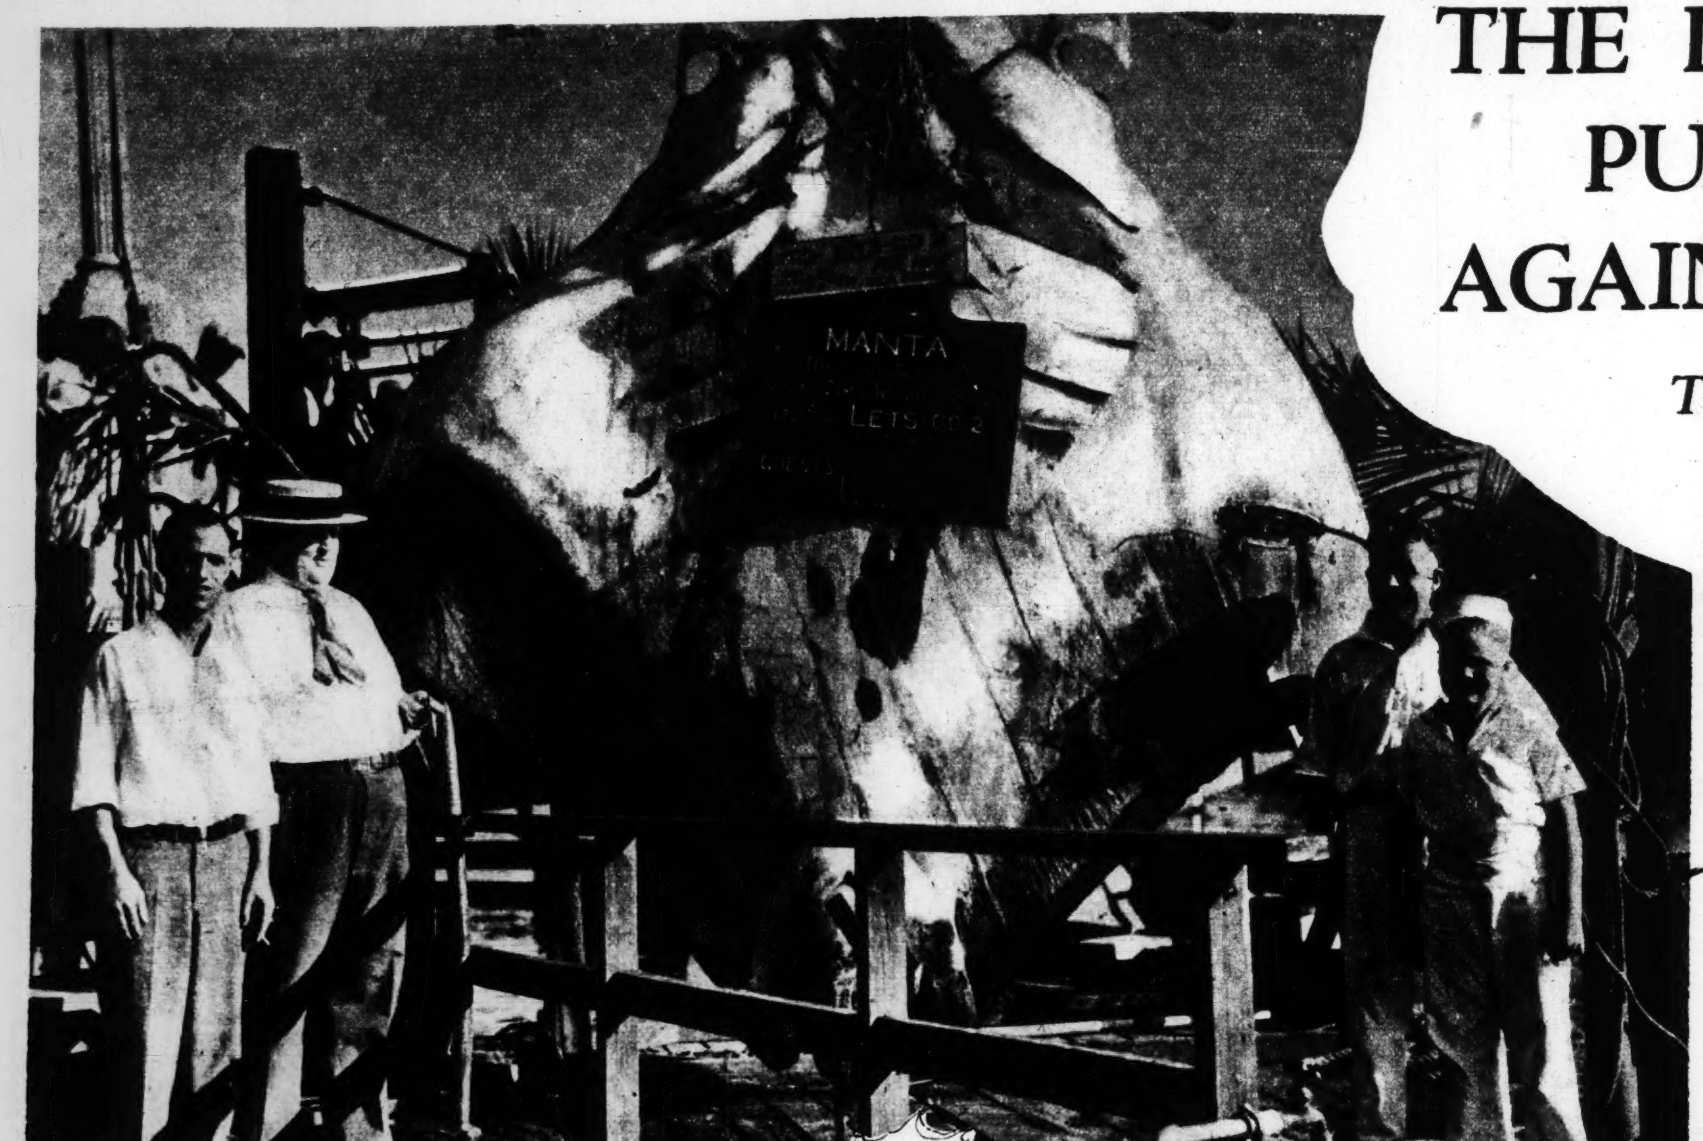
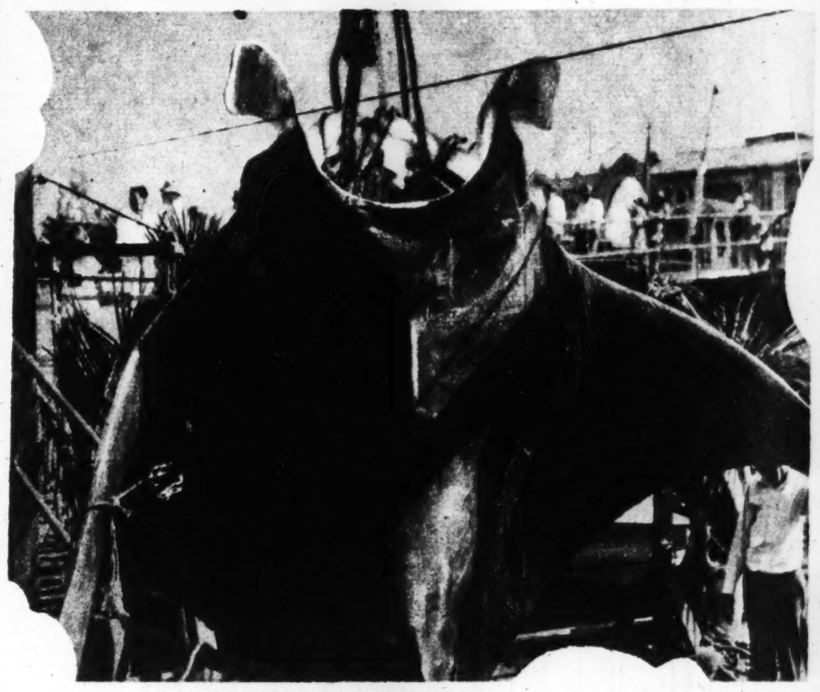
THE DEVIL FISH THAT PULLED A BOAT AGAINST ITS ENGINES

This Giant Ray, Weighing 5000 Pounds, Fought a Losing Battle for More Than Three Hours Against Men and Bullets.



The Devil Fish on exhibition.



A view of the monster showing its gigantic mouth.

FORT LAUDERDALE, Florida.

THIS resort town, to which hundreds of people come each year for the sport of deep-sea fishing, and which is the home of a large number and variety of commercial fishing craft, is rather blase about catches brought to its docks. It has seen so many ocean creatures, big and dangerous, grotesque and rare, that the landing of such things as a 500-pound shark, or a huge barracuda, jewfish or grouper is nothing to get excited about any more.

But when Captain Jay Gould and his party crawled into port the other day with their catch, a crowd gathered to see something at which even this thrill-hardened town could exclaim, and drug stores sold out their supplies of film to persons eager to photograph it. For Gould's fishing schooner had brought in a devil fish so gigantic that a crane owned by the city was required to lift it from the water. The giant ray, it was estimated, weighed more than 5000 pounds, and it had been overcome only after a fight of three and a half hours, in which it dragged the cruiser five miles against the pull of the boat's 20-horsepower engine. It was the prize devil fish of the last 10 years, and perhaps the largest ever taken on this coast.

The monster was encountered less than an hour's run from port. Gould's cruiser, the Let's-Go-Two, had set out that morning for the Gulf Stream fishing grounds. On board, in addition to the captain, were O. A. Porter of Indianapolis, Clayton A. Rugg and his son, Clayton Jr., Elmer L. Johnson of Jamestown, New York, and Albert P. Fritz of Hollywood. They were looking for fish which would give them a bit of a fight.

As the boat sped along over the smooth sea, a commotion in the water attracted Gould's attention. At first he thought it was a whale, but on approaching, found the fuss was made by two devil fish, swimming side by side.

To those looking over the side of the boat into the clear water it appeared as if the bottom of the ocean were moving off in a gigantic shadow, which resembled a great bird flapping its wings and swinging its long, thin tail at it flew along.

Gould quickly harpooned one of the fish, whereupon the wounded monster struck out in the general direction of Spain, carried out 600 feet of line—and kept on going when the limit of the line was reached. The half-inch rope had snapped.

The fisherman then tackled the second devil fish. One of them stood in the bow of the boat and made a cast with his fishing tackle. A hook sank into one of the fins on the side of the creature's yard-wide mouth.

THE hook was evidently embedded in such tender flesh that the captive did not have the courage to pull away, for the fisherman was able to hold the ray and "play" it for 25 minutes. By that time Captain Gould had fastened the broken harpoon line to a steel shark hook and had tied on the anchor line.

The shark hook was dragged over the stern until it entered the devil fish's mouth. Then, with a jerk, Gould set the hook in one of the immense flippers, snubbed the line to a deck-post and sent the boat full speed ahead. The sudden pull of the line turned the captive over on its back, fastening the anchor line in a beautiful half-hitch about its ugly body.

Maddened, the monster whirled to right itself and started seaward, dragging the boat, stern first and against the power, for fully five miles. During the struggle everyone on board hauled and tugged at the line, which wore away a half-inch groove over the Let's-Go-Two's stern.

Steel-jacketed bullets from Captain Gould's high-powered rifle finally sapped the strength of the monster and the boat's engine slowed, then checked the race. The fight had lasted three and one-half hours.

The huge carcass slowly settled into the depths, and the combined strength of the five men and young Rugg was needed to prevent it from sinking to the bottom. The Let's-Go-Two, limping homeward, could make only about a mile an hour, towing this burden.

After the boat reached port, seamen and engineers worked all night trying to raise the devil fish from the water to the exhibition racks. Block and tackle didn't budge it. The derrick on a workboat only got the body far enough out to crush a section of the dock and railing.

Then, in the morning, a Fort Lauderdale city crane, using chains instead of ropes, brought the monster up into full view.

The catch has helped business here, increasing trade at tackle stores and bringing a rush of patronage to boats which are for hire. Captain Gould has been engaged for all his available time by fishing parties. He also has received a lot of fan mail, and has been mistaken by many for the millionaire sportsman, Frank Jay Gould, some of whose friends have written to congratulate him on his remarkable catch.

GOULD has caught other devil fish, but none nearly so large as the latest one, which measured 19 feet 8 inches across.

The devil fish, or manta birostris, belongs to the giant ray family, and is a bat-like creature which uses its body fins as a bird does its wings in flying, with a waving, undulating motion. The physical feature from which it derives its common name are the lobes, or, as they are sometimes termed, cephalic fins, which extend outward and upward from each side of its flat head like curling horns. In the adult fish the head fins are from three to four feet in length, about six inches wide, and very powerful.

Many stories have been told of big devil fish stealing ships and carrying them out to sea. The stories are all very similar: a ship is lying quietly at harbor when a devil fish swims into its anchor chains, instinctively twines its tenacula, or feelers, around the chains, and, applying its tremendous strength, pulls up the anchors and moves seaward, towing the ship.

10,000 Young Americans Who Can't Speak English

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

PARIS.

LIVING in France are some 10,000 boys and girls who constitute a unique by-product of the World War. They are Americans, but most of them have never seen America and can't speak English. They are the children of members of the American expeditionary forces who stayed in France when they left the army or returned shortly afterward, married French women and settled down to earning a living and rearing families in this country.

It is estimated that at least 5000 veterans of the A. E. F. stayed or came back after the war to marry Jeanne, Jacqueline or Juliette, and are still residents of France. But they have all retained their American citizenship—at least no instance of a change in nationality is known here—and their children are, accordingly, American in the eyes of the United States Government. The French Government also claims them as citizens, however, so these youngsters might be said to have a dual nationality.

The fathers, despite their legal Americanism, have adopted pretty completely the French ways of life. They speak French, of course, and some of them work in French offices or factories and live in French homes. A decade or so of residence here has accustomed them to French cooking, clothes and customs. Many of the romances between American soldiers and French girls quickly went on the rocks; theirs are the ones that didn't. Theirs are the cases in which husband and wife were able to reconcile differences in temperament and viewpoint, due to their different nationalities, and from mutual concessions and mutual affection form lasting unions.

These American ex-soldiers are scattered through all the provinces of France, but the largest group is living in Paris, where it forms an important part of the American colony. The Americans in the French capital constitute a distinct community—a city of 25,000 people, with its own clubs, cliques, feuds, scandals and interests. It has a hospital, a library, a high school, two newspapers, four churches, a Chamber of Commerce, a bowling league, an active American Legion post (with a bar in the clubrooms), and various other associations. The American Ambassador, in a limited sense, is the Mayor.

THESE veterans and their fellows in the provinces represent all army ranks from buck private to Colonel, and earn their living in a great variety of occupations. They are preachers (all five of the American clergymen in Paris are A. E. F. veterans), journalists, farmers; chiropractors, hotel keepers, milkmen, piano tuners, glove manufacturers; they make wine, operate cafes, manage casinos, banks and garages, design homes, build churches and pull teeth. But with most of them the income is less than they would receive for the same work in the United States, and undoubtedly, a good many of them often long for salary checks on the American scale. It is difficult to save money on their incomes—and for this reason it is doubtful that some who hope to return to the United States some day will ever be able to.

One of the American veterans living in France is Ed Cohn—Sergeant Ed Cohn in his A. E. F. days—who used to be orderly to General Pershing. Cohn seems to be well satisfied with life here. He is employed in the circulation department of the European edition of an American newspaper. He has a French wife and a daughter who is now 10 years old. General Pershing is the child's godfather.

Young Franco-Americans at a Washington bi-centennial party.

Whenever Pershing comes to Paris he and his former orderly get together and talk over events of their wartime association. In 1927, when the General came to Paris for the American Legion convention, Cohn journeyed to Cherbourg to greet him and to present him with the first copy of the second Stars and Stripes, the A. E. F. newspaper which was revived for the duration of the convention. Cohn has the distinction of being the only enlisted man who ever borrowed money from the commander in chief of the American Expeditionary Forces. When he needed more cash than he had he just asked the General for a loan, and the latter always obliged. But the General, although accommodating in this respect, saw to it that a good orderly was not spoiled by his own indulgence; he required the Sergeant to repay every loan to him at the time he had promised to do it. Cohn undoubtedly could tell many interesting personal things about Pershing—his likes and dislikes, hobbies and habits, angers and enthusiasms — but he very definitely declines to do so.

The children of the American veterans and their French wives—the 10,000 or so young Franco-Americans whose existence is due to the World War—provide a serious problem for their fathers, who, in spite of their French residence, treasure their identification with the United States and would like for their sons and daughters to share their feeling. For most of these youngsters are growing up without knowing much about the glories, institutions, customs or even the language of their fathers' country. A few speak English as well as French, but the big majority know only the language of the country of their birth.

A striking illustration of this ignorance of English on the part of the children of American fathers is afforded by one of the activities of the American Church of Paris. The church was founded in 1857, and until a few years ago all its services were conducted in the English language. But now there is a special Sunday school class for the children of A. E. F. veterans, and it is taught in French because they don't understand English. The teacher, incidentally, is the French wife of the assistant pastor. The same church has also a Bible class in French for the French wives of the ex-soldiers.

THE fathers of the little Franco-Americans are trying to find a way to remedy this situation. They want their children to learn to speak English, to recite the Declaration of Independence, sing "My Old Kentucky Home," and read "Tom Sawyer" in the original. But so far no practicable method has been found. The Ladies' Auxiliary of Paris Post, American Legion, operates a "Thursday school," which meets on that day because it is a holiday for children attending French schools. The auxiliary's teaching is in English, and the curriculum includes American folk-songs, history, ideals, poetry, games and geography. But less than a hundred children attend regularly.

A smattering of Americanism is imparted, perhaps, by celebrations of certain American patriotic festivals. Such an event was the Washington bi-centennial party at the American Church here, which many of the youngsters attended in costume.

Plans are afoot now to organize a Legion school, which would hold classes five days a week instead of one, and a committee is studying a scheme to make the Franco-American children of Paris English speaking as well as French.

The great wall as seen from the air, and map showing its location.

THE great wall of China, winding like a mighty, protecting serpent along the old northern boundary of the Celestial Kingdom — Hadrian's wall, the great wall of Britain, built and fortified to shut the barbarians of the north out of Southern Britain in the days of the Roman Empire.

And now, added to this small, select list of great walls in the world is an American entry—the great wall of Peru, which has been discovered by explorers flying over the Andes—

The American wall was built by hard labor by an Indian people called the Chimu, who had an important civilization long ago in Peru, along the Pacific coast, until finally they were swallowed up in a terrific struggle by the powerful empire of the Incas.

That a great wall, many miles long, should be hidden or lost or forgotten, seems incredible. A great wall would seem to be as conspicuous as the proverbial white elephant. But the great walls of China and Britain have had a way of fading out of sight for many centuries and coming to light again in modern times. And the new-found wall of Peru is quite like them.

How very, very inconspicuous a great wall can be was proved by the Chinese wall, which was unknown outside of Asia for almost 2000 years. And it is 1500 miles long—that is half the width of the United States. As late as 50 years ago, articles were actually written arguing that the Chinese wall was a myth.

In England, archeologists are still discovering Hadrian's wall, which runs across the island, from east to west, for 73 miles. Only last year a brand new fort along the wall was unearthed, with much excitement in England.

As for the great wall of Peru, it has just gained the world's attention for the first time. It was sighted from the air unexpectedly as the recent Shippee-Johnson Peruvian expedition flew over the foothills of the Andes.

Never having heard of any barricade of such size in Peru, the surprised explorers, Robert Shippee and George R. Johnson and their party, studied their air photographs and puzzled over them and finally decided to make another flight, to trace the length of this mysterious barricade.

This time the flying explorers started from a point near the Pacific coast, where ruins of a village are buried in sand. There the great wall springs up.

The whole Pacific coast of Peru is a desert strip of sand about 50 miles wide, cut across by a number of rivers, which make the land habitable. And east of that desert strip, the Andes mountain ranges begin.

The great wall crosses this strip and rises into the foothills. It was apparently built to follow the Santa River from sea to mountain. In many places the barricade wanders more than a mile from the river. Occasionally it comes close, even crossing the river's path.

Like the Chinese wall and the wall of Hadrian, the great wall of Peru was strengthened by a series of forts. The discoverers sighted 14 of these forts. They stood on both sides of the wall and at a short distance from it.

Some of the forts are circular, some are rectangular. Most of them were cleverly set in the tops of small hills where they would be quite invisible from the valley floor.

A close-up of the great wall with its construction of mud-cemented boulders.

As the flyers followed the wall up into the Andes, at an elevation of 10,000 feet in the mountains, they lost the trail. Weather conditions were against them. The light was failing.

But they had succeeded in following the wall for more than 40 miles. They had seen enough to convince them that this construction project of ancient America ranks with other remarkable feats of the past.

Viewed from an airplane over the Andes, the great wall of Peru is a seam, a long, fine scar on the face of the mountains. After the flyers had surveyed it from the air, they set out by automobile and on foot to examine the wall at close range.

They found a tall, crumbling rampart of mud-cemented boulders. Where it crosses gullies it rises as high as 20 or 30 feet. The average height appears to have been 12 to 15 feet. At the base it was 12 to 15 feet thick, and toward the top it tapered.

It is interesting to compare this wall with the other two, previously mentioned.

The great wall of China, built about 200 B. C., is 1500 miles long, has 25,000 towers for forts, rises from 15 to 30 feet high and is 25 feet thick at its base.

Hadrian's wall in England was built around 150 A. D., is 73 miles long, has 14 large forts and 80 small ones, stands nearly 20 feet high and is eight feet thick.

The great wall of America is known to be 40 miles long, and may be longer, may have been built as early as 300 A. D., has an average height equal to that of the Chinese wall, is strengthened by 14 forts and is from 12 to 15 feet thick.

Now that the great wall has been revealed by aerial photography, there is real surprise that so big a monument was never mentioned in early historic writings about Peru. The Spanish conquerors, who were so curious about all the wonders of the Incan empire in Peru, seem to have heard nothing about a great wall. At least, they never wrote of it.

THE Spaniards exclaimed over the long, smooth highways built by the Incas for their armies to march over. They marveled to see Incan temples built of stone and shining in gold and jeweled ornaments. They took the keenest interest in the intricate communist system of the Incan government.

And chroniclers who accompanied Pizarro busily wrote down impressions about these things.

Was the great wall already a ruin, forgotten, when the Spaniards conquered the Incas in the sixteenth century?

That might very well account for the silence of history upon this subject.

A number of archeologists have been asked their opinions on the great wall by the American Geographical Society, and there is virtual agreement on one point. That is that the builders of the great wall of Peru were the Chimu Indians. They were living in the region when the great wall must have been built, for they occupied the coast from very early centuries of the Christian era.

There is a famous Chimu vase painting which shows a whole row of hand-to-hand combats between Chimu warriors and some opponents. Such a scene gives a pretty good idea of what Indian fighting must have been along the great wall of Peru in the days when it was a fortification in active use.

IN THE series of duels painted on this vase, the best dressed contestant, the Chimu warrior, is winning every time. And that is no wonder. For the winners are protected about the head by pointed helmets of wood and cotton, with chin straps and ear plates and a flap down the back of the neck.

These warriors wear armor jackets probably made of slats of wood laced together. And they are loaded down with shields, battle axes, wicked looking maces and other accessories for close combat. War paint on the faces and legs of the Chimu fighting men completes the battle outfit.

Some of the enemy in this fight have helmets to wear.

But most of them have only tasseled caps to save their heads from bludgeon blows, and have little or no body protection. The Chimu warriors evidently had the best of the armor.

From what is known of the Chimu Indians, a great wall would have come in handy at almost any period of their busy carrer.

When the Chimu were a young and rising tribe in north coast Peru, they were engaged in fighting civil wars. Later, the Chimu had to defend themselves against Indian tribes from the highland of Peru.

And then, somewhere between 1000 A. D. and 1300 A. D., the Chimu had to fight the conquering Incas, who finally added the Chimu country to their kingdom.

Experts on Peruvian archeology differ in their views as to which age of Chimu fighting brought the great wall into existence.

Dr. R. L. Olson of the University of California suggests that the wall may have been a defense structure built by the early Chimu, as they extended their territory to north and south.

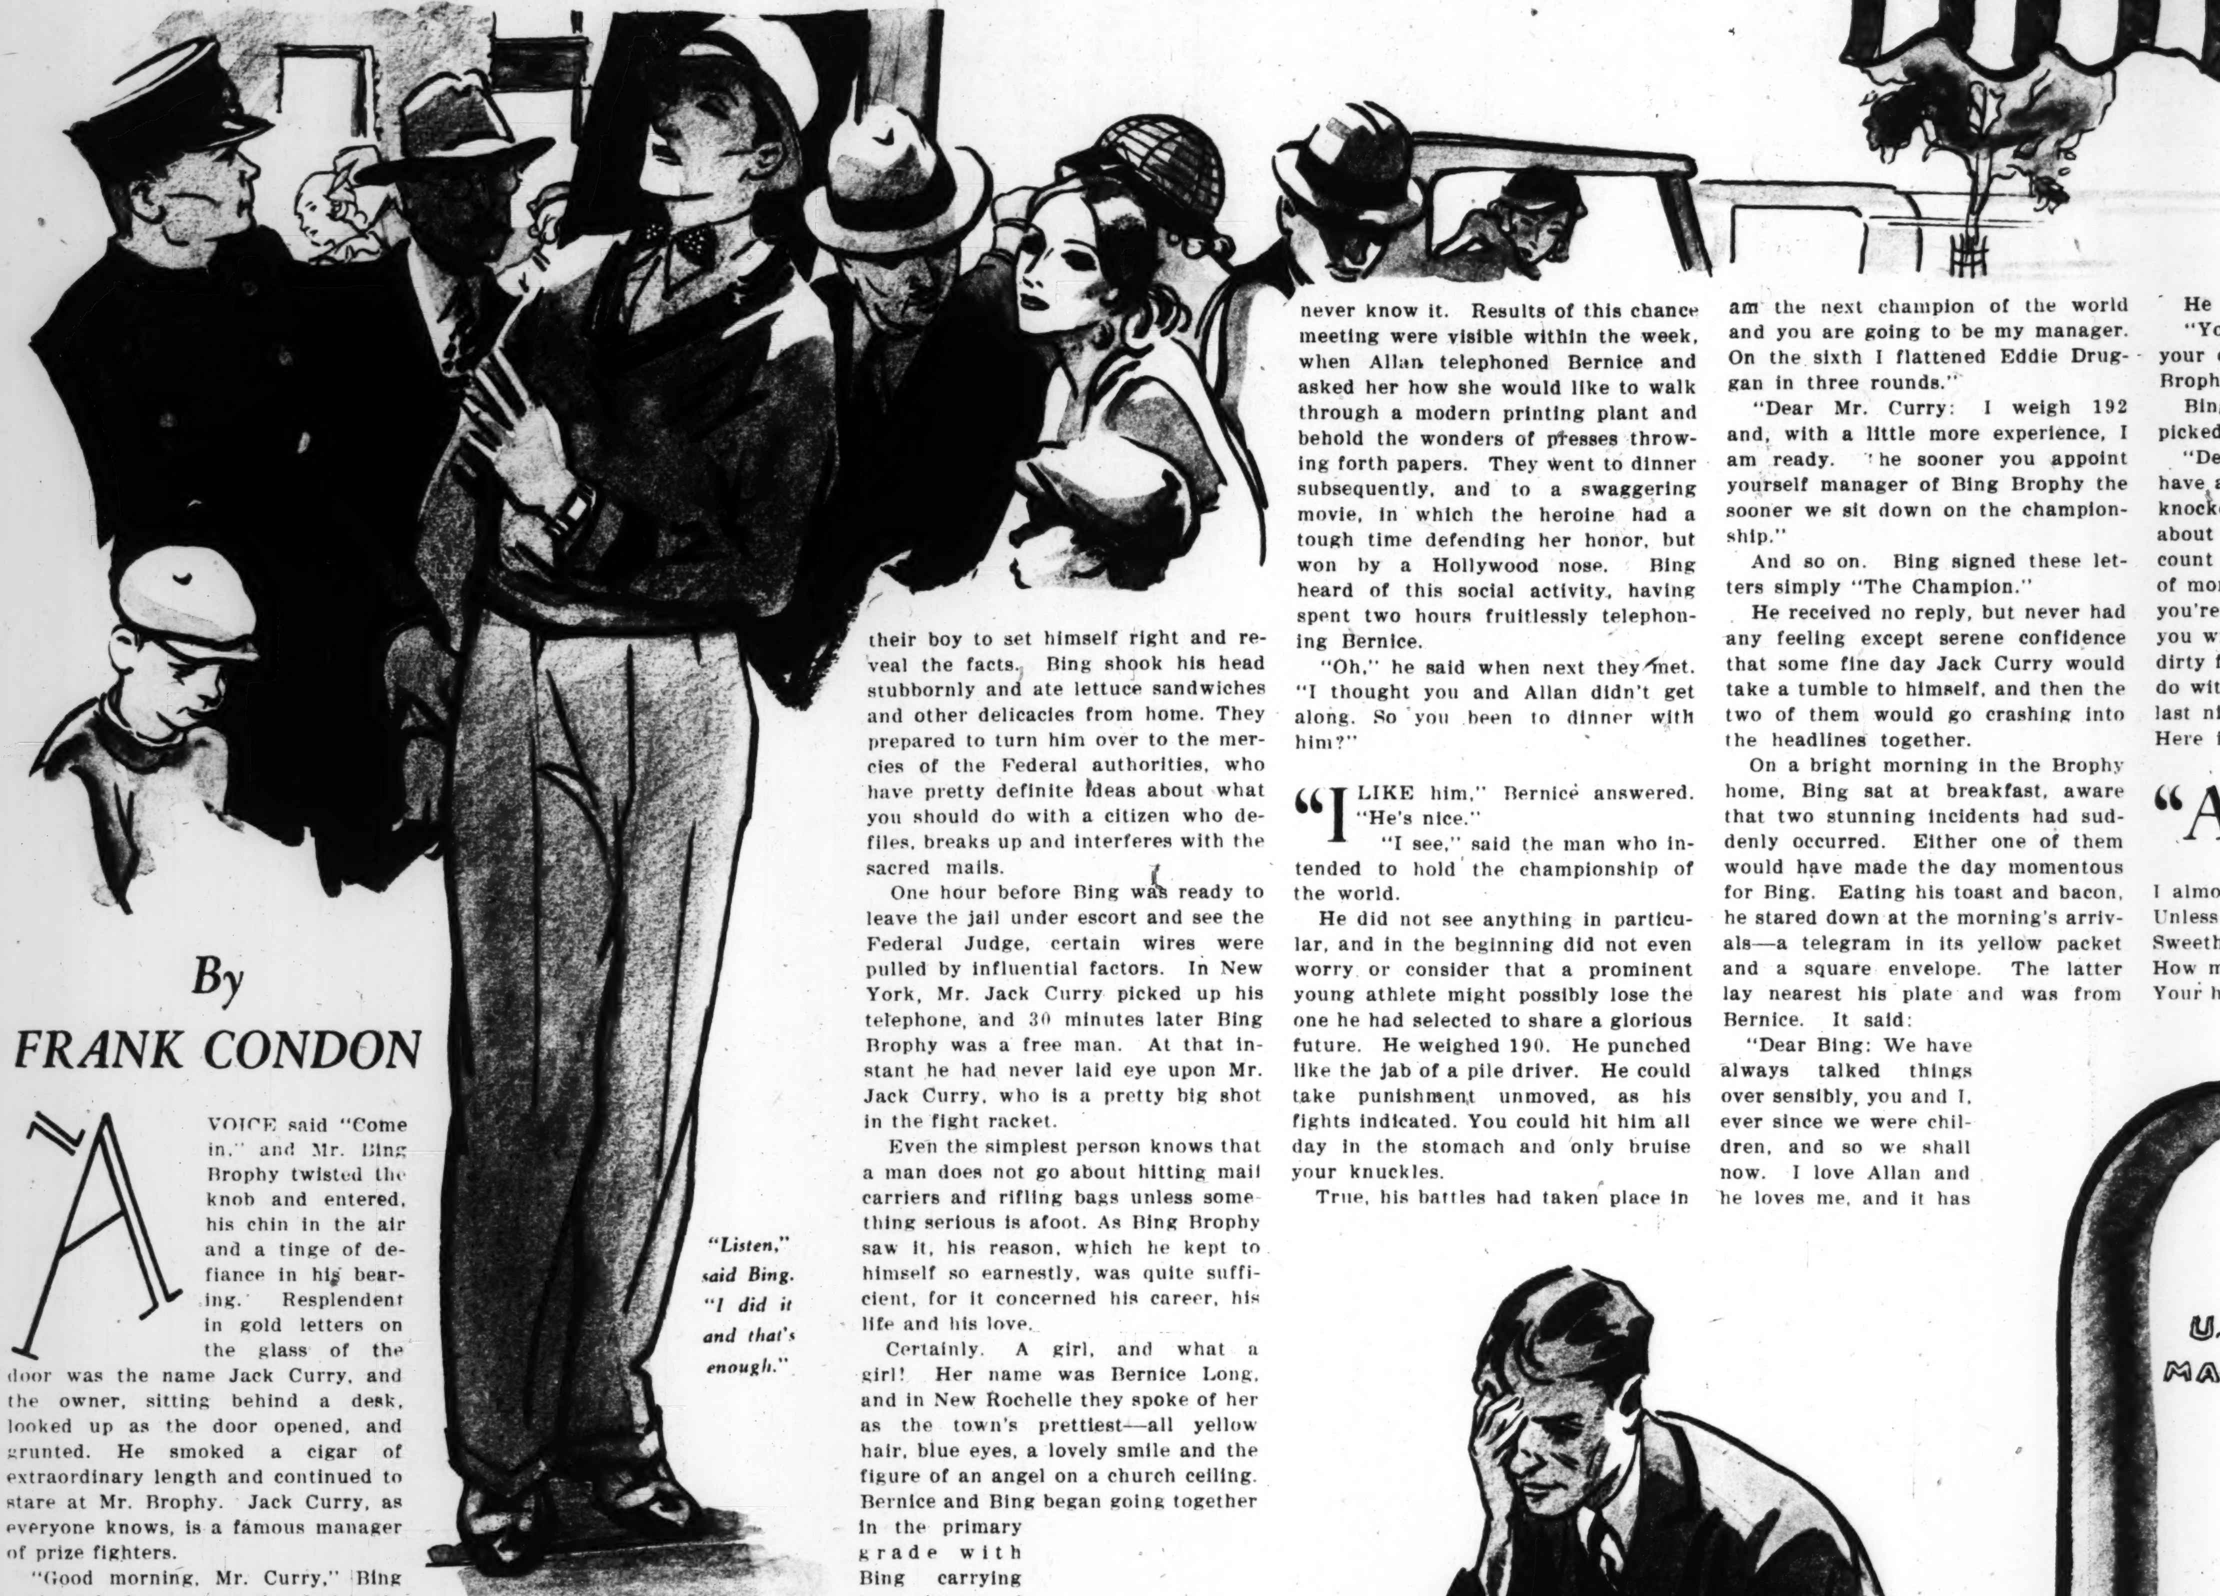
Achilles Had His Heel



"Listen," said Bing. "I did it and that's enough."

By FRANK CONDON

A VOICE said "Come in," and Mr. Bing Brophy twisted the knob and entered, his chin in the air and a tinge of defiance in his bearing. Resplendent in gold letters on the glass of the door was the name Jack Curry, and the owner, sitting behind a desk, looked up as the door opened, and grunted. He smoked a cigar of extraordinary length and continued to stare at Mr. Brophy. Jack Curry, as everyone knows, is a famous manager of prize fighters.

"Good morning, Mr. Curry," Bing said, and the man at the desk only glared.

"So you're Bing Brophy?"

"Yes, sir."

"And, if I might ask, what is the matter with you?"

The one named Bing made no reply, but cleared his throat softly and closed the door. He had been holding the knob.

"You're not crazy?" asked Curry.

"I don't look crazy, do I, Mr. Curry?"

Bing rested his weight against the window in the absence of an invitation to sit down. He was tall, powerful, young, bronzed. He was ill at ease, too, and repeated his question.

"No, you don't look daffy," the older man admitted.

"And I'm not daffy," Bing said earnestly. "I'm all right. Ask anybody. I am a good guy and there is nothing wrong with me. This thing is ended, so why don't we forget it?"

"It's ended, and who ended it? I did. Where would you be now only for me? Keep that up and we won't get along at all."

Mr. Curry released a cloud of smoke.

"I am a good guy," continued the youth at the window. "There is nothing goofy about me and never was, and I am not going to do it again."

"I hope and trust you ain't going to do it again," Curry said coldly. "There is a swell fine for that, and they can send you up. Because I happened to have a little influence, I got you off, or you would now be on your way to the hoosegow."

"Mr. Curry, I don't want to talk about it," Bing said sadly. "Much obliged to you for what you did, but it's over now. You don't need to worry about me doing that again."

The telephone rang and Curry reached for it.

"This is Chicago calling," he remarked. "Wait a minute."

Bing Brophy leaned gloomly against the steel sash and scowled down at the distant street. Care and bewilderment sat upon his countenance and his brow was wrinkled with the manifold miseries of youth misunderstood.

Fifty hours before the interview in the Curry office, Bing was arrested in his home town of New Rochelle by two policemen who knew him very well. Everyone in New Rochelle knew him, and some were proud of him and said he would amount to something, for he was by far the best boxer ever sent out to the wars from his community.

At the moment of arrest, Bing was standing above a mail bag, the contents of which lay upon the ground. A crowd of New Rochellians looked on in amazement and asked each other questions. Beside the ravished bag knelt an official carrier of the U. S. Government in his uniform of gray, and methodically he picked up letters, dusted them off and put them back into the bag.

One of his eyes was slowly turning black and blue, and his nose was larger than it had been. A faint trickle of gore wandered across his upper lip, and it was quite obvious that something had happened to him. A fat policeman helped him retrieve letters and parcels, and to him the bruised one complained in mournful tones.

"He asked me would I give him back a letter out of the mail box, and I said I wouldn't. We can't do that. It's against the law. I told him, so he socked me on the nose and took my bag away; and can he hit!"

The policeman grunted and looked at Bing. The crowd increased slightly and the cop in charge spoke to the culprit:

"You do this?"

"I did," said Bing.

"What's the idea?"

"LISTEN," said Bing. "I did it and that's enough. Now what are you going to do?"

"We're going to put you where your meals come through a hole," said the officer, and he led Bing to one side. Sure enough, Mr. Brophy went to jail, escorted by a small group, and spent the night behind bars for the first time. Hard-eyed officials looked him over and sought explanation of a queer business.

"You never been arrested before, have you, Bing?" they asked.

"No, sir; not me."

"You got a good reputation in New Rochelle. Why did you walk out and deliberately bust a mail carrier?"

"I don't care to talk about it," Bing remarked. "You can sit there and ask me for 800 years, and I would say the same. I did it, and never mind why I did it, and that's all."

Policemen present discussed the matter and said Bing would have a chance to explain the episode to the United States court, where the Judge would probably send him to Atlanta for a term. Bing listened in silence and refused to be drawn into the discussion.

His father and mother came down to the jail and repeated what everybody knew—that Bing was a good boy, with a clean record and kindly impulses.

"We know all that, Mrs. Brophy," said the Sergeant. "You ain't telling us anything new. He's a nice boy, but look what he did. That's pretty serious."

The papers spread the thing on page one—Bing Brophy Assaults Mail Carrier—and the New York sheets took a crack at it, intimating that a long career of having his head punched had affected the boy. The good old father and mother pleaded tearfully with their boy to set himself right and reveal the facts. Bing shook his head stubbornly and ate lettuce sandwiches and other delicacies from home. They prepared to turn him over to the mercies of the Federal authorities, who have pretty definite ideas about what you should do with a citizen who defiles, breaks up and interferes with the sacred mails.

One hour before Bing was ready to leave the jail under escort and see the Federal Judge, certain wires were pulled by influential factors. In New York, Mr. Jack Curry picked up his telephone, and 30 minutes later Bing Brophy was a free man. At that instant he had never laid eye upon Mr. Jack Curry, who is a pretty big shot in the fight racket.

Even the simplest person knows that a man does not go about hitting mail carriers and rifling bags unless something serious is afoot. As Bing Brophy saw it, his reason, which he kept to himself so earnestly, was quite sufficient, for it concerned his career, his life and his love.

Certainly. A girl, and what a girl! Her name was Bernice Long, and in New Rochelle they spoke of her as the town's prettiest—all yellow hair, blue eyes, a lovely smile and the figure of an angel on a church ceiling. Bernice and Bing began going together in the primary grade with Bing carrying her bag of books and occasionally socking some fresh kid for words spoken. In time he realized that his companion was a charming girl, almost a woman, at which point he fell in love with her and began to write poetry in secret.

They remained friends until Bing took up boxing, first as a stumbling amateur and later as a professional, with money coming in. Bernice hated it.

"Yes, but I'm a natural fighter," he argued. "Take a look at me."

Bernice took the look, but remained serious. They were sitting on the grass in the little park hard by the railway tracks, and trains were roaring into New York, where there is all the money in the world. It was Sunday afternoon and couples sat on the turf, discussing life and love and jobs and matrimony. Bernice admitted that he looked like a natural fighter.

"I can sock," Bing said complacently. "Guys that can sock are not too plentiful."

"It was bad enough," the girl said, "when you were an amateur in the clubs. But now you're a professional fighter. And I think it's pretty terrible."

"There's money in fighting," he insisted. "A guy drives a truck or he works in a bank, and what does he make? How can he lay up for the future? I'm a great fighter, not a ham-and-egger. I'm a champion, and champions have money. You don't know that yet. Nobody does, except me. I know I'm a champion. That's my idea. Big money and then retire while you're young."

"That kind of money is not good," she replied, and they sat there on the grass near the railway, arguing the afternoon away.

At a dull football game, whither Bing had ascorted Bernice, he introduced her with some pride to Allan Conkey, a somber young man whose collar was wilted, despite the cold day, and whose clothes seemed to have been put on by accident. Mr. Conkey, though young, knew about 12,000 things that had so far escaped Bing, and as the game proceeded, Bernice bent her gaze upon the stranger, while he made notes.

Now and then he glanced at her with what appeared to be gloomy curiosity, and Bing thought nothing of the afternoon's events, and certainly did not suspect the main fact, which was that a boxer may lose his girl and never know it. Results of this chance meeting were visible within the week, when Allan telephoned Bernice and asked her how she would like to walk through a modern printing plant and behold the wonders of presses throwing forth papers. They went to dinner subsequently, and to a swaggering movie, in which the heroine had a tough time defending her honor, but won by a Hollywood nose. Bing heard of this social activity, having spent two hours fruitlessly telephoning Bernice.

"Oh," he said when next they met. "I thought you and Allan didn't get along. So you been to dinner with him?"

"I LIKE him," Bernice answered. "He's nice."

"I see," said the man who intended to hold the championship of the world.

He did not see anything in particular, and in the beginning did not even worry or consider that a prominent young athlete might possibly lose the one he had selected to share a glorious future. He weighed 190. He punched like the jab of a pile driver. He could take punishment unmoved, as his fights indicated. You could hit him all day in the stomach and only bruise your knuckles.

True, his battles had taken place in the sticks—towns like Elmira and Glens Falls—and that is where a young fighter should build himself up. Look at Jack Dempsey. Jack fought for years in the remote provinces and bided his time, just as Bing was biding his time. Meanwhile, he was laying sound plans with the skill of a business man—for fighting is a business—and his plans included Mr. Jack Curry, who, as any innocent knows, is America's leading manager of boxers. Jack Curry is the same to fighting as Napoleon was to war.

BING knew perfectly well that he would make money later on and that, with Jack Curry at the helm, a fortune was waiting in the ring.

Meantime, the famous manager of fighters betrayed not the slightest curiosity in the hopes and ambitions of the New Rochelle bruiser. That Mr. Curry might be constantly aware of his existence, Bing sent a monthly letter, or report, to the Curry offices on Madison avenue, New York—an idea of his own.

This letter usually went out on the first of the month and was a survey:

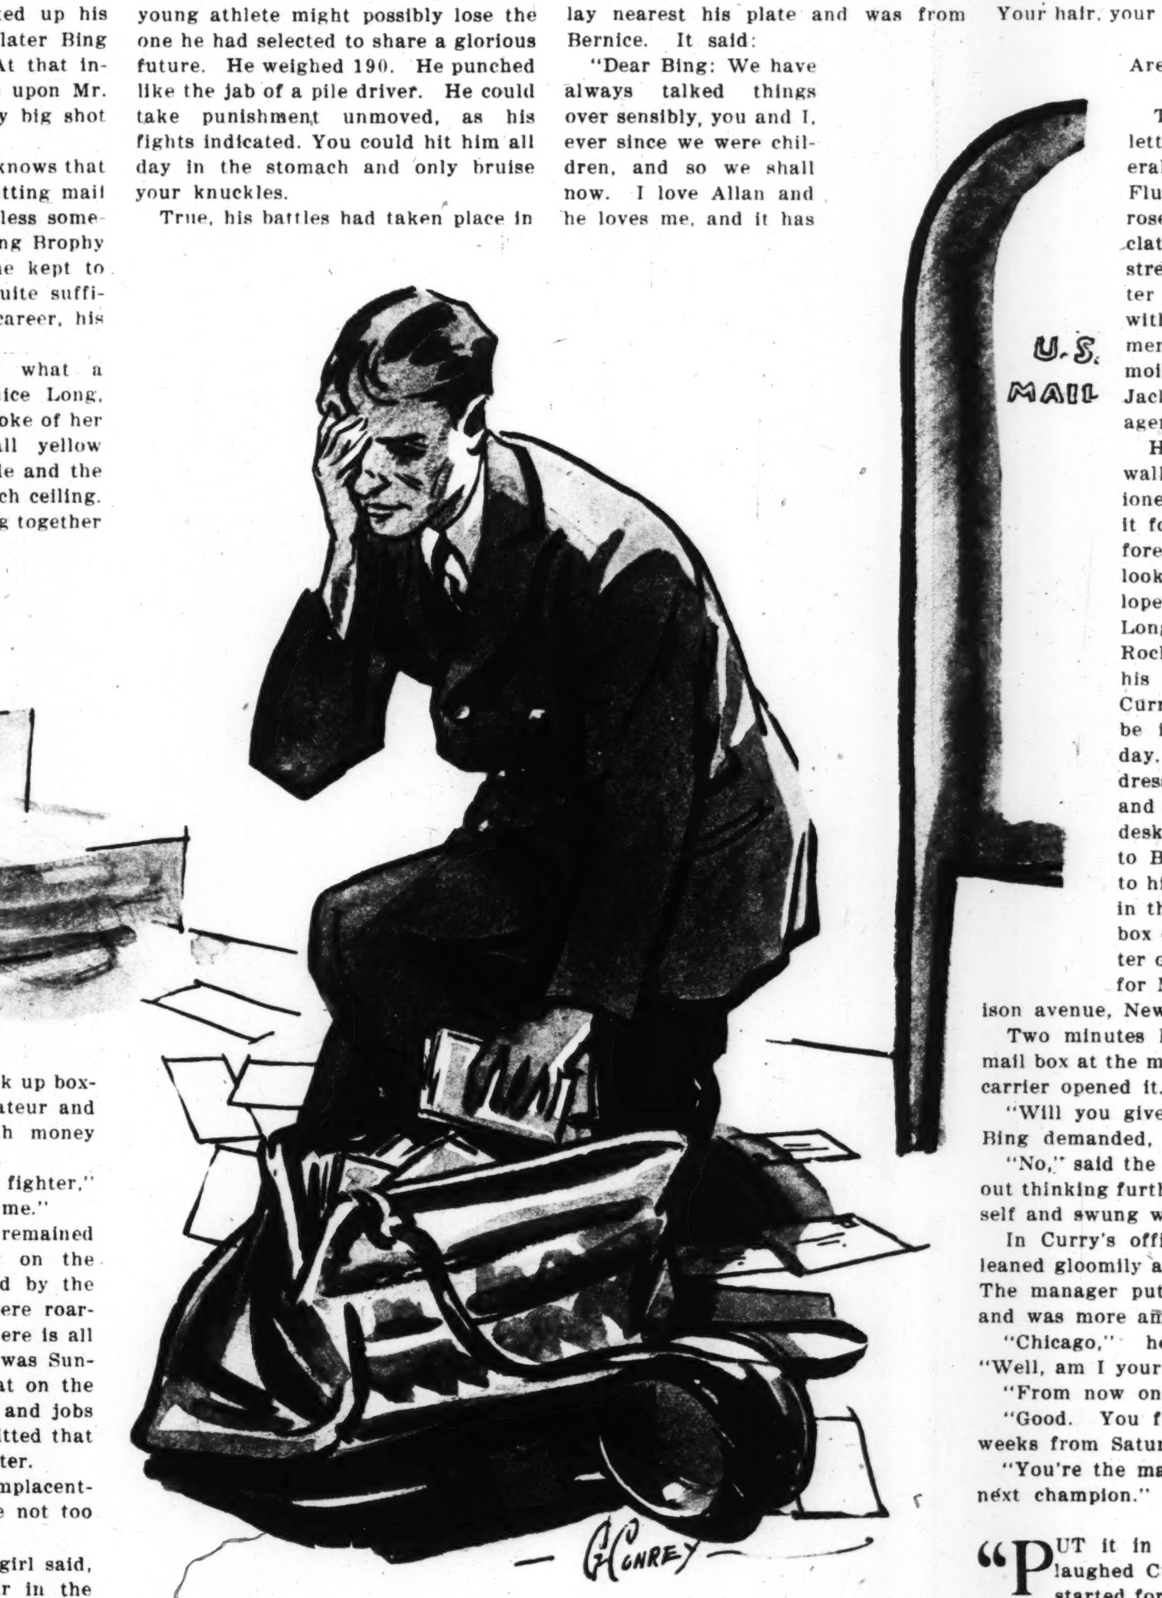
"Dear Mr. Curry: Last week, I fought Joe Rafferty in Buffalo and knocked him cold in the fourth. He weighed 180." "Dear Mr. Curry: I am the next champion of the world and you are going to be my manager. On the sixth I flattened Eddie Druggan in three rounds."

"Dear Mr. Curry: I weigh 192 and, with a little more experience, I am ready. The sooner you appoint yourself manager of Bing Brophy the sooner we sit down on the championship."

And so on. Bing signed these letters simply "The Champion."

He received no reply, but never had any feeling except serene confidence that some fine day Jack Curry would take a tumble to himself, and then the two of them would go crashing into the headlines together.

On a bright morning in the Brophy home, Bing sat at breakfast, aware that two stunning incidents had suddenly occurred. Either one of them would have made the day momentous for Bing. Eating his toast and bacon, he stared down at the morning's arrivals—a telegram in its yellow packet and a square envelope. The latter lay nearest his plate and was from Bernice. It said:



"Dear Bing: We have always talked things over sensibly, you and I, ever since we were children, and so we shall now. I love Allan and he loves me, and it has been so since the day we met at the football game. He has asked me to marry him, which makes me very happy, and thus, you see, a new life stretches before us. I like you, as I always liked you, and feel that you will understand and go on being my friend."

She signed it, "Sincerely yours," and Bing scowled at the two words.

"So that's the way of it," he said, and sipped his coffee. His first reaction was that Bernice, being young, was making a girlish mistake, like any youngster, and that Allan Conkey had played him a shabby trick. Melancholy at first, he rapidly became indignant. After all, she was just a girl, and what could she know of life, yet? "She's all wrong," Bing muttered. "Somebody ought to tell her."

Then his glance fell again upon the telegram, and he grunted contentedly, with the manner of one who always had been sure of it. The telegram said:

"Be in my office Thursday morning at 10. Curry."

That was all. And that was enough. It meant simply that the world's best young heavyweight and the world's ablest manager were coming together to form an unbeatable combination and ride to fame.

He picked up his letter and his telegram and ran up the stairs to his room. He wrote a brief note to Jack Curry:

"You bet your sweet life I'll be in your office Thursday morning. Bing Brophy."

Bing stared ahead a long time. He picked up a pen.

"Dear Bernice: I wish we could have a talk together, because this has knocked me for a loop. You're just about ruining my career, all on account of a reporter. I can make a lot of money, sure I can, but what for, if you're not going to be with me? If you will marry me, I will give up this dirty fight racket and have nothing to do with people like Jack Curry. Only last night I wrote a poem about you. Here it is, Bernice:

"ALL day long I sit and miss you,
And I think how nice it would be to kiss you;
I almost think I'll go insane
Unless I know you feel the same.
Sweetheart, if you only knew,
How much I love you;
Your hair, your eyes, your mouth, your nose,
Are sweeter than a violet or rose."

There was more to the letter. It spread over several anguished pages. Flushed with emotion, he rose from the little desk, clattered down to the street and mailed the letter and upon returning with a heavy step, he remembered that in his turmoil he had forgotten Jack Curry, the manageri gaint.

He trotted upstairs. He walked to the old-fashioned desk and stared at it for several seconds before he realized he was looking at a large envelope addressed to Bernice Long, Hillside road, New Rochelle. Beside it lay his brief note to Jack Curry, saying he would be in New York Thursday. He remembered addressing two envelopes and placing them on the desk—one to Curry, one to Bernice. It was clear to him that there now lay in the United States mail box on the corner the letter of a torn soul, headed for Mr. Jack Curry, Madison avenue, New York.

Two minutes later he reached the mail box at the moment when the mail carrier opened it.

"Will you give me back a letter?" Bing demanded, breathing hard.

"No," said the mail man, and, without thinking further, Bing braced himself and swung with his left.

In Curry's office, Mr. Brophy still leaned gloomily against the steel sash. The manager put back the telephone and was more amiable.

"Chicago," he said cheerfully. "Well, am I your manager?"

"From now on," Bing replied.

"Good. You fight in Chicago two weeks from Saturday."

"You're the manager and I am the next champion."

"PUT it in writing, will you?" laughed Curry. Presently Bing started for New Rochelle to inform his mother. Leaving the train, he purchased an ordinary post card and wrote on it with a pencil borrowed from the news-stand man:

"Dear Bernice: Maybe it is just as well you marry Allan. I have my career and a wife might only hold me back. Maybe fighters shouldn't marry. Good luck to both of you. Bing."

He started on a hunt for the nearest mail box and, upon nearing one, he perceived that the mail carrier was about to make his collection. There was something familiar about the man's back, and when he turned Bing saw that his lip was decorated with courtplaster and his eye was in mourning. Holding forth the post card, Bing slowly approached, and the mail man surveyed him coldly.

"I thought you were in jail," he said.

"No," replied Bing, "and I'm awful sorry about socking you the other day. I had to have that letter back or lose my whole future."

The mail man seemed without interest, and Bing started to leave.

"Here's a post card," he said, and the carrier took it gingerly.

"You sure you want this to go?" he asked.

"Oh, yes," said Bing. "That's the one I should have mailed the other day."

In this event it would be possible, if is believed, to finish the entire job in five years. Otherwise, its completion is liable to be delayed over a long period of time.

Opponents of the plan are loud in their denunciations. They say the whole idea is impractical and visionary. They point to difficulties in navigation under present conditions. Certainly the seasons of 1930 and 1931 were trying ones for the Federal barge line, which is owned and operated by the United States under the name of the Inland Waterways Corporation.

WHEN, and if, the 26 dams are completed, the face of this river country will be markedly changed. Great areas of low-lying land will be overflowed. The strongest point in favor of the canalization of the river is the fact that a similar plan has proved successful on the Ohio. The latter is canalized for 1000 miles of its length, with 52 locks and dams of a size similar to those which will be installed on the Mississippi. Barge operation on the Ohio has long since ceased to be a function of the Government and has been taken over by private operators. Many corporations operate their own barges to transport their own products. The Ohio project was completed over a long period of years and cost an estimated $125,000,000.

reflection on this circumstance he succeeded in making a long pole out of two short ones by forcing an end of one into an open end of the other, using two hands and one foot for the job. The next difficulty was how to make the pole serve him; he couldn't just set one end on the ground and scramble up. The chimpanzee solved this final problem by placing one of the frames under the bunch of cherries and leaning the pole against this support. The slanting pole remained in position long enough for him to climb it hastily and grab the fruit.

Because of his deft manipulation of the pole and his inventiveness in making one of sufficient length, the chimpanzee's performance was considered superior to the orang-utan's.

Many of the tests conducted at Suchum are based on work done at the anthropoid station in Teneriffe by Prof. Wolfgang Kohler of Berlin University, author of "The Mentality of Apes." In this book, Prof. Kohler told of experiments indicating that the higher apes are nearer to man in brain power than to other simians.

At any rate, the work is being pushed speedily forward on this first great dam and its accompanying locks. Nearly 500 men are employed and it is hoped that the dam will be completed by 1933.

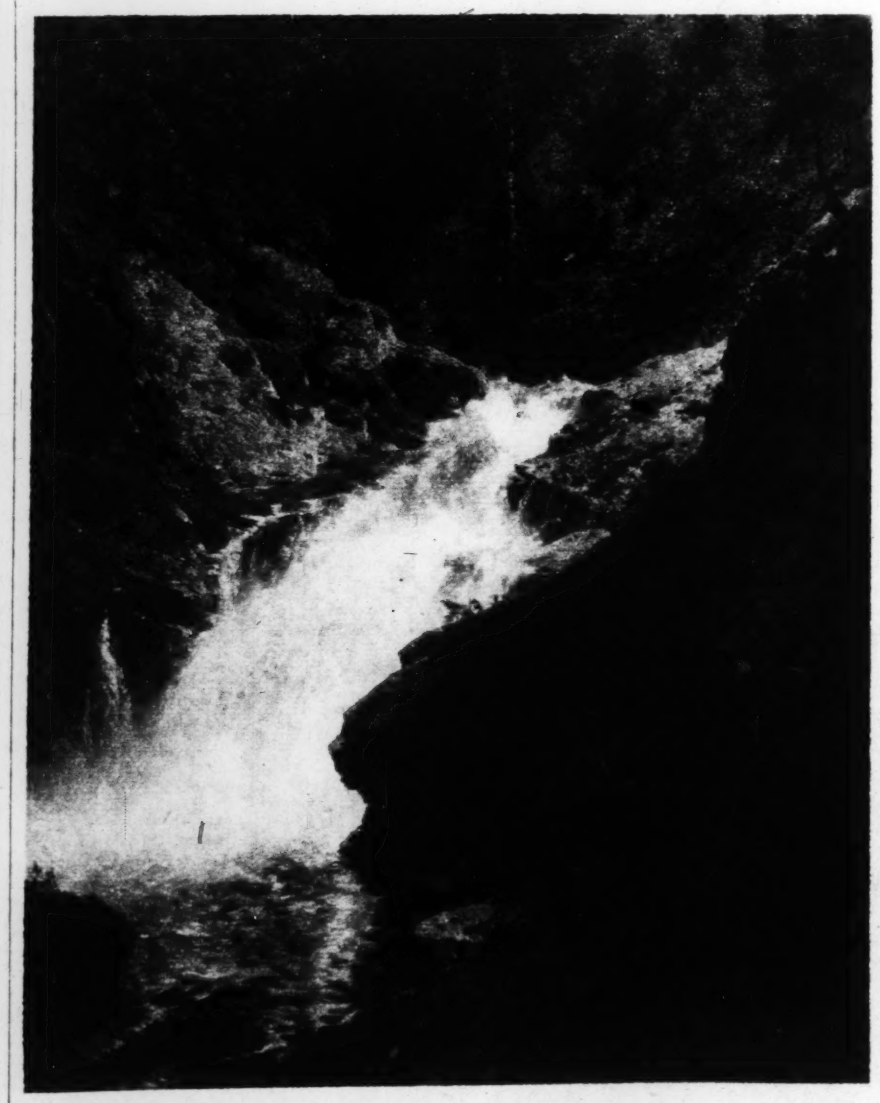
It is expected that by the time the tenants start moving in just about every apartment in the 12-story structure will be rented by former commuters and former subway riders who will welcome the opportunity to get decent, modern and inexpensive living quarters within walking distance of their places of employment.

AS A PLACE of residence this domain to be reclaimed for the "white collar city" was once a favored spot of the Old New York and is rich in historical associations. The old Dutch roamed over the territory, and the English who followed the Dutch built large estates along the East River. The names of noted families survive in those of the streets, and here were many famous buildings, long since vanished, among them the one in which Washington resided as the first President of the nation when the city was the capital of the newly formed United States.

Market and Henry streets, where the first unit of Knickerbocker Village is being constructed, is close to the spot where the Rutgers family lived in state in Colonial days. Most authorities agree the Rutgers estate was the scene of the dramatic death of one of the most revered of American patriots. Nathan Hale, young officer in the Continental Army, had gone into New York as a spy, disguised as a Dutch schoolmaster. After he had discovered the important military secrets he sought he was recognized and arrested. On September 22, 1776, he was hanged by the British, and it is believed that the execution took place in the Rutgers orchard.

WINONA FALLS

Twenty-Seventh of a Series of Art Objects Being Given a Special Showing at the St. Louis Art Museum.



THIS painting by Alexander Wyant is the twenty-seventh in a series of masterpieces which are being prominently displayed at the City Art Museum by Director Meyric Rogers. Each week one of the museum's rarest treasures is placed in the alcove to the left of the entrance. Each masterpiece will be reproduced in the Sunday Magazine of the Post-Dispatch, with an account by museum authorities of its history. The complete series will serve as an excellent guide to the most precious possession of the city's museum. The story of the painting follows:

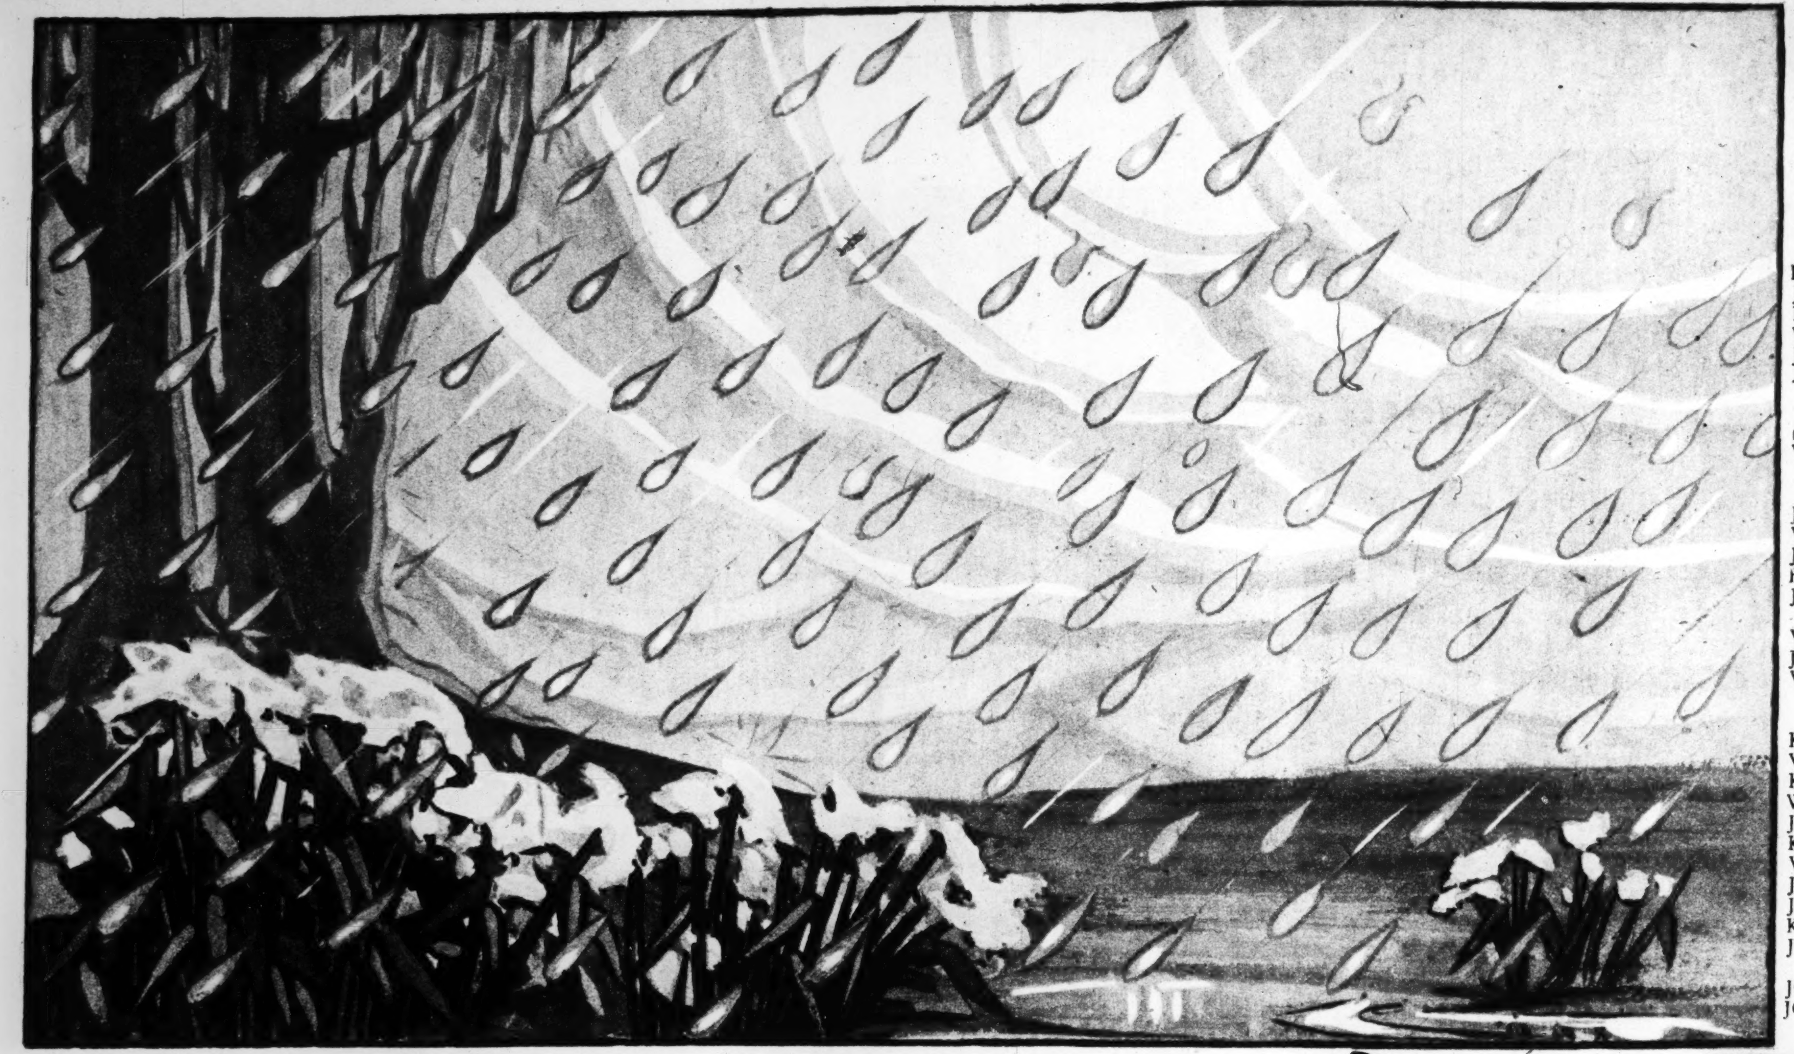
In common with that of most other painters, the earlier work of Alexander Wyant (1836-1892) presents many differences in style from his later productions. In Wyant's case, a physical disability forced him to paint his later pictures with the left hand, and this probably intensified the variation of manner produced by a developing personality. His earlier works, painted under the influence of Hans Gude and characterized by the careful drawing and finish of the Dusseldorf school, are thus in marked contrast to the more atmospheric and subjective landscapes of his maturity.

The painting, "Winona Falls," which has been selected for this week's exhibit, clearly falls within the earlier group of Wyant's work, and was doubtless executed before 1873. The meticulous attention to detail, the unvarying emphasis of form and the warm, brown underpainting are all evidences of the early origin of the picture and its connection with the Dusseldorf tradition.

The German painters and their American followers were essentially topographical draftsmen, vying with the camera in minuteness and accuracy of form. The accepted method of producing a painting was to develop the entire composition in transparent washes of warm color. Over this monochrome picture the cooler local colors were applied, care being exercised to preserve the original drawing. The evidences of this method in the present painting are clearly visible in the warm undertone, on which has been superimposed the cool greens of grass and leaves, the opaque white of foaming water and the highlights upon the stones. Wyant's rendition of all these details is marked by drawings of no small distinction, by accurate and careful observation, and by harmonious colors.

THE limitations of an art of this character, which emphasizes the literal aspects of nature, are sufficiently obvious. It does not permit the artist to express his emotioal reactions by any process of selection or emphasis, and hence must depend largely for its interest upon the skill of the painter in choosing and accurately depicting an attractive scene.

In spite of this shortcoming in his early work, which Wyant was later to transcend, he has produced in "Winona Falls" a painting of great beauty. With a fondness for nature which amounted almost to a passion, Wyant has chosen with unerring taste a scene of great natural beauty and has set himself down to patiently reproduce rather than to interpret. His version misses many of the facts of light and mass as we now understand them, but it achieves a verity of external form and a consistent harmony of tone which are sufficient to recreate in the spectator's mind something of the intense joy that the artist himself found in the scene.



TOY TALKIES

by Walter Quermann

SHOWERS IN APRIL

This is a game that can be played by any child. All that is needed are scissors, paste and some cardboard. The directions for playing "Toy Talkies" are given at the bottom of the game.

THE PLAYERS

ROBIN REDBREAST—He has to feed four hungry children
JOHNNIE QUACK—He is enjoying the rain.
KITTY KITTY—She doesn't like rain.
WILLIE WOOFER—He is having a good time.
JOE WIGGLER—A lazy little worm.
A GROUP OF WORMS—They were flooded out of their home.

THE PLAY BEGINS

(The group of worms enter.)

WORMS—This is misearble weather. We can't stay in the ground, we'd drown if we did. And we're not safe out here with Robin Redbreast around. Let's go up there on the hill and hide under some rocks. (Joe Wiggler enters.)

JOE WIGGLER—Hello, fellows.

WORMS—Hello, Joe.

JOE WIGGLER—Where are you going?

FIRST WORM—We're going to the hill and hide under the rocks.

JOE WIGGLER—That's too far away. You will have to come all the way back after it stops raining.

WORMS—But if we stay here Robin Redbreast will get us.

JOE WIGGLER—I'm not afraid of Robin Redbreast.

WORMS—You're foolish to stay here. Robin Redbreast has four hungry children to feed and he'll be out hunting worms. Better come along. (Worms leave stage and Kitty Kitty and Willie Woofer enter, talking.)

KITTY KITTY—I just hate this weather.

WILLIE WOOFER—Ha! Ha! I like it. It's lots of fun being under this umbrella.

KITTY KITTY—I never did like it. Oh! Here is Joe Wiggler.

WILLIE WOOFER—Hello, Joe. I suppose your home is flooded.

JOE WIGGLER—Yes, it is. I can't go home until it has stopped raining.

KITTY KITTY—If I were you I would get up the hill and hide under the rocks.

WILLIE WOOFER—Yes, Robin Redbreast will catch you if you stay here.

JOE WIGGLER—Those rocks are too far away. (Johnnie Quack enters.)

JOHNNIE QUACK—I surely like this weather.

KITTY KITTY—I suppose you and Willie Woofer are the only ones that do.

JOHNNIE QUACK—No, I just met Robin Redbreast. He's out hunting worms. He likes this weather, too.

JOE WIGGLER—Robin Redbreast? Where did you see him?

JOHNNIE QUACK—He was coming up the road. He will be here in a moment. Well, good-by. I'm going down to the pond. (He leaves stage.)

JOE WIGGLER—Goodness! Now what will I do?

WILLIE WOOFER—You should have gone on the hill.

JOE WIGGLER—Yes, but it's too late now. Robin Redbreast can run faster than I. Won't you hide me?

KITTY KITTY—We shouldn't help. You were lazy.

JOE WIGGLER—Please hide me. Next time I'll go up the hill. I promise!

JOE WOOFER—All right. We will hide you. (They move forward until they completely hide Joe Wiggler, and a moment later Robin Redbreast enters.)

ROBIN REDBREAST—I thought I saw a worm out here, but I guess I was mistaken.

WILLIE WOOFER—I suppose you are busy today?

ROBIN REDBREAST—I certainly am. My children are always hungry. Say, I think I see a worm over there. (He leaves stage and Joe Wiggler comes out of his hiding place.)

KITTY KITTY—I hope you learned a lesson.

JOE WIGGLER—I certainly have. You saved my life and I thank you. I'll never be lazy again.

DIRECTIONS: Cut out back-drop and pin it on a wall near the floor. Next, take two books and stand them at each end and about 5 inches in front of back-drop. Then take characters, cut them out, and paste them on thin cardboard, folding flap at bottom so they will lean back a little. Attach a piece of thread about 15 inches long. Place the characters back of the book on the right-hand side of the stage and draw them on the stage with thread as they are needed. The operator may talk for the characters, changing his or her voice as different characters go on the stage, or each character's part may be spoken by a different child. A flashlight can be used as a spotlight.

Next week: The Rescue of Frankie Frog.

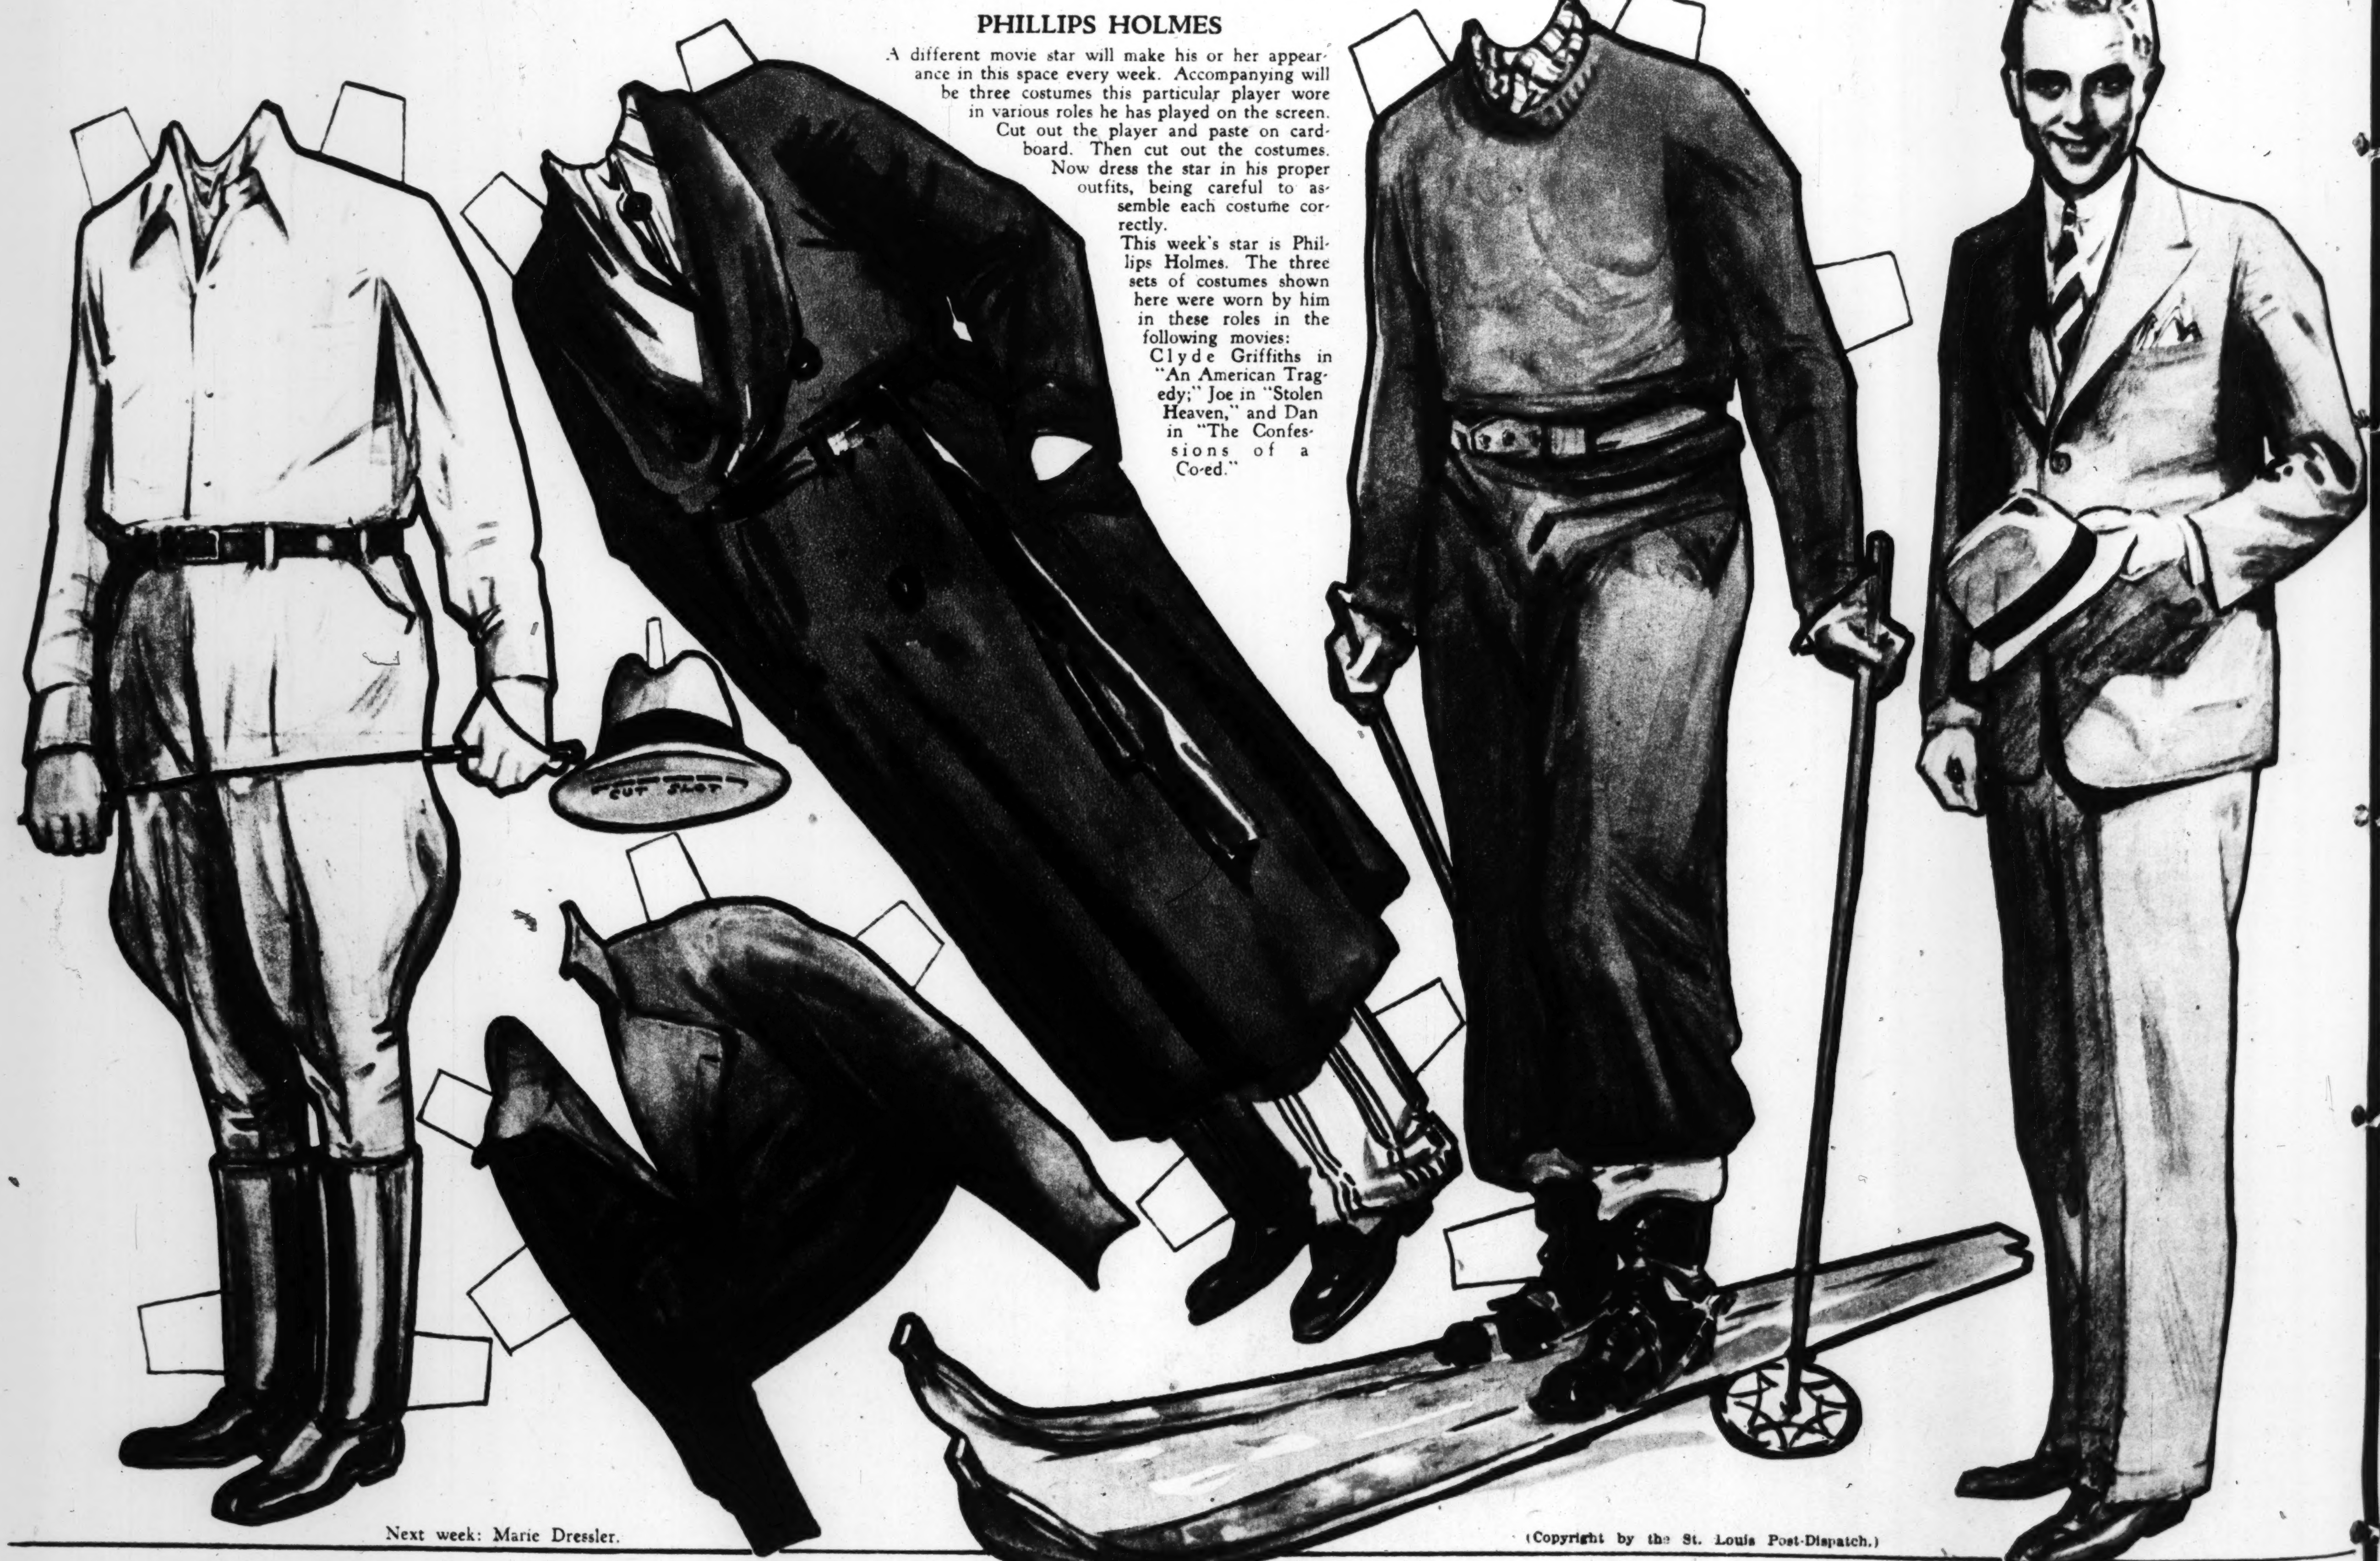
MOVIE DRESSOGRAPHS

PHILLIPS HOLMES

A different movie star will make his or her appearance in this space every week. Accompanying will be three costumes this particular player wore in various roles he has played on the screen. Cut out the player and paste on cardboard. Then cut out the costumes. Now dress the star in his proper outfits, being careful to assemble each costume correctly.

This week's star is Phillips Holmes. The three sets of costumes shown here were worn by him in these roles in the following movies: Clyde Griffiths in "An American Tragedy;" Joe in "Stolen Heaven," and Dan in "The Confessions of a Co-ed."



Next week: Marie Dressler.

OF COURSE, I'D LOVE TO GO TO THE BIG DANCE WITH YOU IN YOUR NEW ROADSTER, TED, BUT I'VE PROMISED ROD I'D GO TO THE MOVIES WITH HIM AND I CAN'T VERY WELL BREAK THE DATE
I HEARD EVERY WORD YOU SAID, DORA AND I THINK IT WAS VERY SWEET OF YOU TO, TURN DOWN A BIG DATE BECAUSE OF ME
AFTER ALL, ROD, A DATE'S A DATE, EVEN IF ITS WITH YOU!
OF COURSE, IF YOU WANTED TO BREAK THE DATE WITH ME, I COULD GO WITH TED WITH A CLEAR CONSCIENCE
SORRY, MY LOVE, BUT WHEN IT COMES TO YOU I'M THE MOST SELFISH GUY IN THE WHOLE WIDE WORLD = TONIGHT YOU STEP OUT WITH LITTLE RODNEY!
OF COURSE, I DO, SILLY! BUT YOU'VE GOT TO EARN YOUR DATE = I WANT TO CHANGE THIS FURNITURE AROUND A LITTLE...
SHOW ME WHERE TO MOVE IT TO THAT'S ALL! JUST SHOW ME WHERE IT GOES!
I GUESS IT LOOKS BETTER WHERE IT ORIGINALLY WAS.. PUT IT BACK WILL YOU, ROD?
A PLEASURE!
I CAN'T DECIDE WHETHER I LIKE IT BEST HERE, OR OVER BY THE DOOR OR BETWEEN THE WINDOWS
JUST LET ME GET IT ROLLING, AND YOU CAN MAKE UP YOUR MIND AS WE GO SPINNING AROUND THE ROOM!
BE CAREFUL NOT TO HIT YOUR HEAD WHEN YOU COME UP STAIRS, ROD!
DON'T WORRY = I WON'T BE ABLE TO STRAIGHTEN UP THAT FAR
AND WHEN YOU GET THOSE BOXES PILED UP THERE'S FOUR TRUNKS DOWN HERE TO GO UP ONLY FOUR? THROW AWAY YOUR WHIP!
THERE! WE'RE ALL FINISHED AND IT ONLY TOOK FOUR HOURS! WHAT TIME SHALL WE GO TO THE MOVIES?
ANY TIME ABOUT NEXT THURSDAY = I'M A WRECK! I'M GOING HOME AND HIT THE HAY, TOOT SWEET!
I'M AWFULLY SORRY YOU'RE SO TIRED, ROD = CAN YOU GET HOME ALL RIGHT?
Z Z Z Z Z Z Z
IT'S NO USE = I CAN'T GO ANY FURTHER = LAMP POST, COME HERE!
Z Z Z Z Z Z Z
TOWING TONIC
I'M GLAD YOU BROKE THE DATE WITH ROD, DORA, SO YOU COULD GO TO THE DANCE WITH ME
BUT I DIDN'T BREAK IT, TED = ROD DID = HE WAS TIRED
